Another Egyptian Theatre Opens on Coast

Warner's Pasadena House Designed From Ruins of Luxor and Karnak

THE West Coast now boasts of one more motion picture palace with the recent opening of Warner's Egyptian theatre, Pasadena, Cal. This marks the first theatre enterprise in the eastern part of Pasadena.

Designed in detail from the ruins of Luxor and Karnak, Warner's Colorado Street Egyptian theatre is outstanding for its beauty, luxury and charming restfulness that pervades throughout the house. Architecturally, Warner's is a decided break from the Egyptian designs that have been used in the last few years and yet the details are all true to type.

Proscenium columns, the great Pharaoh heads surmounting the pylons, the columns in the inner lobby and other details are all taken from the ruins of Luxor and Karnak, the temples of Dendera and Philae.

Instead of the usual side location, the pipe organ has been given a central position over the proscenium arch. This has proved to be of distinct value, the tones of the organ being thrown directly into the center of the house, with a great and effective improvement in effect, it is claimed. At each side of the proscenium, in the space usually devoted to the organ grills, is a balcony which may be used by singers and speakers when the stage is occupied.

In a large section of the theatre are luxurious, overstuffed divans and the remainder of the seats are roomy, comfortable orchestra chairs. Each chair affords a free and unobstructed view of the stage. They have been so arranged that no seat is far enough to the side to cause distortion in the motion picture.

Prominent among the many features incorporated in the theatre is the upstairs nursery, where mothers with babies may view the performance through great plate glass windows which open toward the stage and give the occupants of the nursery as good a view of the screen as any seat in the house. At the other side is the men's lounge, similarly situated, with plate glass windows.

Special study was given to the ventilating system and as a result a splendid result has been attained.

Equipment installed in the projection room is of the very latest type.

A spacious stage is provided where the same attention has been given to the best and latest equipment. Commodious dressing rooms are provided for the actors.

Special hangings, stage curtains and other paraphernalia are installed. Special counterweight systems and electric curtain controls which may be operated from the projection booth by the operator are included in the equipment. Imported materials made in France have been used to arrive at the proper effects.

Arrangements have been made by Mr. Warner for a large, well-lighted auto parking space adjacent to his theatre. This is at the disposal of patrons without charge.

Plans for Warner's Egyptian theater were drawn by the architectural department of J. H. Woodworth and Son, under the direction of Kenneth A. Gordon, architect. Construction work was done by the same firm, which also negotiated the lease and the financing.

Ambassador Amusement Co. Opens First of Neighborhood Circuit

THE Ritz, Cleveland, Ohio, the first of a circuit of high class neighborhood motion picture theatres to be built and operated by the Ambassador Amusement Company, recently opened its doors to an invited audience of over 1200 people.

The Ambassador Amusement Company comprises Henry H. Lustig, president and general manager; Sandor Klinger, vice president; Oscar Stotter, secretary, and Morris Berkowitz, treasurer.

The Ritz follows the popular policy of erecting the best type of motion picture theatres in the residence districts. It is located at 978 East 123d Street, a busy business section in a thickly populated residence section. The house has 1200 seats, and was erected at a cost of $150,000, by Al Janowitz, a local architect.

The exterior is an attractive combination of brick and hollow tile. The ticket booth, conspicuously placed at the entrance of the lobby, is very decorative and relieves the simplicity of the elevation. All 1200 seats in the auditorium are on one floor, with a gradual slope to the concrete floor so that the screen may be seen equally well at all distances. The theatre is equipped with a ten foot stage so that specialty numbers and vaudeville acts can be presented upon occasion.

The interior decorations are particularly pleasing. Blue, ivory and old gold have been tastefully combined to give an air of unusual refinement to the theatre. One of the outstanding decorative features of the auditorium is a frieze of carved rails, back of which colored lights have been placed. When the house is in semi-darkness these lights harmonize with the side bracket fixtures and produce a novel effect. The walls above this railing are soft pastel shades in panels, each decorated with a dainty French design. A soft wistaria shade predominates in these panels, this shade is duplicated in the heavy velour stage curtain, and the torchere lamps which flank the stage on either side.

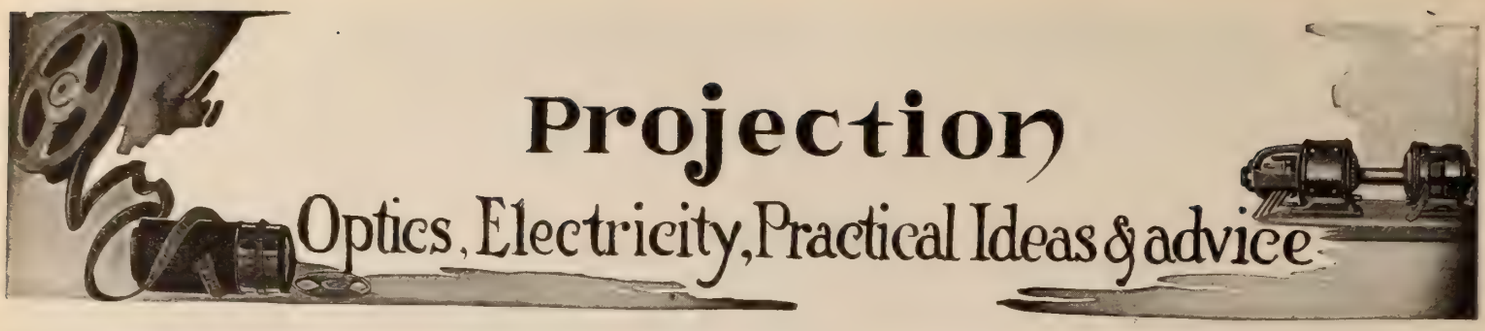
A deep foyer extends all across the house. This is carpeted by heavy ply velour. Leading from this foyer are completely equipped rest and smoke rooms for both ladies and gentlemen.

The Ambassador Theatre Company put as much thought to their projection room as they did did to the auditorium. The projection room is large and airy, with conveniences of all kinds for the projectionist. Two motiograph de luxe projection machines have been installed by E. E. Oliver. Oliver also supplied the diamond bead screen. Peerless reflector arc lamps are also installed.

The lighting is both direct and indirect. Heating and ventilating systems are of the latest and most approved type. As would be consistent with this type house, communicating telephones, vacuum cleaning system and maid service are supplied. No comfort either for the patron or for those operating the theatre in any capacity has been omitted.

It is the policy of the Ritz to offer three changes of program each week, with daily matinees. Prices range from 10c for children, to 25c top. Features, comedies, news reels and a novelty will comprise a program. It is the intention of the management to run a serial Saturday afternoon.

The Ambassador Amusement Company, which has just completed this newest of Cleveland's neighborhood houses, has also another house, to be known as the Ambassador, under construction. It is located on Superior Avenue, at East 124th Street. This theatre will be as large as the Ritz, and will spare nothing for the convenience of its patrons. It is the intention of the Ambassador Amusement Company to build, acquire, manage and own a circuit of the highest class picture houses in Cleveland and its suburbs. The Waldorf, formerly operated by Messrs. Lustig and Berkowitz, will, in the future, be operated by this organization.



Definite and Real

Exhibitors who keep a careful eye on the box office find that photographic quality on the screen has an influence with patrons that is definite and real.

That's why it's worth while to make sure the picture is printed on the film that carries quality from studio to screen—Eastman Film.

Eastman Film is identified by the words "Eastman" and "Kodak" in black letters in the film margin.

Illuminated Borders

SOME little while ago a gentleman by the name of Martin thrust himself into the limelight of the projection field by exhibiting a device for providing illuminated borders around motion picture screens. It was known as the Martin Illuminated Border and was claimed to possess the property of making the picture stand more clearly, besides providing some illuminated ornamentation to an area which, hitherto, had been caused to maintain an inky blackness. A sort of picture frame, as it were.

After a number of demonstrations, both public and private, it seemed to quietly fade from view and little has been heard of it since.

In a recent article on screens in general, casual mention was made of it in columns whereupon T. Edgar Beard, of Coalville, Utah, who prides himself on his "keep-up-to-dateness," eagerly snapped it up and hastily penned the following note.

Gentlemen:

In reading the current issue of Motion Picture News (April 4th) I notice that you mention the "Martin Illuminated Border" possessed a greater contrast effect than a plain black border with the result that it caused the picture to stand out much more clearly.

If this illuminated border will bring out a picture more boldly, why should it die down? Why not let us hear more of it?

I am after anything that will result in better presentation of pictures. Can you recommend this device to me? Will it, as it is claimed, cause the picture to stand out in greater relief?

If it will do this, then kindly put me in touch with firm. I only want the best. However, if it is just an idea that won't stand the test I am not interested. I have now more junk than I know what to do with and do not care to increase this accumulation.

I have always found, however, that anything you or the Nicholas Power Co. recommended has always proven satisfactory and has always worked as claimed.

I'll take your word on anything.

T. EDGAR BEARD.

Refuse the Challenge

No, Friend Beard, we refuse to be inveigled into an argument about the claims for illuminated borders. This for a very good reason. At the time of the recent agitation over this device the writer was requested by the Motion Picture Producers' and Exhibitors' Association to make a study of the problem with a view toward evaluating, in some absolute terms the effects claimed for the device.

After some private demonstrations at which Mr. Martin officiated, it was set out to find just wherein lay its merits and to what extent. Some simple stencils were cut along with lantern slides having borders of a simple regular design in which the ratio of light to dark could be varied in a progressive manner.

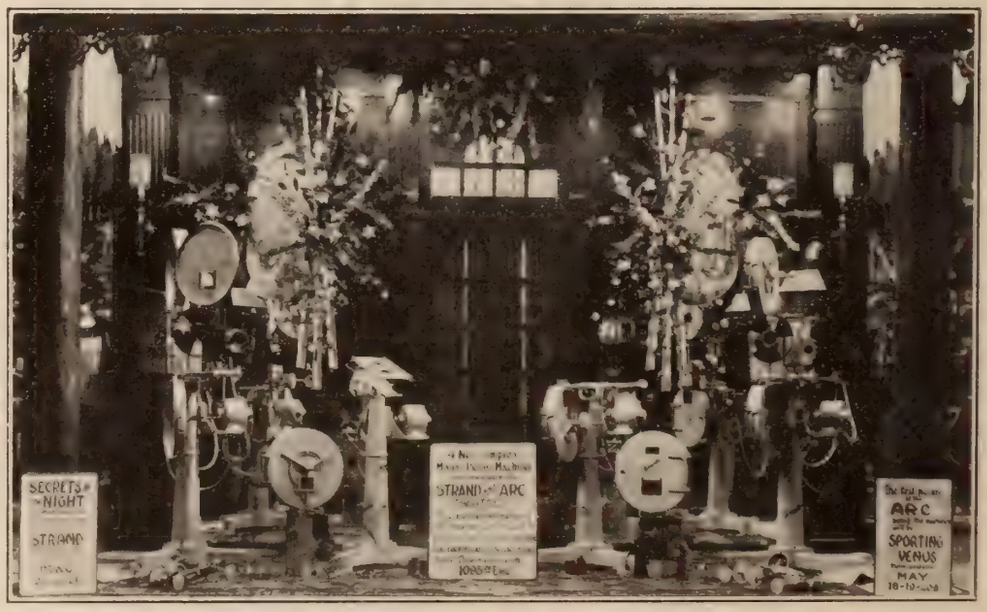
Some data was obtained in this manner but the thing which stumped us was this. What should we evaluate? Where shou'd we start? What was it we wished to measure, and then how to do it?

It was obviously a psychological effect. Could it be measured? And so it went until in the natural course of events the whole thing died down.

Coming Back

Now we are informed by Mr. Joy of the Motion Picture Producers' and Exhibitors' Association that Mr. Martin, after a sojourn in Toronto, spent in perfecting this device, is soon coming back to New York, stronger than ever and the entire problem will come up for reconsideration.

It is claimed that considerab'e improvements and important changes have been made, and Mr. Martin has serious intentions of putting this thing over. Another demonstration will be staged in a local theatre in the near future.



Whether or not the effects which this device possesses will ever be evaluated is, after all, of no great consequence. The principal point is that it does seem to have some peculiar psychological effect in making the picture stand more clearly and also appears to give the illusion of depth.

Probab'y two of the greatest disadvantages which this thing possesses are, that it is somewhat complicated and requires expert attention and the border tends to distract attention from the picture itself because of its elaborateness.

It is likely, however, that the mechanical objections have now been removed by the improvements mentioned before. As for its commercial properties, "Time will tell."

Stand Pat

That, in brief, is the set-up concerning the illuminated border, and you can see that no matter how anxious you are to try it out, you will have to hold your impatience and wait for this device to become available to the trade—if it ever does. In the meantime, the writer will stand pat on his original recommendation for screen borders. This makes use of a fairly wide border of soft gray around the picture area to ease the excessive contrast between the illuminated picture and its surroundings supplemented by a dead black stripe, four or five inches wide, around the picture area itself. This serves to outline the picture, giving it a sharp cut-off, which makes for distinctness, without, at the same time running the risk of causing the patrons annoyance and eyestrain.

Arthur Jackson, owner of the Strand and Ark theatres, Crawfordsville, Ind. conceived the novel idea of interesting his prospective clientele in the mechanics of placing the picture on the screen. Mr. Jackson therefore secured the cooperation of the leading department store and placed in its largest window the display shown above, consisting of four new simplex projectors that were to be installed in his two theatres. This display attracted a great deal of attention and increased business very materially on the night they were first used. The projectors were sold and installed by the Exhibitors Supply Co. of Ind.

American Projection Society Holds Successful Meeting at N. Power Plant

THE American Projection Society of New York held its 50th lecture meeting at the factory of the Nicholas Power Company, 90 Gold street, at midnight on May 28th, and enjoyed one of the most interesting programs ever presented by the Society. About 150 members and friends of the Society from all parts of the metropolitan district were present and passed a very enjoyable and instructive night.

Arthur Shulze gave a successful demonstration of the method of determining screen illumination intensities by the use of the Photometer; F. H. Richardson gave an analysis of the high intensity crator and showed how economies could be effected by proper attention to the lamp. Herbert Griffin, General Sales Manager of Nicholas Power Company and Lester Bowen delivered talks on low intensity ares and gave a practical demonstration of their new Powerlite Low Intensity Reflector Lamp.

Prior to these talks the visitors were shown about 20 odd models of the earliest projectors including Power's numbers one to five and the Viascope, Selig's "Polyscope," Lubin's "Cinegraph" and early Edison models.

Adjourning to the large projection room George Edwards opened the meeting by introducing S. R. Burns, Pres. of the Nicholas Power Co., who briefly and cordially welcomed the guests. On behalf of the Nicholas Power Co, the members of the Society were presented with a number of the early models previously mentioned. George Edwards, on behalf of the American Projection Society, expressed his sincere appreciation of the gift and said these early projectors would be kept on permanent exhibition in the clubrooms of the American Projection Society.

Following the lectures, refreshments were served and this part of the program was in charge of Jesse Hopkins and Tony De Mott. Among others present were Cecil Wood, P. McDermott, F. Nealy, Bart Green, of the Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity; O. Kafka, president of the A. P. S.; Joe Bascon, president of Local 306; M. Smith, J. Engle, M. O'Brien, B. Norton, J. Gervin, J. Harding, J. Buchardt, A. E. Meyer, Nicholas Power Co.; and P. A. McGuire, Adv. Mgr. Nicholas Power Co.

Stanley Theatre to Be One of America's Finest

Construction of one of America's most beautiful play houses is rapidly nearing completion after six months' intensive work on the new Stanley Theatre, on the Boardwalk at Kentucky Avenue, Atlantic City, N. J., for the Stanley Company of America.

Architects, builders and other experts in the building industry visiting Atlantic City, as well as residents of the resort have watched as the building program converted what was worn down property at one of the most traversed points of the Boardwalk, into a handsome edifice of stone, brick and terra cotta.

A record for time in the building and completion of such a structure is being made. Less than seven full months will have elapsed between the time ground was broken for the Stanley Theatre until it is formally opened to the public with entertainment entirely new in the realm of the theatre for Atlantic City.

When the theatre is opened it is expected to be a revelation for beauty and appointment. The cost of building and decorations alone is in excess of $1,000,000, while its furnishings and equipment will be the last word in such, with the rugs for lobbies and rest rooms coming from far off China.

Work on the new structure has maintained its schedule despite several setbacks in the form of labor difficulties. Sub-contractors responsible for interior construction are now at work, with the result that despite predictions to the contrary, the theatre will be opened on or about July 1st.

N. W. Huston Is Building Theatre at Columbus, Kas.

N. W. Huston of Columbus, Kansas, has recently let contract for a $30,000 theatre, to be built on site of the one recently destroyed by fire. The building is to be a modern up-to-date show house. According to the contract this house will be opened Sept. 1st. Mr. Huston is also owner of the Columbia Theatre, at Columbus, Kans.

Dynamite Wrecks House in Charleston

The rear of the Capitol Theatre in Charleston, W. Va., was blown away by dynamite during the week. The explosion was of terrific violence and shook buildings within a wide radius. Charles Middleburg, owner of the house, has offered a reward of $2,500 for the arrest and conviction of those responsible for the blast.

Tonawanda House to Have 8 Stores and Cost $300,000

Announcement is made that the Main-Go Realty Company soon will ask bids for the erection of a large motion picture theatre and office building in the block bounded by Webster, Tremont, Main and Goundry Streets, North Tonawanda, N. Y. It is planned to have eight stores on the ground floor front in addition to the large theatre lobby. The cost of the house, it is reported, will be $300,000.

Has it made good in other houses?

When you consider booking certain pictures, or buying certain equipment, what counts most?

It's this question, isn't it?—

Has it made good in other houses?

That's a mighty sensible question—and we would like to have you apply it to Typhoon Cooling.

Never mind what you think Typhoons will do—or what they won't do. The only question should be:

Has it made good in other houses?

And here's your answer:

Loew's tried out Typhoons in one house several years ago. Since then they have installed Typhoons in one theatre after another.

The Saenger Amusement Company has all its 38 houses Typhoon-cooled—and Southern Theatre Enterprises over 50 houses.

And then there are any number of exhibitors operating two or three or more theatres—with Typhoons cooling every one.

Now, you know that these experienced exhibitors keep buying Typhoons for just one reason: Because they make good.

It is facts like these that prove Typhoon Cooling will make good in your house—that it is worth a good deal more than it costs.

Lockport, N. Y., Famous House Being Remodeled

The new Palace theatre, recently acquired by Paramount in Lockport, N. Y., is being rushed to completion and is expected to be opened in a few weeks. Three beautiful mural paintings, one over the proscenium, and the others in arches at each side of the theatre, are now being painted by the Lusk studios of Rochester. Work of installing a Wurlitzer organ, manufactured at the company's plant in Wurlitzer, N. Y., near Buffalo, has begun.

The mushroom system of ventilation and heating has been installed. Under this system two plans will be available, the use of the city steam and the theatre's own heating plant as desired.

The concrete now is being laid for the first floor and this is expected to be completed this week, so that the placing of the 1,800 seats can begin next week

New Method Used for Projecting Still Pictures

A revolutionary method of still picture projection which may eventually find its way into the movies, it is claimed, was shown to delegates to the twenty-second annual meeting of the American Urological Association at Hotel Chase, St. Louis, Mo., May 22.

A sheet of specially prepared material resembling ground glass from a distance, but really a clear rubber fabric based on georgette silk and strung short taut as a drumhead was placed before the spectators.

The projecting machine instead of occupying its usual place was set up a few feet behind the screen. The windows were open and lights in the room on.

Lantern slides, post cards, pencil script, ordinary calling cards and other opaque objects up to three inches in thickness were shown with exceptional clarity on the screen.

New Theatres and Closings for Kansas City

The following new theatres, changes in management and closings in the Kansas City territory have been announced: Royal theatre, Emporia, Kas., purchased by Harry McClure from Capitol Enterprises under the agreement that Capitol Enterprises will do the booking for both the Royal and Strand theatres, also at Emporia and owned by Mr. McClure; P. & D. Theatre Company of St. Joseph, Mo., started construction of a new theatre at Nineteenth and Howard streets, St. Joseph, the cost to be $25,000; Garden theatre, Marion, Kas., purchased by S. A. Mudd; new $25,000 theatre to be built by Peskay and Dubinsky at St. Joseph, Mo.; Midway theatre, Fornfelt, Mo., closed; Pastime theatre, Mendon, Mo., closed, according to M. Minor, manager.

Vice-Pres. K.-M. M. P. T. O. to Build Theatre

Jay Means, owner of the Murray theatre, Kansas City, and vice-president of the M. P. T. O. Kansas-Missouri, is planning the erection of a new theatre at Thirty-ninth street and Prospect avenue. The new house, which will seat 1,000 and maintain a straight picture policy at popular prices, will be just around the corner from the Ellsworth theatre. The theatre is expected to be ready for opening next fall.

Exhibitors' Box-office Reports

Mile-a-Minute Mary—
Somewhat of a novelty. Drew crowds. (West.)
Chu-Chin-Chow—
This version of stage play, though at times wearisome from an overplay of the spectacular, drew remarkable business. (Middle West.)
A foreign production, somewhat draggy, with Betty Blythe. Drew fair business. (West.)
Business very poor on second week of the run. (Middle West.)

WARNER BROS.

My Wife and I—
A splendid production showing Irene Rich to advantage. (East.)
Rather entertaining photoplay. Business: Fair. (Middle West.)
A good domestic drama and was well received here. (Middle West.)
A good story, a good cast and good mounting kept them coming in to see this one. (West.)
Recompense—
Not so good on this one. The picture drags. Did a fair week. (Middle West.)
Hailed as a generally entertaining production with Monte Blue undertaking some splendid character work. Business good. (Middle West.)
The Lost Lady—
Business not so good. Irene Rich is good but not strong enough here yet to draw against any handicap. (Middle West.)

FIRST NATIONAL

Quo Vadis—
Played to a crowded house all week. (Middle West.)
Idle Tongues—
Went across in nice shape. (Middle West.)
Declasse—
Good production and drew well during run. (Middle West.)
The Lady—
Opened to capacity but fell off for the rest of the week. Patrons like Norma in more modern and carefree roles. (East.)

The Orpheum theatre, Chicago, used this double column ad on "Introduce Me" (Assoc. Exhibs.)

Newspaper ad on "Confessions of a Queen" (Metro-Goldwyn) at the Alhambra, Milwaukee.

Soul-Fire—
Barthelmess' best picture in a long time—excellent tale well told. Business—Fair. (Middle West.)
Chickie—
Favorably received by the press. Attracting very excellent business. (Middle West.)
This played to busines way above average. Some comment was made upon the fact that the picture varies from the story and some expressed disappointment in the film. But the crowds came. It would play to big business anywhere where the newspaper story had run. (Middle West.)
Second week. Although business did not equal that of first week, attendance was far above average. (Middle West.)
My Son—
A fair picture, but many thought Nazimova too young for the part of the mother. (West.)
I Want My Man—
Doris Kenyon and Milton Sills contribute sterling performances in this production. Story, cast and mounting are good. (West.)
They like this one. Stars do well and production is good. Box office reports good. (West.)
His Supreme Moment—
Romance of the most lavish type, drew almost capacity business throughout week. (Middle West.)
A picture with plenty of fire. Took well. (East.)
Fine movie. Well liked. (Middle West.)
Here is a picture that was well liked from the popular comment, but which did not stack up big on the box office report. It must be a matter of season—the weather was no special handicap. No other explanation of why it didn't average big, that can be suggested. (Middle West.)
Has good title and should go well anywhere. Can't complain. (Middle West.)
Should go over in any locality. It's a great picture. (Middle West.)
One-Way Street—
Did a fair business. Star does good work. (West.)

STATE RIGHTS

Soiled—
Just an ordinary program offering with acting and mounting fair. Business fair. (East.)
The Crackerjack—
A rollicking comedy. Business pretty good. (Middle West.)
The Night Ship—
A well acted and produced drama that went well in this town. (West.)
The Mad Dancer—
Appearance of Ann Pennington in this film helped but box office receipts were poor. (West.)
The Midnight Express—
A regulation thriller that pleased the audiences. Box office reports good. (West.)

PARAMOUNT

Eve's Secret—
Proved pleasing attraction. Nice business. (Middle West.)
The Way of a Girl—
Star not big enough to draw and the picture is not a drawing card. Business not so good on this week run. (Middle West.)
The Spaniard—
Drew about the usual average attendance for the week. (Middle West.)
The Night Club—
"Forty Winks" had paved the way for this feature and Griffith was very well liked for his work in this feature. But the plot of the picture did not make a hit. Rather weak story. They all like Griffith. (Middle West.)
Griffith's work in this one helped put it over. Fine business for the week. (West.)
The Spaniard—
Role fits the star to perfection. Women raved over it. (West.)
The Shock Punch—
Richard Dix gives them some thrilling moments in this, his latest. (Middle West.)
The Little French Girl—
Cast attracted good business for the week. (Middle West.)
The Air Mail—
Story was a disappointment, business was poor. (West.)
The Dressmaker from Paris—
A novelty film that did an excellent business for us. Patrons all praised it. (West.)
Welcome Home—
Tommy Meighan's latest production drew them in all week. He's popular with our patrons. (Middle West.)
The Thundering Herd—
Real screen entertainment. Excellently acted and realistically mounted. Attracted S. R. O., despite fine out-door weather. (East.)
Code of the West—
A film that presents genuine amusement. (East.)
Are Parents People?—
Here is a human and splendid domestic comedy. Business good. (Middle West.)
The Crowded Hour—
Attendance about up to the usual average. (Middle West.)
Audiences liked it very much and had good crowds throughout run. (Middle West.)
Regarded as an excellent vehicle for Bebe Daniels, but lacking in truth and coherance as to plot. Battlefield scenes are important part of production. (Middle West.)
Old Home Week—
Drew well. Everyone enjoyed it. (Middle West.)
Popular entertainment de luxe. High grade comedy. Business Pretty good. (Middle West.)
The Charmer—
Interesting story—Business fair. (Middle West.)
An excellent vehicle for Pola Negri. Drew average business. (Middle West.)
Any Woman—
Ordinary picture—Fair business. (Middle West.)
Adventure—
Sure lots of adventure crowded into this one. Did nicely with it. (Middle West.)

F. B. O.

White Fang—
Another dog picture. They seem to like them here. (West.)
Alias Mary Flinn—
A cook picture with a somewhat new star who does well as the female bandit. (West.)
Lilies of the Street—
The sort of picture that will attract certain patronage, but will not please the average picture fan. Business: fair. (Middle West.)
Catches the fancy of the ordinary crowd. (East.)

The Strand theatre in New Orleans used this double-column ad on "Inez from Hollywood" (First Nat'l).

Newspaper Opinions on New Pictures

"If Marriage Fails"—F. B. O. Colony, New York

Morning Telegraph: "C. Gardner Sullivan can always be depended on to give us a story. 'If Marriage Fails' holds attention from beginning to end and there is considerable suspense. It develops smoothly and rapidly, punctuated by bits of business, numerous elaborate settings, many changes of costume and some very good acting and shrewd titling."

Daily Mirror: "'If Marriage Fails,' is presented in an adroit, an unusually delicate fashion. It is well acted. It has cabaret scenes of enticing novelty and it shows Jacqueline Logan in her best screen role in many a day."

American: "'If Marriage Fails' is a real afternoon's entertainment. John Ince's direction is admirable. Jacqueline Logan plays the mercurial crystal gazer . . . It's a lovable part . . . makes the most of every minute and seems to enjoy doing it."

Times: "'If Marriage Fails' the new film at the Colony this week, contains surprise after surprise, with the result that one is thoroughly interested in this narrative. The way in which the director achieves contrasts in scenic effects is decidedly skillful. Jacqueline Logan is seen in the role of Nadia, and she acquits herself in fine fashion."

"Kiss Me Again"—Warners, Panthean and Senate, Chicago

Tribune: "'Kiss Me Again' is a real comedy. That super director, Ernst Lubitsch, made it, and directors not so super who yearn to turn out mirth provokers should gaze upon it long and thoughtfully and make notes on their cuffs. Mr. Lubitsch has insisted that his trio—in the triangle situation of wife who thinks her husband neglects her—be Real and he has made them do the sort of things that real people would naturally do under the circumstances laid out in the story.

"The scenes are laid in Paris and the atmosphere is decidedly foreign. The players are excellently cast. So, be informed that 'Kiss Me Again' is excellent entertainment from every point of view."

"The Voice of the Nightingale"—Educational, Colonial, Dayton, O.

Herald: "There is a picture in town that all those who fret about foolish comedy fillers and all those others who see in the cinema an opportunity for artistic endeavors should view. It is 'The Voice of The Nightingale' and it is at the Colonial.

"'The Voice of The Nightingale' is done in lovely colors and it tells a romantic little tale of why the nightingale sings only at night. How in appreciation of a little girl's kindness in allowing the nightingale its freedom after it had fallen into a trap it bestowed its beautiful voice upon her to use during all her waking hours. It is only short in length, but its merit surpasses many six, seven and eight reel films."

B. Lichtig, First National's exchange manager in Havana.

"The Boomerang" — Schulberg, Clinton Square, Albany

Times Union: "One of the biggest laugh vehicles the screen has seen in years."

News: "It is founded on one of the cleverest comedies of the modern stage and it keeps close enough to the original to inherit much of its cleverness."

"The Boomerang"—Sculberg, Boston, Boston

Advertiser: "The celluloid version comes through with colors flaunting in the breeze. 'The Boomerang' makes an entertaining picture."

"Drusilla With a Million"—F. B. O. Capitol, N. Y.

Mirror: "Mary Carr deports herself splendidly in a role reminiscent of 'Over the Hill,' only she has an opportunity to wear nice clothes, which she does. Priscilla Bonner is a comparative newcomer whom you will love. She's sweet and youthful and sheds real tears. 'Drusilla With a Million' is od entertainment."

Times: "Sequences show flashes of inspiration. Mrs. Carr delivers a sane, restrained and beautiful portrayal of Drusilla. Priscilla Bonner is excellent as the young mother. Her portrayal of the sorrow of a young mother is most convincing."

World: "Mrs. Carr acts with fine poise and grace."

Herald-Tribune: "'Drusilla With a Million" deserves a place in the sun . . . They (the audience) applauded the titles and situations, laughed at the comedy . . . and waited in breathless silence for the climaxes."

Evening World: "'Drusilla With a Million' at the Capitol, one of the best of its kind of pictures seen on Broadway in a long time. Here is a feature with a tremendous human appeal. Once more, in short, it is amply proved here that the most appealing film plays are those built around the family hearth. Movie fans who fell in love with 'Over the Hill' a few years ago will do the same with 'Drusilla With a Million,' for they will see the same Mary Carr."

Telegram: "Drusilla With a Million' at the Capitol is saturated with babies. At one point there is a shot of one tiny youngster splashing another with milk in a scene that is one of the funniest of its kind ever perpetrated. It drew a brigade of gleeful machine gun snorts from a delightful audience. The most trenchant part comes in a livid court room scene that kept the audience alternately perspiring and clapping by turns."

"Just A Woman"—First National, Strand, N. Y.

American: "We could almost hear the women in the audience purring contentedly, which should mean popularity and prosperity for 'Just A Woman.' This film is most satisfying. It's a mixture of a lot of sure-fire ingredients, but there is a dash of something that gives it a distinctive flavor. Claire Windsor is a lovely blond little wife who never over-acts."

Mirror: "'Just A Woman' is romantic entertainment, done with many new twists. Claire Windsor is not only beautiful, but she emotes in splendid fashion, while Conway Tearle carries on as the hero with the suppressed fire that makes the hearts go patter-pit. The cast is corking. You are bound to enjoy 'Just A Woman.' There's something to please everybody in it.

News: "Conway Tearle, Claire Windsor and Percy Marmont give delightful performances. We never liked Conway so much as we did as Robert Holton. "Just A Woman" is above the average triangle drama."

Journal: "The picture is good entertainment. Claire Windsor is very pretty and acts well."

Telegram: "As natural as life. Gives Conway Tearle at last a chance to do some sincere and appealing acting. Miss Windsor is unaffected and moving. Dorothy Revere is a fetching siren."

Evening World: "New twists are given to the plot with the result that the feature turns out better than most. Conway Tearle, Claire Windsor, Percy Marmont and Dorothy Revere—there is a nice balance in this cast and their work is decidedly convincing. Little Dorothy Brock, the best boy on the screen gives one of her appealing bits.

"Parisian Nights" F. B. O. Capitol, New York

American: "'Parisian Nights' full of thrills."

Evening World: "Rene Adoree . . . walks off with all the honors. But, outside of Miss Adoree's stellar work, there are other things in 'Parisian Nights' which make it worth while . . . the story . . . ingeniously done. The best of these was an exhibition of sculpture at which Parisian critics were saying that the statues were not at all life-like and then the statues, which were posed, get up and walk out of the room. 'Parisian Nights' is just loaded with dyed-in-the-wool melodrama . . . it is very stirring . . ."

Evening Graphic: "Miss Adoree is a clever little actress. She is at all times natural and convincing and her work in the emotional scenes is especially worthy of commendation."

Evening Journal: "The art critics shook their heads sadly, looked at the statues draped around the sculptress's apartment, and sighed that the lady would never be successful, because they didn't look like human figures. The antomy, they decided, was bad.

"Elaine Hammerstein smiled, ordered the maid to turn off the lights and the critics gasped. In the darkened room what they had thought were statues got off the pedestals and walked into the next room. That's one of the clever touches in "Parisian Nights," at the Capitol, and there are others. It's hectic melodrama, dealing with the rival Apache bands, the Panthers and the Wolves . . . You'll like the picture if for no other reason than that there is continuous action."

SPEAKING

DRUSILL

The New York Tribune
On Sunday, May 31st, said—

.... it
ing if the picture ma
for its producers as

NOTE

At the time of the writing of this advertisement — "ABIE'S IRISH ROSE" was playing its 1309th performance, smashing the world's record for continuous performances

IT is stated in the trade that "ABIE'S IRISH ROSE" has taken in (in road shows and the New York run) nearly $3,000,000 a record never before equalled in theatrical history, so when the New York Herald Tribune says that "DRUSILLA WITH A MILLION" might make as much money for its producers as "ABIE'S IRISH ROSE" has for its producers, it could not pay this great picture a greater compliment.

OF

will not be surpris-
kes as much money
"Abie" is making

A POINT—

that the New York Herald Tribune entirely overlooked is this.

In forecasting the financial possibilities on "DRUSILLA WITH A MILLION" the newspaper commented on its possibilities for the producers and didn't mention the tremendous possibilities for the 15,000 theatres in the U. S. A. and the other thousands of theatres in Canada and throughout the rest of the world, so when these are reckoned it is safe to say that "DRUSILLA WITH A MILLION" will bring more money and profits to exhibitors than "ABIE'S IRISH ROSE" ever dreamed of bringing.

It is impossible in this space to begin to publish the simply amazing boosts, compliments and praise heaped on this ASSOCIATED ARTS production, from the pen of Elizabeth Cooper.

Never before have audiences at The Capitol, New York, the world's largest and finest theatre, applauded a picture as they applauded "DRUSILLA". It is the talk of the town and soon will be the talk of the entire Nation.

A CAMPAIGN OF ADVERTISING IN THE SATURDAY EVENING POST WITH A FULL PAGE SMASH NOW IN PREPARATION TO BE PUBLISHED WHEN THE PICTURE IS PLAYING, THUS SELLING THE PICTURE TO MILLIONS OF PEOPLE.

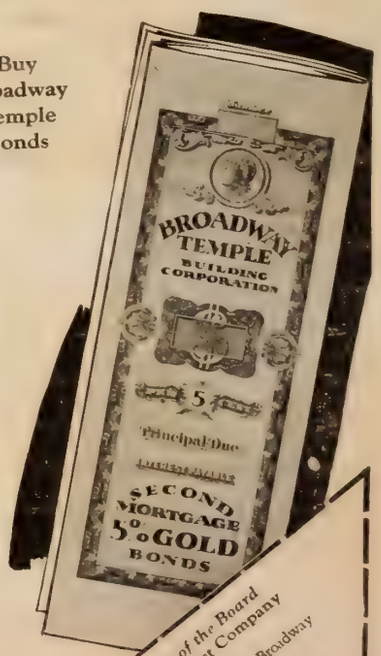
AND LET GOD COME TO BROADWAY!

A 5% Investment in Your Fellow Man's Salvation Backed by Big Business and Banking Executives!

By FRANK IRVING FLETCHER

BROADWAY TEMPLE is to be a combination of Church and Skyscraper, religion and revenue, Salvation and 5%—and the 5% is based on ethical Christian grounds—Christ did not come to the earth hat-in-hand—he did not supplicate Charity but offered it—you cannot cite a single instance where He asked for something for nothing—always He spoke in terms of reward—He approved of the man who makes money in The Parable of the Ten Talents and He said the laborer is worthy of his hire—and by that token, the investor is entitled to his income—instead of asking for donations the Broadway Temple is issuing 2nd Mortgage 5% Bonds—it is going to be a self-supporting dividend-paying Church—that's what captured the imagination and support of the great business men behind it—they liked the robust conception of a Church that is not a supplicant but a producer!—not only preaching that Christianity is consistent with Business but demonstrating it by its own example. To be located on the highest block on Broadway—from 173rd to 174th Streets, and covering 26,000 square feet. It will have a tower 24 stories high. When each room is lighted and the whole is topped by a revolving flaming cross 34 feet high, it will recall religion impressively to the six million people who can see it.

It Will Contain:



A Church auditorium seating 2,200, together with Sunday school rooms, gymnasium, swimming pool, social hall and every modern convenience for religious and community work.

An Apartment Hotel in the tower over the Church containing 644 rooms, public offices, cafeteria, dining room and everything necessary for a first-class apartment hotel and the whole overlooking the Hudson River or Long Island Sound.

Apartments For Housekeeping in the two wings which will accommodate 500 people.

Stores on the Broadway front which will be very desirable and therefore bring a solid income.

10 More Facts

1. The 10 facts which we listed previously prove that a record that has never been touched is Metro-Goldwyn's for the passing year, 1924-1925. Because of its ability to turn out a great money-making picture week after week—a 100 per-cent product—Metro-Goldwyn has become in one year The Talk of the Industry.

2. Now for the coming season 1925-1926 Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer with its already famous Quality Fifty-Two has established again its superiority in the field by assuring exhibitors a line-up that is being talked about wherever showmen meet.

3. Few times, if ever before, in the history of the industry were more big star names offered to exhibitors than in Metro-Goldwyn's Quality 52. Among the big names: LILLIAN GISH, LON CHANEY, MARION DAVIES, JOHN GILBERT, BUSTER KEATON, RAMON NOVARRO, MAE MURRAY, NORMA SHEARER, JACKIE COOGAN, ELEANOR BOARDMAN, AILEEN PRINGLE, PAULINE STARKE, CONWAY TEARLE, CLAIRE WINDSOR, CONRAD NAGEL, MAE BUSCH, LEW CODY, CARMEL MYERS, ZASU PITTS, RENEE ADOREE, WILLIAM HAINES, BERT ROACH, GERTRUDE OLMSTED and many others.

4. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer directors have more box-office successes to their credit than any other group of directors ever gathered together heretofore. The directors of The Quality Fifty-Two are the following: REX INGRAM, FRED NIBLO, VICTOR SEASTROM, MARSHALL NEILAN, ERICH VON STROHEIM, TOD BROWNING, HOBART HENLEY, FRANK BORZAGE, KING VIDOR, RUPERT HUGHES, MONTA BELL, ROBERT Z. LEONARD, W. CHRISTY CABANNE, JACK CONWAY, ALF GOULDING, JOSEF VON STERNBERG, EDMUND GOULDING, BENJAMIN CHRISTIANSON, WILLIAM WELLMAN, AL RABOCH and more.

5. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has one of the most important companies of permanent players in the world at its Culver City Studios. It does not stop with its presentation of Today's Big Names. Keen showmen who know the audience appeal of personality and talent are grooming the box-office stars of Tomorrow. Watch for these players: SALLY O'NEILL, HARRIET HAMMOND, KATHLEEN KEY, GEORGE K. ARTHUR, HELENA D'ALGY, PAULETTE DUVAL and many more.

6. These celebrated novels are a few of the books among The Quality Fifty-Two: Blasco Ibanez' "MARĒ NOSTRUM," "THE TEMPTRESS," "THE TORRENT;" Rex Beach's "THE BARRIER," and "THE AUCTION BLOCK;" Sabatini's "BARDELYS THE MAGNIFICENT;" Peter B. Kyne's "NEVER THE TWAIN SHALL MEET;" Selma Lagerlof's world-prize novel "THE TOWER OF LIES;" Rupert Hughes' "MONEY TALKS!" and "HOW DARE YOU!" Elinor Glyn's "THE REASON WHY;" and many others.

7. The greatest of stage plays are among The Quality Fifty-Two. A few of them: "THE MERRY WIDOW," theatrical history's money-marvel; "SALLY IRENE AND MARY," Edward Dowling's outstanding hit; "BUDDIES," George Hobart's two-year Broadway success; "THE CIRCLE," 2 years in New York. By Somerset Maugham, author of "Rain;" "LIGHTS OF OLD NEW YORK," from Lawrence Eyre's famous "Merry Wives of Gotham." Lawrence Stallings, author of "What Price Glory?" contributes "THE BIG PARADE;" Samuel Shipman, famous Broadway playwright is included with "A SLAVE OF FASHION;" "SUN UP," by Lula Vollmer: "AN EXCHANGE OF WIVES," by Cosmo Hamilton. And a lot more!

8. Metro-Goldwyn means showmanship. Erté, world-dictator of Fashions has been brought from Paris to America. His breath-taking gowns in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer pictures will soon be the sensation of all audiences. Plus Technicolor Sequences in many of The Quality Fifty-Two. These are just samples of Big Ideas apart from production, stars, title that make for additional box-office qualities in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer attractions.

9. THE TRANSCONTINENTAL TRACKLESS TRAIN now en route from Coast to Coast advertising Metro-Goldwyn's Quality Fifty-Two and proving to be without question the greatest single exploitation stunt in the history of motion pictures is just one of the intensive promotion ideas planned by showman brains in the 1925-26 Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer campaign for box-office supremacy. Add the unparalleled publicity and advertising of Cosmopolitan Productions.

10. The achievements of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's studio organization, headed by Louis B. Mayer and his assistants Irving Thalberg and Harry Rapf, are a matter of current record. This triumvirate of showmen genius has proved again in The Quality Fifty-Two its knowledge of what exhibitors want to get the crowds. These are matters of business record and are corroborated by the fact that more than ever Metro-Goldwyn is The Talk of the Industry.

VOL. XXXI NEW YORK, JUNE 20, 1925 No. 25

Cooling the Theatre

A NEW box-office factor has just come to the fore which, it is already clear, is going to rank along with theatre location and the attraction on the screen.

We refer to refrigeration—the installation and operation of a scientific cooling plant.

Summer heat has always been the theatre's chief competitor; but it now appears that a serious liability may not only be wiped out but turned into a solid asset.

The day is here, by all accounts, when to the regular theatre investment of land and building will be added that of a refrigeration plant. It will be a necessity.

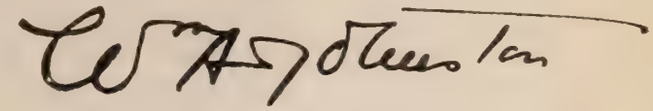
Last week, while Broadway sweltered in the terrific heat wave, one theatre, the Rivoli, was well filled day in and out. The manager informs us that, while ten thousand admissions would be normal for the week's run, the admissions actually exceeded twenty-seven thousand.

The report stands out in bold relief against reports, this week, of theatre closings here and there and the threatened wholesale closing of most of the theatres in one metropolis.

Evidently the matter is of supreme importance. If people can actually be brought to a theatre to get cool there is created a brand new enterprise. Again it brings about competition that cannot well be met by any other offering.

We are bringing the matter forcefully to the exhibitor's attention. It ought to be generally and immediately investigated.



The installation cost of the right kind of a plant is considerable. It varies, of course, with the size of a house. The minimum cost to-day is around thirty-five thousand dollars. A motion picture engineer predicts that this will be lowered. Against this equipment figure, however, is to be placed the opportunity of three months a year paying business against shut down or loss.

The efficiency of the theatre cooling system has just recently been brought about. We are told by one large concern that laboratory experiments have been going on for some time and at very large expense. To-day it is claimed that air in a theatre anywhere can be made as healthful and comfortable as the best of country air.

The laboratory experts state that three main factors are involved: air motion, humidity and temperature. These can be brought together at what is called a comfort point. Air can be made cool or warm as the seasons demand. The refrigerating apparatus controls humidity as well as temperature.

The point of the matter is this: the cooling system should be the best procurable. It must be scientifically right. It is a matter of public health and therefore too serious a thing to be bungled. In the entire matter the Technical Department of MOTION PICTURE NEWS is at the service of any exhibitor.

Truth in Advertising

THE National Vigilance Committee of the Advertising Clubs of the World recently issued a circular, entitled "Old Pictures for New." It says in part:

"Back in motion picture history, not so many years later than the nickelodeon era, the scenario departments of producing companies, both in the United States and in foreign countries, supplemented their current material by preparing screen versions of classic literature. Hardly a famous author, from Homer to Kipling, failed to have some part of his writings filmed and screened. For the time at which they were produced many of these were good pictures. A very few are good pictures today. But when these are advertised today the following facts should be kept in mind by the distributor and the exhibitor:

"A tremendous change takes place with each year in the quality of cinema photography, make-up, costuming, and the thousand details comprising modern production. Continuities have also moved with the times. The public knows this. Accordingly, a number of producers who have in their film vaults excellent pictures made but a few years ago have chosen to have the entire stories re-scenarized, re-enacted and re-photographed in order to maintain the high standard of their programs and those of their exhibitor patrons. Others, whose pictures have comprised actions too colossal for such re-production, have advertised the re-issue of such subjects as and for pictures which had been successfully exhibited at a previous date and were now being revived because of their great popularity.

"Once more the trend of producers is toward classic or well-known authors and famous stories. Think of a big story and there is every likelihood that some producer has filmed it within the year or is engaged in filming it. Today such productions are lavishly made. A number of them have been filmed abroad in order to obtain actual and not plastic and papier mache settings. In order that the exhibitor may do the business with these pictures which will enable him to realize a fair profit, his bookings of these releases is aided and backed up by enormous campaigns of national advertising so that an advance demand is created for his showing.

"Nearly every time a big current production of such a story is announced some film of a similar subject matter or title is exhumed from the vaults or from the kerosene circuit or the non-theatrical field and offered to exhibitors apparently for the purpose of cashing in upon the reputation of the new picture.

"There is no legal reason why an exhibitor may not book and screen these film-vault relics if he wishes to do so. But if he exhibits them without disclosing affirmatively that they are re-issue pictures, he is throwing away the good will of his patrons. One way to keep a theatre out of the list of those houses which are forever changing hands is to advertise every booking truthfully and completely. Even the small merchants in our towns and villages are learning what older advertisers have found from sometimes bitter experience—that advertising the whole truth pays a dollars and cents dividend. Sound principles of advertising are not alone applicable to goods, wares and merchandise. They apply to the sale of amusement just as much as they do to dry goods, hardware or furniture.

"The theatre owner who demonstrates to his patrons that they can always depend upon what they read in his film advertising, will attract and hold the regular, repeat patronage which is the backbone of picture house prosperity."

Egypt and Denmark as a Market

Both Egypt and Denmark are proving excellent markets for American films, according to reports recently received by the Department of Commerce from its foreign agents. The former has more than 40 theatres and a large number of outdoor theatres, and American pictures probably represent 55 per cent of the total shown.

American pictures have captured over 70 per cent of the Danish market. There are about 350 motion picture theatres in Denmark.

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

Hercules McIntyre and his wife, Eleanor, arrive in New York on their first visit to America from Australia, where he is general manager of the Universal interests.

Albert Warner of the Warner Brothers, who sailed this week for Europe, where he will look over the possibility of theatre construction.

Sam Spring, First National's secretary, and E. Bruce Johnson, manager of the Foreign Sales department, arrive in Los Angeles.

OFF THE TEE

THE Film Tournament—an annual event—was staged Tuesday at Briarcliff Lodge—and the boys drove off the tee for good distances until the rain appeared. Of course only a few know the Hagen and Bobby Jones trick of driving a low ball when the showers are doing their stuff. So the majority found it rough work in driving out of the rough. As far as we are able to discover—the course record was not broken. Nor were there any casualties suffered in driving from the first tee. It stands on a ledge far above the fairway, but none of the golfers teed up too close to the edge. Every entry qualified—no matter how high his score. And there were prizes enough to satisfy the most hopeless duffer.

The Lodge is located in a highly picturesque spot. Westchester's rolling hills roll up on every side. You can Kodak as you go—up there. And when some of the scores mounted high some of the boys wished they had brought their kodaks instead of their mashies. However, it was all in good fun—and everyone reported a good time. It seemed like Sunday around the film offices—and the Astor Grill looked very empty. The golfers had taken their pencils and appetites to Briarcliff.

WELCOMED HOME

TOM MIX was given a rousing welcome home when he stepped off the train at Los Angeles the other day. The greeting was a fitting close to the European and domestic tour of the popular star. Cowboys and cowgirls on horseback, Indian chiefs in full regalia, Shriners, Mexican plainsmen, a cowboy band, an American Legion band, stage coaches and a long line of autos filled with other players and picture executives and city officials paid homage to Tom and Tony.

Despite a heavy rain the star rode his horse through thronged streets to the city hall from the station—a distance of more than a mile. When he arrived at the mayor's official residence, His Honor, the Mayor—George Cryer—was presented with one of Tom's famous ten-gallon hats. This was the first time that the mayor has ever officially welcomed a picture star in behalf of the city of Los Angeles.

Wanda Wiley, Century Comedy star, stages a thrilling traffic dodging demonstration in New York's most congested streets as publicity for the Free Milk Fund Bouts, a big charity benefit, during her visit to the metropolis.

And here is our own Editor William A. Johnston, listening to an exposition by Master Jackie Coogan of Metro-Goldwyn on how he would run a trade paper.

Alyce Mills, one of the fairest of the new screen faces, who will be seen soon in a leading role in "The Keeper of the Bees" (F. B. O.).

Tom Mix, Fox star, does a few tricks at the annual horse show, Washington, D. C., to the amusement of Secretary of Agriculture Jardine.

Maud holds up the taking of a scene for "Ben Hur" (Metro-Goldwyn) while May McAvoy prays and Director Fred Niblo presumably cusses. (Lucky it wasn't talking films!)

TITLING THE WESTERNS

IT doesn't invite much ingenuity to title a western. To keep in harmony with the shots of the open country and to indicate that the picture is there with the action a title is used that will smack them in the eye. The favorite titles are those which employ the words "Ridin' " and "Trail."

There is no beating around the bush in naming a western. One doesn't stop and ponder what the story means as is usually the case with the problem or domestic dramas. One knows when he sees So and So in a picture which carries "Ridin' " or "Trail" in the title that it offers no pretensions of being anything else than a western.

The list is a long one using these words. The "Ridin' " family includes, "Ridin' Mad," "Ridin' West," "The Ridin' Kid From Powder River," "Ridin' Pretty," "Ridin' Thunder," "Ridin' Casey," "The Riding Fool," "Riding Double," and "Wild Ridin'," The "Trail" group includes "The Vagabond Trail," "Crossed Trails," "The Back Trail," "The Sawdust Trail," "False Trails," "The Sunset Trail," "The Star Dust Trail," "Smoking Trails," "The End of the Trail," "The Trail of Vengeance," "The Trail Rider," "The Rainbow Trail," "The Cactus Trail," "The Texas Trail," and "The Covered Trail."

One could travel indefinitely on this tack. Such favorite words as Range and Roarin' have been used and are still being used in countless pictures. They all mean about the same. They try to suggest the West of scenery and action. And they get away with it. But there is too much following the well known groove.

SOME FINE SLEUTHING

IN ALL probability the police of the large cities have learned something in how to conduct their Missing Persons Bureaus in the manner in which a misisng girl was located in Seattle. The police department in the western city was bewildered by hundreds of false clues concerning the disappearance of May Alder, a seventeen-year-old school girl—clues that reached as far as Montana.

It took Mrs. Charles Hakansson, a friend and neighbor of the Alders, to show the police some new ideas in sleuthing. She had a hunch that the girl might be in a picture theatre, inasmuch as she was very fond of the movies. The fair sleuth doesn't know anything about scientific detective methods—she was not a disciple of Sherlock Holmes. But she did know May—and her intuition told her that May might be attending a moving picture show. Mrs. Hakansson visited a score of theatres and asked the management to switch on the lights while she walked the aisles scanning every face. Sure enough she was rewarded in discovering the girl in the Rialto theatre.

The usual hunches which the police develop lead them to follow up clues at the picture studios or to hunt for the man in the case. And the screens of the theatres are often used to flash photographs of the missing girls. But this is the first time that the lights have been switched on to locate the runaways.

OFF FOR EUROPE

AMONG the many film men who sailed for Europe Tuesday on the Aquitania was F. Wynne-Jones, American representative of the Ufa interests in Berlin, who left for a ten-day conference with officials of the company relative to product for the coming year.

In honor of the occasion, a luncheon was given at the Astor on Monday to the press, as a mark of appreciation for the courtesies shown the company and its pictures, "The Last Laugh" and "Seigfried." In a brief and informal talk, Wynne-Jones announced the closing of arrangements for the showing of the latter picture in Shubert houses, touched on production plans for the coming year and outlined the policies of his company with regard to the American market.

They had a roll-call of directors one afternoon at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios, and here are the men who turned out. From left to right they are: Victor Seastrom, Mauritz Stiller, Ernest Williamson, Monta Bell, Rupert Hughes, Josef von Sternberg, Eric von Stroheim (in rear), Jack Conway, Tod Browning, Hobart Henley, King Vidor, Fred Niblo, William Wellman, Reginald Barker, Marcel de Sano, Al Rabach, William Christy Cabanne and Benjamin Christiansen.

Since its rebuilding and additions, the Cosmopolitan studios in New York City are as fine as you will find anywhere. They are now under the general management of M. S. Epstin.

OPEN HOUSE TO SHRINERS

HOLLYWOOD kept open house for the visiting Shriners who held their convention in Los Angeles last week. Every studio did itself proud in welcoming the guests who had come from every section of the United States. They registered great enthusiasm in watching the stars step through their paces and the various sets evoked much interest. At the Culver City studios they caught close-ups of Elinor Glyn and Jack Conway who was directing the authors latest script, "The Only Thing." These studios entered two large and spectacular floats in the Shriners' parade And many film companies were represented with highly decorated floats.

BIG MITCH' SETTLES DOWN

TIRED of roaming around and calling home wherever he happened to hang his hat, Michell Lewis has arrived at Journey's End. He has purchased a homesite in Beverly Hills, California (that Edenesque spot, so highly favored by the picture stars). The Lewis lot adjoins the home of Charlie Chaplin and is directly opposite the homesite of Mary Pickford's mother.

MACFADDEN BRANCHES OUT

BERNARR MACFADDEN, not content with being a publisher of a dozen magazines and a newspaper, has branched out as a film producer. His newest enterprise is the True Story Film Company, Inc., and in honor of the occasion the Astor Distributing Corporation gave a luncheon at the Astor recently.

Dorothy Devore, Warner Brothers' star, supervises the first public outing of the new family of Cameo, the dog comedian. If they all turn out little Cameos, there will be a merry time around the kennels.

A COLOR SCHEME

THEY are going in for brightly colored lipsticks out in Hollywood—lipsticks that vary from the favorite shade of red to green and purple hues. Though many are claiming credit for originating the new shades the real origin must be credited to the studios. Under the w. k. Kleigs and Cooper-Hewitts weird effects are produced.

As most of us know the natural color of the lips takes on a purple hue under the studio glare. So what would be more effective than dobbing the lips with a purple lipstick? If this new color scheme takes on at the studios it will only be a question of time before the drugstores will be putting in a stock of them.

Eleanor Boardman has had some special green and purple sticks made, because they have better photographic values than the red. Another smart addition to milady's toilette with this new fashion is having the upper and lower eye-lids colored to match. It creates a bizarre, but attractive effect.

Miss Boardman has gone in for other colors, too. She is going to wear a blond wig, just like Alice Terry, in order to meet the critical eye of Elinor Glyn, in whose latest opus, "The Only Thing," she plays a golden-haired princess. Conrad Nagel will play opposite as a king or duke or something (the Glyn people are always royalty, or at least spring from very aristocratic stock), and we are wondering if perhaps he might wear a coal-black wig by way of contrast. This is a suggestion to Mr. Nagel.

This handsome float was one of those entered by the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in the Shriner's Pageant held in Los Angeles, and which captured first prize. On the float are Fred Niblo, Gertrude Olmstead, Renee Adoree, Louis B. Mayer, Claire Windsor, Irving Thalberg and Harry Rapf.

THOSE WAR STORIES

IT certainly looks as if the public is not so tired of war stories after all. While the World War ended seven years ago, producers became "scary" of making pictures that carried a war atmosphere. There were too many hatreds—and people wanted to forget the late unpleasantness. After several war stories had been produced and found Not So Good from a box-office value, the sponsors checked out on them. They turned thumbs down and played their fiddles in peaceful pastures. Now comes a tide of war stories—which indicates that the public is in a more receptive mood for them. Seven years has brought a glamour. The song of hate has been dissipated.

Through the past year there have been several war plays. And the coming season is dotted with them. King Vidor is busy putting over the big war scenes in "The Big Parade," the Laurence Stallings story—and on most every other lot you can discover some sort of war atmosphere.

Some of the war pictures which have already reached the screen include "Isn't Life Wonderful," "I Want My Man," "The Crowded Hour," "Friendly Enemies," "The Crimson Runner," "Recompense," "The Spirit of the U. S. A.," "The Fighting American," "New Lives for Old," "A Man Must Live," and "The Humming Bird."

Those which will follow in a few weeks or months include "Buddies," "Seventh Heaven," "Havoc," "Mare Nostrum," "Out of the Ruins," "Forever After," and "Back to Life."

Sam Spring, First National's secretary, and E. Bruce Johnson, manager of the Foreign Sales department, arrive in Los Angeles for a brief visit.

STAKING CLAIMS

IT may be that the acting folk of the screen are so accustomed to playing westerns involving the staking of claims that buying real estate comes as "second nature" to them. We all know of the goodly dozen (it may be more) out Hollywood way who have invested their earnings in California soil—and who are sitting very, very pretty as a result. Some have gone in for home plots, others for oil.

Now turning toward Florida we discover that State undergoing a terrific boom in real estate. Hundreds have migrated to the Florida East and West Coasts and have traded their money bags for parcels of land. About every other person you meet in the Coast cities and towns has invested in sod. The old saying—"there's gold in them thar hills," will have to be changed to read—"there's millions in them thar flats."

The actor folks are not neglecting the opportunity to buy up Florida. Here is Tom Meighan who has invested $250,000 in Ocala real estate. It was while he spent several weeks there not so long ago in filming scenes that he became impressed by the fact that the community seemed to have escaped the real estate boom which had swept many other sections of the state. It occurred to him that with Silver Springs, one of the natural wonders of America nearby (it has a flow of 22,000,000 gallons an hour) and with its location on the Dixie Highway, Ocala was destined to become a tourist center.

With the aid of real estate operators the star purchased several slices of Ocala terra firma. He figures these are good for hotel sites, and industrial and residential developments. But he denies the story that he intends erecting a studio there and go into picture production on a large scale.

May McAvoy as Esther in "Ben Hur" (Metro-Goldwyn) needs no adjectives to call attention to her beauty and charm, as proved by the photo above.

THE FAREWELL STUFF

THE question of what becomes of juvenile movie stars when they grow up is a subject which might occupy the statisticians for many a day. Do they go right on being movie actors and actresses or do they turn to some other profession as a welcome relief? Baby Marie Osborne dropped out of sight for a while, but we glimpsed her recently in a picture. So it is safe to say she will resume her film career. Madge Evans came back to appear opposite Richard Barthelmess in "Classmates."

As for Wesley Barry he is putting over the farewell stuff. He is going to become a naval officer, having definitely decided upon such a career at an age when most boys think of joining a circus or becoming firemen. Wesley recently reached what might be called maturity, and he is leaving the movies to enter the Naval Academy at Annapolis without, apparently, so much as a sigh of regret. His last appearance in the films will be with Ramon Novarro in "Midshipman Sterling," a story of life among the naval cadets.

Larry Kent, new F. B. O. "find", and already "supported" by a star; in this case the support being Lefty Flynn's famous football shoulders.

This, as you may see, is the final scene of "Peacock Feathers" (Universal), in which Cullen Landis and Jacqueline Logan rehearse their stuff for Svend Gade, the director.

Even with the assistance of the make-up artist, Percy Marmont's preparation for his role in "The Street of Forgotten Men" (Paramount) is a lengthy process.

Marion Davies was adopted as an Indian princess by the Shoshones and Arahapoes appearing in the "Iron Horse" (Fox) prologue at Grauman's Hollywood.

Milton Sills made a trip to Hollywood for one day to see his wife before starting his work in "The Knockout" (First National).

Richey Gen'l Mgr.; Playdate Bureau Separate Unit

A BUDGET of $100,000, with three quarters of the amount already pledged, of which $7,500 has been paid in cash and the balance secured by notes.

Decision to appoint a high-powered executive, who would operate under the control of the Board of Directors, of which Sydney S. Cohen is chairman. Though no official announcement has been made, it is understood that Former Governor J. A. O. Preus, of Minnesota, and James J. Davis, Secretary of Labor, are among those being considered for this post.

Selection of an organization manager for the M. P. T. O. A. Decision was made to give this appointment to Henderson M. Richey, now General Manager of the Michigan M. P. T. O., according to reliable information, and an official announcement may be expected shortly.

The naming of an important new Finance Committee, composed of Sydney S. Cohen, M. E. Comerford, W. A. Steffes, Glenn Cross and Harry Davis.

Appointment of a committee to negotiate a new standard film contract and extension of arbitration to include allocation of product and unfair competition. This committee is as follows: Joseph M. Julian Brylawski, Washington, D. C.; M. E. Comerford, Scranton, Pa.; Fred Dolle, Louisville, Ky.; E. M. Fay, Providence, R. I.; A. A. Kaplan, Minneapolis, Minn.; Jack Miller, Chicago, Ill.; J. C. Ritter, Detroit, Mich.; J. M. Seider, Newark, N. J.; Jake Wells, Richmond, Va.; L. B. Wilson, Covington, Ky.; C. L. O'Reilly, New York; George P. Aarons, Philadelphia; H. A. Cole, Dallas, Texas; Glenn Cross, Battle Creek, Michigan; A. A. Elliott, Hudson, N. Y.; Charles Nathan, Peoria, Ill.; Fred C. Seegert, Milwaukee, Wis.; W. A. Steffers, Minneapolis, Minn.; J. Whitehurst, Baltimore, Md.; Nathan Yamins, Fall River, Mass.; M. J. O'Toole, Scranton, Pa.

National Headquarters of the M. P. T. O. A. issued the following statement on the meeting:

"The Chairman, Sydney S. Cohen, called the meeting to order and gave a general report of the activities of the organization and the development of the Bureau of Trade and Commerce since Milwaukee.

"Commenting on the Board's program of activities during the Wednesday and Thursday session, Mr. Cohen stated that on Wednesday, in order to facilitate the work on hand, special sub-committees were appointed to consider the matters to be discussed at the two days' session, and to report to the general Board on Thursday their deliberations.

"The Ways and Means sub-committees governed the question of dues and recommended that the same plan be adopted as carried out during 1924 and 1925, with this alteration—theatres in towns under 2,500 population be assessed $5.00 per annum, and theatres in towns under 5,000 population at $10 per annum. The schedule of dues now in operation is as follows:

"Theatres of 500 seats or under, $26 per annum.

"Theatres of 500 to 1,000 seats, $52 per annum.

"Theatres of 1,000 to 1,500 seats, $78 per annum.

"Theatres of 1,500 to 2,000 seats, $104 per annum.

"Theatres of 2,000 to 2,500 seats, $136 per annum.

"Theatres over 2,500 seats, $156 per annum.

"All theatres in towns under 2,500 population, $5 per annum.

"All theatres in towns under 5,000 population, $10 per annum.

"Recommendations for the engaging of the services of an organization manager were made and adopted.

"A committee designated as the Committee on By-Laws and Legislation was appointed to revise the present Constitution and By-Laws. The Committee to report at a later meeting of the Board.

"It was decided that the report and recommendation regarding Arbitration and the Standard Exhibition Contract submitted by Joseph M. Seider and approved at the Milwaukee convention, be carried out by the Board of Directors, and a committee was appointed following the decision of the Board to confer with producers on the approved standard contract, and also relative to the resolution adopted at the convention regarding the inability of theatre owners to secure film.

"After due deliberation and in consideration of the negotiations for the putting into operation the mandate of the convention in relation to the allocation of product, unfair competition and unfair competitive methods of circuits and chains of theatres operated by producer theatre owner, this Committee further recommended that the committee elected as above, shall also be the committee for the carrying out of the resolution in relation thereto passed at Milwaukee. The resolution follows:

"'Resolved, That this Convention approve, endorse and support most vigorously a plan to extend the principles of arbitration to grievances of exhibitors against producers and distributors arising out of their inability to secure service of film because of the unfair competitive methods of circuits and chains of theatres owned by these producers and distributors, and also because of the inability of theatre owners to secure film for the operation of their theatres, because of the unfair competitive methods of circuits and chains of theatre operators, and to that end the Board of Directors meet in conference in New York City with the representatives of the producers and distributors for the purpose of drafting an agreement embodying such plan.'

"In order to keep the Bureau of Trade and Commerce a clearly defined organization for the purposes so named, Trade and Commerce, it was decided to keep the funds, management and development of this Bureau as a distinct unit; and not directly a part of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America organization, although under its guidance and patronage. A committee consisting of five exhibitors, Nathan Yamins, W. A. Steffes, L. M. Sagal, A. Julian Brylawski and Sydney S. Cohen, was appointed —alternates, Jake Wells and James Ritter. This committee to have full and complete authority to work in conjunction with Universal's representatives, Film Booking Offices and the Independent Motion Picture Producers and Distributors Association and other producing companies under consideration.

Summer Closings Follow Hot Spell

Heat Wave Revives Usual Talk of Extensive Shut-Downs, But Official Announcements Average With Other Years

LAST week's heat wave caused picture houses to play to lean business and brought forth many announcements of summer closings. Several houses are already dark and will remain idle until the end of the summer, while a number of others announced that they would close in a short time.

The torrid weather revived the usual early summer talk of extensive theatre shutdowns, though official announcements indicate that up to the present the number of closings will not greatly exceed those of former years.

The T.O.C.C. has started an agitation to have all members of that organization close their houses during the months of July and August. A questionnaire has been sent out and upon the results will depend the final decision with regard to the plan.

The question was discussed at a meeting held last Wednesday. There are about 600 theatres listed as members of the T.O.C.C. and it is possible that all of these will be darkened during July and August should the plan receive the endorsement of the organization. One of the main objections to the plan is based on the fact that the larger circuits will continue to operate the majority of their theatres throughout the summer.

The summer closing situation in other cities of the country vary with local conditions. In Detroit only one theatre was reported closed and that for repairs.

The Stanley Company darkened for th summer period four of their Philadelphia houses. These are the Aldine, Allegheny, Keystone and Orpheum.

The question, "Will the motion picture theatres of Cleveland close during the warm weather," has been answered by M. B. Horwitz, president of the Washington Circuit, which operates a chain of a dozen local houses. "No," says Horwitz, "The theatre will not close. And the reason they will not close is because they cannot." The zoning system, put into operation in Cleveland the beginning of last season by the Film Board of Trade, has made it necessary, says Horwitz, for the exhibitor to give dates for pictures many months in advance of showing the picture. This is necessary in order for an exhibitor to protect himself against his nearest zone competitor. These pictures, contracted for, must be played. If not on the date specified, then at some later date. "If we shut up shop," Horwitz stated, "then in the fall, we'd have a lot of old pictures waiting to be played. The public knows the new pictures from the old. To play the old pictures at the opening of a new season would ruin the standing of a first-run neighborhood house for the whole season. Perhaps forever. So it's cheaper to stay open during the summer, take the loss of operating in the heat, play off the old pictures that have been contracted for, and start in the fall with a clean slate."

With the advent of summer many changes are taking place in the theatrical world of Butte. As is usual at this time of year there is a marked decrease in the theatre attendance and that spells little profit, if any for the amusement houses.

Manager W. J. Sullivan of the Silver Bow Amusement company has published the announcement that his two houses, the American and the Rialto will close on the thirteenth of June for the summer months. He says: "Because of the high cost of our big attractions, our big salary for musicians, operators and other attaches, we have been losing money for some time past. Attendance has decreased more than 30% since March and it is a financial impossibility to continue." Under the contract with the Musicians' union, all houses having a seating capacity of more than 499 must employ a five-piece orchestra. It is generally believed that the darkening of both of these popular houses will be temporary and that they will be opened again in the fall.

A large number of Iowa theatres are closing this year for the summer slack season. One salesman estimated that summer closings would show an increase of 30 per cent over last year's total. Probably ten per cent of the smaller houses will be closed at least and in some cases the salesmen are reporting five or six houss out of every twenty-five to be planning on summer closing. Among other houses which will not be operating for the summer season is the Burg at Fredericksburg, the Opera House at Batavia, the Princess at Hopkington, and the Opera House at Limes Springs.

The unprecedented June hot spell under which Chicago sweltered for ten days had a very adverse effect upon the theatre attendance, and houses in all parts of the city reported very poor business. With slight fall in the thermometer, however, on Saturday night and Sunday, business again revived. The usual talk of theatres closing for the summer is heard on film row, but to date fewer houses than one year ago, have officially announced their intention of closing.

Old Sol has hit Baltimore, Md., with a vengeance during the past week. Consequently the patronage of the moving picture theatres became conspicuous by its absence and the exhibitors realized that at last Summer "had came."

Film Golfers Meet at Briarcliff

Rain Dampens Green But Day is Voted Great Success; Rex Beach Makes Low Net Score; Other Notables Compete for Trophies

THE Spring Golf Tournament conducted at Briarcliff Lodge, Westchester County, Tuesday, brought out the usual number of film golf enthusiasts, about 200, and in spite of a heavy rain that caught practically all the crowd out on the green the day was voted a great success.

The golfers began to arrive soon after ten a. m. and a number of foursomes were played before luncheon. The official matches were conducted in the afternoon but many of them were not completed owing to the rain. This made the awarding of some of the special trophies impossible and in consequence the committee decided to hold these prizes until the next tournament.

The winners of the principal trophies are as follows:

Low net (Reuben Samuels, Inc. Cup) won by Rex Beach, with a net of 70.

Low net runner-up (silver putter offered by Motion Picture News) won by Stanley B. Waite, with a net score of 71.

Low gross (Warner Bros. Cup) tied between Rex Beach and J. D. Williams. Won for Williams by Billy Brandt at the toss of coin.

Jules Mastbaum Cup for lowest exhibitor score to Christopher Deibel of Youngstown, O.

Trophy shield (Exhibitors Herald Trophy) won by John H. Theis, 2nd low gross runner-up.

Special cup by Davis Distributing Division won by Tom Moore, of Washington.

Winner of leg on FILM DAILY Cup, Rex Beach with a net of 70.

Kodak offered by Jules Brulatour won by Lester Aarons, 3rd low gross runner-up.

Winners of the foursome prizes follow:

Chester Sawyer, Bill Sheer, Joseph Sameth, John E. Storey, Don Mersereau, Arthur S. Kane, Jim Milligan, George Blair, Sam Sax, Harry Fields, Carl Carleton, Jerome Beatty, Marty Schwartz, John Theis, Harry Segal, Arthur Stebbins, Ned Depinet, J. V. Ritchey, Jr.; George Brown, Earl Gulick, Fred J. McConnell, J. Boyce Smith, Howard Tierney, Rudy Cameron, Albert L. Grey, E. J. Warner, Mark Dintenfass, S. S. Toback, Al Saunders, F. B. Crosbie, and Messrs. Branton, Scott, Nolan, Karpen, Frankel and Cummins.

Lee A. Ochs, Charles Haring, John Humm, Tim Leahy, E. A. Eschmann, Lee Marcus, C. Graham Baker, James A. Cron, Myron Lesser, Tom Gerety, Earl W. Hammons, E. J. Smith, J. T. Oliphant, E. L. Smith, Hawley Turner, Oscar Lynch, Joe Hornstein, George C. Wilson, William Massee, Oscar A. Price, Dr. S. Scheppt, Gene Hatschet, J. V. Ritchey, Sr.; A. W. Smith, Will Nigh, Stanley B. Waite, E. S. Gaylor, Jr.; Jess Gourlay, Paul Gulick, Lynde Denig, Arthur Pelterson, Al Hedley, Richard Brady, J. T. Rowley, and Messrs. Hand, Berson, Schreiber and Abrahams.

The distribution of prizes was a part of the evening's entertainment, the other half being a dinner held in the Casino of the Briarcliff Lodge. Harry Reichenback acted as toastmaster during the banquet. There were informal speeches and the crowd had a general good time.

Player Power Vital Issue In Present Competition

Production War Fought With Munitions of Names

By Edwin Schallert, Los Angeles Times

STARS. Star-making. Star exploitation. These are topics that are absorbing more and more a universal interest in Hollywood.

Players — and yet more players. New personalities. Striking and different. That is a big feature of the trend.

How many names will be added to the bright list before the year is over? How many will continue to shine permanently in the cinema sky?

Two, three, a half dozen? Perhaps even a score or more.

The answer is vital, because a keen phase of current competition in production centers in player power — names and talent, and how to insure more names, more talent for the future.

If a company of huge capital were to enter the motion picture field just now they would without doubt find a situation almost unprecedented — obstacles that in their way are of an entirely new kind.

Studio space they could doubtless procure or build; the story problem they could overcome; the services of young and promising directors are still to be had and as a rule they bring to the films a fresh point of view.

The wall that any brand new organization would have to crash through, however, is that which would stand between them and the majority of big player names. Could they, by any chance, obtain the services of the established favorites? That would have to be an outstanding question in their minds.

The free-lancer with the big reputation is rapidly vanishing from the field. Even Conway Tearle, for long the most inveterate in his complete and absolute independence of term contracts, has been engaged for a series of features by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Lewis Stone, Anna Q. Nilsson, Wallace Beery and others have all lodged safely with one organization or another, either as star or featured player, and the chances of their taking part to any extent in activities outside of this is considered exceedingly slight. Percy Marmont is virtually the only one of the somewhat celebrated group who, at this writing, remains fancy free, and his signing up now seems inevitable.

The system of lending players, which prevailed so widely about a year or two ago, has been rapidly going out of vogue. Companies have on occasion lately attempted to secure a contract player from another organization and found that schedules did not permit such an arrangement. Things move too rapidly; an actor's value is enhanced more by keeping him at work in his home studio, it is felt, than by sending him to another unless the feature is very exceptional. Besides it is dangerous for a player to appear too frequently on the screen, as some of the free lancers did.

The front presented by the various companies is, under the circumstances, one to be observed and considered. The real battle, if there is to be a competitive war, will be fought to quite an extent with the munitions of names.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer just now presents a bold and very consistent ensemble of personalities. The total number is perhaps greater than that of any company, reaching more than forty, and they do not seem to be through signing up talent by any means.

Primary stars on their list include Lillian Gish, Norma Shearer, John Gilbert, Marion Davies, Ramon Novarro, Buster Keaton, Lon Chaney, Mae Murray and Jackie Coogan. An excellent line-up. These players will as a rule head the casts of their productions, although some of them will occasionally be used together, as at present Chaney and Miss Shearer, in "The Tower of Lies." One of the most interesting things about the group is that Miss Shearer and Mr. Gilbert have made such remarkable progress. They are said to be running a neck-and-neck race for popularity, with Gilbert leading in some localities, and Miss Shearer in others. Buster Keaton, it may be mentioned, is, according to the latest advices, to continue to release through Metro. and Jackie Coogan, of course, has been signed up for another year.

In actual box-office effect the Paramount list is, naturally, very strong. The name of Gloria Swanson is still something to conjure with, although she will have to have a good popular picture very soon to help her hold her favor. Her latest film, "The Coast of Folly," with a background of society life in Palm Beach and Miami, will give her one of her old-time opportunities to wear very smart frocks and gowns, and incidentally she appears in a dual role, as mother and daughter. The picture has been practically completed.

More than Gloria, it is a fact that Thomas Meighan needs a good strong starring story. He is one of the ablest actors, but the pictures in which he has lately played have not brought out his ability. Popularly, he manages to hold his own exceptionally well.

Richard Dix and Pebe Daniels are gaining a little, especially Dix. Some of his recent advancement has been quite noteworthy. Pola Negri is the star, however, that is building toward the biggest future.

The striking resource of Paramount's new strength commercially is comedians. They are better fortified than anybody, with Harold Lloyd a sure winner; Douglas MacLean—hitting in high already, and Raymond Griffith—one of the greatest comers in all of moviedom. Lloyd's college picture, which is to be held until the fall, is probaby going to prove the most successful that he has made lately, with the exception of "Grandma's Boy" and "Girl Shy." It may even top "Girl Shy." It is his last under his Pathe contract, and he is preparing for his first Paramount production now.

First National naturally holds a big balance of power because of the popularity of Colleen Moore and Corinne Griffith. Colleen is in some respects the most amazing of moviedom's stars. For who, since the heyday of Mabel Normand, can equal her as a clever comedienne?

The Milton Sills vogue is still on, and one looks to the future for big things for Dorothy Mackaill, since "Chickie" is a clean-up.

Norma Talmadge, with "Graustark," should be once again in her element, while the record of Connie Talmadge during the past few months is putting her farther along than she ever has been before. She's worth a lot of cheering these days is Connie. Everybody will be watching both her and Norma more and more as their association with United Artists approaches—Norma, particularly, very soon, since she has only two more releases with First National, and has lately again been proving her acting powers.

I like personally to regard the Warner Brothers line-up because it is such a distinctive and interesting one. Their stars comprise now John Barrymore, first and foremost, Lowell Sherman, Syd Chaplin, Monte Blue, Irene Rich, with Marie Prevost and Willard Louis occasionally also being featured in that capacity.

Alice Calhoun has come to them following the Vitagraph deal—a girl of still unrealized charm and talent. Among their other recent acquisitions are Dolores and Helene Costello, the daughters of Maurice Costello—the second generation taking their step into prominence. With Dorothy Devore, Patsy Ruth Miller, Huntly Gordon, Kenneth Harlan, Matt Moore, Clive Brook and others, this comprises a very well rounded list that should enable them to accomplish results worth while and also, perhaps, brilliant. I understand, by the way, that Barrymore is on this occasion to play in both a modern and a costume film. to pay in both a modern and a costume film.

Universal has been threatened with the loss of Reginald Denny. Denny has found fault with the very low terms of his contract, which he announced were less than $1,000 a week.

The company is evidently striving for popular results with both Mary Philbin and Laura La Plante. Miss Philbin is completing "Stella Maris," a revival of the Mary Pickford story, while Miss La Plante is continuing the series of light comedies to which she seems singularly well adapted. From all accounts, however, the most important thrill to be afforded by the "U" in the near future is the picturization of "The Goose Woman," featuring Louise Dresser, Jack Pickford and Constance Bennett, which has recently been completed by Clarence Brown. This is incidentally Brown's last picture with that company, for he is to start directing Rudolph Valentino this month in "The Untamed," with a Russian background. In this Rudy will be seen as a Tartar prince. The film is a modernized version of a story by Pushkin, celebrated Slavic writer.

An actress whose fame will probably shortly be made in a mother role, somewhat resembling Miss Dresser's in "The Goose Woman," is Belle Bennett, who has been selected to do the title character in "Stella Dallas." Tests of thirty or forty players were shot for this particular plum, under the supervision of Samuel Goldwyn, the producer, and Henry King, the director. A number of stage players were considered among others, but Miss Bennett was regarded as having the film experience necessary to give an adequate portrayal. The picture should be one of the greatest of the mother-love plays of this or any other season. The girl who appears as the daughter Laurel, for whom Stella makes a supreme sacrifice, is to be done by Lois Moran, a brand new find brought from abroad. She apparently symbolizes anew youth on the screen a la Betty Bronson. Ronald Colman as Stephen Dallas, the husband of the title character, will have a role enabling him once again to prove the fine, thoughtful quality of his work. I do not know that Colman will ever actually reach stardom, but he can safely be regarded as one of the most successful of the new leading men. In many localities he has as many fans as Gilbert, if not more.

The first starring pictures made by Leatrice Joy and Rod La Rocque, under the Cecil B. DeMille banner, will shortly be ready for release, and it is good news, perhaps, that La Rocque's film, "The Coming of Amos," will disclose him in a much lighter portrayal than any that he has done in some time. Miss Joy's feature, "Hell's Highroad," will be the domestic drama type, giving her an emotional part, as well as a chance for comedy. The cast for De Mille's own picture, "The Road to Yesterday," which mingles period with modern setting, comprises Joseph Schildkraut, Jetta Goudal and Vera Reynolds among the principals, and will be started this month. Mr. DeMille has a very interesting nucleus for his films including Edmund Burns, Robert Edeson, Lillian Rich, Robert Ames, recruited from the stage, besides quite a few newcomers. Noah Beery, who is under contract to Famous Players-Lasky, with peace established again, was lent to him for "The Coming of Amos."

For the present, the number of productions filmed simultaneously at the De Mille studios, will probably not exceed two. It is understood that expansion of the plant is being contemplated some time in the course of a year or so, or whenever it may become necessary to materially increase the present output of twelve pictures annually.

The future plans of the independent established stars merit much attention—those of Douglas Fairbanks, especially, because on the strength of "Don Q" he is likely to be sitting atop the world again. His pirate story, which is next on the list, will very likely be photographed in technicolor, and is without doubt going to be much more elaborate than his present release. Tests have already been made of the color process and everything seems favorable to its use. Doug has had the pirate production in mind for a long time, but held it in abeyance because of others which were being made. The field will evidently be clear for him now.

Mary Pickford has finished "Little Annie Rooney," and optimistic hopes are being entertained for her in this production. It is not to be an ostentatious feature, but one that will very strongly emphasize human interest. For a time Mary thought in the setting to intensify the impression of the tenement districts and other drab surroundings, by using something of the "Caligari" idea in construction of the buildings and also crowding them together to make the effect seem oppressive. Later, she abandoned this for the simpler and more direct expedients, so that comedy and heart appeal, rather than anything manifestly decorative, will be the attraction.

Keep your eye on Charley Ray. He has also returned to his original character, and the preview of "Some Punkins" recently at the Writers' Club, caused a wave of optimism for his future. Ernst Lubitsch, among others, voiced enthusiasm. He has always had a very high opinion of Charley's ability, and has hoped at one time and another to direct him. "Some Punkins" is a blending of humor and pathos, with Charley wearing once again the farmer's hat and overalls, and can, without doubt, be very safely hailed as the sort of film that formerly made him "the best-loved boy on the screen."

Meanwhile the new names are not to be overlooked. The wheels are very smoothly moving toward many debuts at the studios. Success is possible in a much bigger way and much more rapidly than a few years ago for the newcomer because of the betterment of the releasing system, the improved technical quality of pictures, systematizing of costuming and make-up as regards the stars and finer general presentation of the films.

That there will be the big and lasting triumphs in the films that there were at an earlier stage, may seem somewhat less certain. First favorites are nearly always the most happily remembered. The new names are more closely linked with the parts which their possessors play; there is possibly less of the personal element in a player's vogue.

Nevertheless, it is to this newer group that one must look more and more for the keeping up of the progress of pictures. They are representative in a definite way of the stimulus of new ideas at work. They are seldom, nowadays, mere imitators of those who have gone before, for pictures do not suffer from this condition as they did six or seven years ago. The shrewd producer or director wants individuality in his talent, and it would appear that the man who is bent on discovering actors nowadays, who knows his business, wants his find to be, if not always supremely gifted, at least in type thoroughly distinctive.

Correct Error in Report of Mix Injunction

IN the issue dated May 30th, the NEWS printed an article under the heading "Enjoined from Using Bill Mix Name in Pictures" which stated that the United States District Court of the Southern California District has issued an injunction against the use of the name Bill Mix in connection with the advertising of pictures produced by Bill Mix Productions, Inc., and distributed by Sanford Productions.

The article referred to was incorrect and unintentionally misleading, since the injunction does not restrain these companies from using the Bill Mix name but instead makes provisions that the advertising of such pictures shall not cause or tend to cause exhibitors or the public to believe that a star named Tom Mix is the star or performer therein, further requiring that all advertising matter issued by the companies in connection with the Bill Mix pictures shall carry the following inscription: "Not connected with any other producer or performer of similar name." The order, thus, specifically permits the companies to use the Bill Mix name in connection with the advertising, selling and exhibiting of their pictures, subject to the provisions of the agreement.

The injunction was the outcome of a suit brought by Fox Film Corporation, producers of features starring Tom Mix. The order of the court is based on a stipulation signed and filed by the plaintiff and defendants to the action.

This article is printed by the NEWS to fully correct the error which occurred in the story printed in the issue of May 30th.

Statement is Issued by M. P. T. O. A. Officials

THE following signed statement was issued Wednesday, June 10, on behalf of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, by R. F. Woodhull, President and Sydney S. Cohen, Chairman of the Board of Directors, in connection with an article which appeared in "Variety," headed "Big Shake-Up in M. P. T. O. A.":

"A statement has already been made to the press covering the business proceedings which took place at the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America Board of Directors meeting, which was in session Wednesday and Thursday, June 3rd and 4th, at the Hotel Roosevelt, New York City, and the article published in "Variety," issue of June 10th, in connection with its inference that the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America are aligning themselves with the Hays Organization is misleading.

"Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, R. F. Woodhull, President; Sydney S. Cohen, Chairman, Board of Directors."

News' Staff Man on European Survey

L. C. Moen Goes Abroad on Important Tour of Investigation of Film Conditions in England and on Continent

L. C. MOEN, of the editorial staff of the MOTION PICTURE NEWS, sailed for Europe on Thursday of this week, via the S. S. "De Grasse," for an extensive tour of investigation of film conditions in England and on the Continent. In view of the increasing importance of the foreign market and the growing international nature of the film industry, the NEWS believes it advisable at this time to make a first hand survey of the changing conditions in France, England and Germany, the principal film capitals of Europe. If found advisable, the investigation will be extended to include Belgium, Austria or other adjacent territory.

Developments of the highest importance are pending in Europe, both as regards theatres and production, and it is believed by those close to conditions on the other side that the coming year will see vital changes in the present line-up in both fields.

While in Europe Mr. Moen will endeavor to approach the situation from two widely separated angles: first, that of the European producers, distributors and exhibitors; and second, that of the American companies operating in Europe, either in their own name or through affiliation with local corporations. These two groups hold widely divergent views on many topics, but it is felt that the only fair way to appraise the situation is to obtain the plans and beliefs of both the American and European concerns, rather than either group alone.

The survey to be made will include production in some measure, inasmuch as the volume of European production bears an important relation to the number of playing dates available for American pictures. The principal effort, however, will be directed along the line of theatre building and ownership, both European and American, inasmuch as developments in Europe at the present time closely approximate those in America as regards producer-distributor ownership of theatre, booking combines and the circuits.

L. C. Moen, of Motion Picture News, who sailed for Europe this week on a tour of investigation.

Working out from Paris as a central point, Mr. Moen will visit the important film centres, using the Handley-Page, Junker and other commercial airplane services in order to cover the utmost possible ground in the available time. He will be aided in his investigation by European film trade journals, distribution and production executives, American representatives, heads of exhibitor organizations and others intimately in touch with basic conditions.

Foreign exhibitors, executives and others who wish to get in touch with the NEWS representative during his stay in Europe may do so through the American Express Company, 11 Rue Scribe, Paris, France, from where mail will be forwarded to him throughout the trip.

Immediately upon his return to the United States Mr. Moen will prepare for MOTION PICTURE NEWS the most comprehensive analysis of European conditions as they affect the American film industry that has yet been presented by any trade paper. This material will appear exclusively in the NEWS.

Mr. Moen's selection for the survey of the foreign field is partially in the nature of a reward for faithful and appreciated services. He came to the NEWS four years ago from Babson's after an extensive and thorough experience in various branches of the film industry, to assume charge of the Exhibitors' Service Bureau. In this position, which has always been rated as one of the most important on the staff, he has proven eminently satisfactory and in addition has freely given of his talents from week to week in the preparation of the other departments of the magazine.

His talent for observation and his ability to relate on paper, clearly, that which he has seen, makes him an especially desirable man for the assignment and the NEWS is confident that the articles he will write upon his return will be well worth the attention of all branches of the industry.

At various intervals the NEWS has published special articles concerning conditions in Europe, notably Germany and England, but this is the first time a member of the home office staff has been sent abroad on a special mission. If the trip is successful, as it seems positive it will be, it is planned to continue the practice at such periods as is practicable and necessary to keep abreast of foreign conditions.

No definite number of weeks for the NEWS survey has been allotted to Mr. Moen but the time will be sufficient to accomplish practical results.

Increased Production in Germany

Ufa Announces Thirty-Three Productions for First Half of Season; Many More to Come

By Heinrich Frankel of Berlin

WHEN, some months ago, import regulations in this country were settled in such away (dealt with at length in one of my last articles) that each renter may only import an amount of foreign productions exactly corresponding to the footage of German films handled by him,—when this new regulations were published, it was easy to prohesy that, in view of the strong demands of this market and its more than 3000 halls, a big boom in German productions would have to result.

And that's indeed what has happened. Activity in German studios has considerably increased and is certainly ever so much larger than it was last year.

Ufa naturally heads the list. This concern, by far the biggest of all German film companies is announcing (and busily producing already) as many as 33 pictures during the first half of the season; and before the year ends there will surely be many more to come.—Some of these productions are of a highly ambitious character and are sure to turn out even bigger than "Nibelungs," "Last Laugh" and some other renowned productions of the past.

Naturally American readers will be mostly interested in the forthcoming productions of those directors who are more or less renowned already in the States.

Fritz Lang (of "Nibelung's" fame) is busily producing already a very big modern production, called "Metropolis." The story has naturally again been written by Thea von Harbou, the producer's wife. F. W. Murnau, producer of "The Last Laugh" has finished already a very big (modern) adaption of "Tartuffe." Carl Mayer, author of "Last Laugh" has also written the scenario, and Emil Jannings has once more been starred in the latest Murnau production.

At the present moment this greatest and most widely renowned of the German actors is playing lead in what will probably turn out one of the biggest and most ambitious of this year's Ufa productions. Author and director of this film which will be called "Vaudeville" is E. A. Dupont, probably the finest of the younger set of German producers. He is generally expected to rank among the world's greatest in a very short time. In this film Lya de Putti is co-starred who, by the way, is expected to go to America next year.

Dr. Robison, producer of "Warning Shadows" (which has enjoyed a very strong success in England) is just embarking on a very big production, adapted from "Manon Lescaut." Here too Yva de Putti is going to play lead.

S. Barret McCormick Appointed as Pathe Manager of Exploitation

S. BARRET McCORMICK has been appointed Exploitation Manager of Pathe Exchange, Inc., succeeding Arthur Brilant, who recently resigned to engage in theatrical production work.

Mr. McCormick is fitted by his long and varied experience in the theatre, advertising and exploitation fields for his new office. He has established a record as a successful theatre manager, having been identified as Managing Director with such prominent first-run houses as the Circle in Indianapolis and the Allen in Cleveland.

As head of Pathe's exploitation staff Mr. McCormick will have charge of the compilation of campaign books and press-sheets and will also originate theatre novelties, and other exhibitor accessories. Pathe officials are convinced that in the new Exploitation Manager they have an executive unusually well-fitted by training and experience to handle these problems from the exhibitor's angle.

Mr. McCormick has been associated with the exploitation staff during the past ten months and during that time has handled a number of special campaigns for Pathe and Associated Exhibitors.

Aller Sails on Russian Aim

Vice-President of Rothacker-Aller Off for Europe to Investigate Proposition

CONSIDERABLE interest attached this week to the departure for Europe of Joseph Aller, vice-president of the Rothacker-Aller Laboratories, Inc., of Hollywood, to investigate the possibility of the extension of that company's affairs into Russia, or, as it is now termed, the Union of Socialist Soviet States.

Aller sailed on Tuesday, June 9th, aboard the "Aquitania," going first to London, where important changes will come about in the laboratory situation shortly through the imposition June 30th of a tax on the import of raw stock. This will give a considerable impetus to both raw stock manufacture and laboratory work in the British Isles, according to those familiar with conditions there.

Following his stay in London, Aller will go on to Paris and Berlin, where he will confer with several technical experts who have been making investigation there for the Rothacker-Aller interests during the past two or three years.

The Russian angle to the trip is occasioned by Aller's acceptance of the official invitation extended to him by the Director of the Goskino, a department of the Soviet government which is in full control of all motion picture activities in Russia.

Reports have come out of Russia recently from several sources indicating that that country is seriously contemplating film activities on a considerable scale. The film industry virtually disappeared during the revolution, but a fair number of theatres managed to survive and are understood to be operating at present on a moderately successful basis. Much of the film shown is from Germany, which has perhaps been most active in building commercial relationships with the Soviet States.

A few films have actually been produced in Russia in recent years, but many of the so-called "Russian" films exhibited in Europe have been filmed in the Russian refugee colonies (numbering several hundred thousand persons) in Paris and Berlin. The Moscow Art theatre has been responsible for a number of productions. These, while possessing the highest type of artistry and acting, have been rather too morbid and tragic in theme to be widely suitable for showing in other countries.

It is believed by many, however, that the Russian artists will ultimately develop a high type of picture, and perhaps become a serious factor in the production of high grade photoplays. With its uncounted millions of citizens, Russia possesses a tremendous potential home market for its own films, as well as those from other countries, once its financial affairs permit of expansion in the building and operation of theatres.

Gilda Gray A Paramount Star

Famous Stage Dancer Signs Contract to Appear in Films—First Role Picked

GILDA GRAY, famous stage dancer and entertainer, has signed a contract with Paramount to star in motion pictures, it was announced this week by Jesse L. Lasky. Miss Gray's first starring vehicle will be filmed from a story by Robert E. Sherwood and Bertram Block. Paul Bern has been chosen to direct.

The star won fame as a cabaret performer and later as a stage star as the leading exponent of the "shimmy." She began her career as a dancer in Milwaukee, later going to Chicago and so to the New York cabarets. In New York she attracted the attention of Sophie Tucker, vaudeville headliner, who obtained an engagement for Miss Gray to dance at a Sunday night concert at the Winter Garden.

In announcing the contract with Miss Gray, Mr. Lasky said:

"In Gilda Gray we feel we have signed one of the greatest box-office attractions the theatre has developed in recent years. Her popularity is phenomenal, as was proved recently when she drew $49,000 in one week at the Metropolitan theatre in Los Angeles. This record has been repeated in other places where she has appeared in the last two years. None of this personality will be lost on the screen. We have tested her thoroughly and the same magnetism which has attracted thousands of people all over the country will be manifest in her pictures."

The meetings will be presided over by Staab, who will make reports and suggestions of interest to the exhibitors on questions of distribution and exhibition.

He is also fostering a plan to have State conventions issue invitations to officers in other state organizations for the purpose of exchanging ideas and giving them the benefit of their experiences.

Rialto Theater, New York, Takes Exception to Story

The Rialto theatre, New York, takes exception to a story printed in a recent issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, which stated that "Baree, Son of Kazan," recently shown, was accompanied by a piano-organ music score supplied by Vitagraph and composed exclusively of original music. Officials of the Rialto stated that the music played was of the theatre's own selection and was not furnished by Vitigraph.

Dr. Berger, another one of leading Ufa producers, is directing an adaption of "Waltz Dream." The film will probably be titled "'NUX' the Prince Consort."

Max Mack and Lothar Mendes are other renowned German producers booked by Ufa. The former is directing "Career," starring Ossi Oswalda, the latter "Love's Blindness," starring Conrad Veidt, Lil Dagover, and the British artist Lillian Hall Davies. Emil Jannings is also playing quite a small part in this film; the funny thing about it is that he incorporates his own personality; quite a novel idea.

These are the more important of Ufa's own productions during the first half of the season. Apart of this are, however, quite a number of independent productions, either the German or the world rights of which are handled by Ufa. The most noteworthy of them are those by Paul Davidson who is generally regarded as "the father of the German film trade" and who certainly is the "discover" of Lubitsch and Negri. His company supplies two modern features, both of which are directed by P. L. Stein. Rex films, another noteworthy of the "Independent" furnish two pictures produced by Lupu Pick. One of them is being taken from Henrik Ibsen's famous play "The Wild Duck." Mestro Films are to deliver two Lucie Doraine productions to be produced by F. Basch. Sternheim Films are also delivering two modern productions, both of which are directed by Hans Schwartz.

Apart of these there are naturally lots of smaller features, to say nothing of a very large output of travel films, educationals and all that sort of things.

All the pictures mentioned in this article are either directly or indirectly connected with Ufa. In my next article I'll give a short survey of the forthcoming productions to be expected from other German quarters.

P. Magaro Touring Europe With Loew Representative

Accompanying E. A. Schiller, general manager of the Marcus Loew theatre interests, when he sailed from New York on June 9, aboard the Aquitania, to establish a chain of Loew theatres in Europe, was Peter Magaro, of Harrisburg, Pa., for twenty years a motion picture exhibitor in that city, who recently sold his Regent Theatre, in Harrisburg, to Mr. Loew. Mr. Magaro stated before his departure that he will assist Mr. Schiller in the establishment of the proposed new Loew theatres abroad. He is a native of Italy, and familiar with European theatrical conditions, having visited Europe several times in recent years.

Accompanying Mr. Magaro from Harrisburg are his daughter, Miss Elizabeth Magaro, and Marino Aeri and the latter's daughter. Mr. Magaro will spend the summer in Europe and then return to Harrisburg to look after his large real estate interests there and the affairs of his big Coliseum dance hall.

Mr. Magaro is a former vice-president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware, and a former member-at-large of the executive committee of Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America.

Woodhull to Address Meeting

Asbury Park Convention May Be Scene of "Keynote" Speech by National President

R. F. WOODHULL, President of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, elected to succeed M. J. O'Toole at the Milwaukee Convention last month, will attend the opening session of the sixth annual convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New Jersey, at the New Monterey Hotel, Asbury Park, N. J., June 29.

It is known that President Woodhull is mapping out an intensive campaign for the national exhibitor organization for 1925-26, and it is expected that his "keynote speech" at Asbury Park will touch upon subjects of vital importance to New Jersey theatre owners, including Sunday opening.

It is expected that the larger plans of the National organization for the coming year will have been sufficiently worked out to permit President Woodhull to discuss the allotment of play dates in the contest between theatre owners of this country and interests alleged to be opposed to them.

Joseph M. Seider, President of the New Jersey State organization, this week announced the designation of the Committee on Attendance for the convention as follows: Sidney E. Samuelson, Sussex County, Chairman; Mortimer Lewis, Atlantic County; Morris Kitinsky, Bergen; J. Fox, Burlington; Lewellyn Pizor, Camden; A. D. Austin, Cape May; Norman Lewis, Cumberland; Eugene Steinhardt, Essex; Benjamin Schindler, Gloucester; Leon Rosenblatt, Hudson; L. Rosen, Hunterdon; Pierson Hume, Mercer; Sherman Dennis, Monmouth; Al Roth, Morris; Leo Juskowitz, Middlesex; I. M. Hirshblond, Ocean; A. W. Hill, Salem; L. Gerard, Somerset; Alexander Okin, Union; George Kirby, Warren; Louis Gold, Passaic.

The Ladies Committee on Entertainment of Ladies is:

Mrs. R. F. Woodhull, Mrs. Charles Hildinger, Mrs. Sidney Samuelson, Mrs. Henry P. Nelson, Mrs. William Keegan, Mrs. Benjamin Schindler and Mrs. I. M. Hirshblond.

One of the outstanding features of the convention will be the cooperation given to the New Jersey showmen by one of the leading exponents of the art of staging presentations and prologues. This will take the form of a campaign which will have its inception at the convention and will have for its slogan "Bringing Broadway to Main Street." President Seider has arranged with the expert to have a number of interesting events shown to the theatre owners and demonstrated for their benefit.

The Water Carnival planned in conjunction with the convention promises to eclipse any similar event of this kind. The Water Carnival will include a number of amazingly brilliant numbers, including many forms of sport, swimming and diving. Several New Jersey theatres have already started a contest for the most popular girl to represent her theatre section, the winner of each theatre to take part in the Water Carnival. Letters have been sent out to all New Jersey theatre owners by President Seider urging them to get behind the contest and utilize every means of publicity as well as advertising. Suggestions have been made to use the radio stations of New Jersey to publicize the event and to tie-up with local department stores who may be prevailed upon to furnish each winner with a bathing suit she will wear at the Water Carnival. Slides, throwaways, posters, voting blanks, etc., are some of the other suggestions made by President Seider.

Fred. H. Elliott Offered Post

I. M. P. P. D. A. Names Committee to Negotiate With Proposed Leader at Meeting Wednesday

FREDERICK H. ELLIOTT, well known in the film industry through his association as executive secretary of the former National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, will be offered the position of executive manager of the I. M. P. P. D. A., the association of independent producers, distributors and exchangemen.

The move to offer the post of leader of the organization to Mr. Elliott was taken at a special meeting of the I. M. P. P. D. A., held at the Hotel Astor, New York, Wednesday afternoon.

The meeting invested the executive committee with powers to negotiate with Mr. Elliott for his services as executive manager at a salary not to exceed $15,000 per annum.

The selection was made following a debate at which several men were proposed for the position of leader of the independent organization. When the choice narrowed down to Mr. Elliot, ther move to empower the executive committee to negotiate with him was carried through.

Mr. Elliott's former activities as secretary of the old National Association brought him into prominence. Since that time he has engaged in several enterprises as an organizer. He recently organized a large association of taxi cab companies.

It is not certain that Mr. Elliott will accept the post which the I. M. P. P. D. A. will offer him, though the general impression is that the members who championed him at the meeting Wednesday had reasons to believe that he would assume the duties of the position under the terms worked out by the association.

The meeting Wednesday also selected the man who will represent the association on the board of directors of the Bureau of Trade and Commerce, the so-called Play Date Bureau. This important assignment fell to Abe Carlos, head of Carlos Productions.

Warning Producers Against Child Labor

The California State Labor Bureau investigated complaints recently that women and children were required to work in motion picture studios from twelve to fifteen hours at a stretch with only enough time off to eat. As a result a letter of warning was dispatched to studio officials ordering them to comply with the statutes.

Changes in Paramount Sales Personnel

SEVERAL changes in the personnel of the Paramount sales department were announced this week by George W. Weeks, distribution manager of the company.

Phil Reisman, formerly general manager of Paramount Canadian Exchanges, has been appointed divisional sales manager at the home office, succeeding Harry Ballance, who requested transfer to a southern territory as district manager.

Morris Milligan, Paramount district manager of Cincinnati, Louisville and Indianapolis, has been advanced to the post vacated by Mr. Reisman. Charles Reagan, Paramount Indianapolis branch manager, has been appointed to Mr. Milligan's former office and F. E. Wagoner, Indianapolis salesman, will succeed Mr. Reagan.

Change in N. Y. State Censorship Commission

With the Democrats in control of the New York State Motion Picture Commission, further changes came during the past week when Ansel W. Brown, who has been in charge of the Albany office of the Commission, located in the State Capitol, was supplanted by Earl Leonard, of Saratoga Springs. The position pays $3,500 a year. Mr. Brown, who has been connected with the Albany office since the Commission was first organized in 1921, is well known throughout central and northern New York through his frequent visits to motion picture theatres. Mr. Brown plans to return to his home in Pulaski, and will probably enter the real estate business. No further changes are now expected in the Commission, owing to the fact that all other positions are under civil service.

Iowa Showman Not Guilty of Blue Law Violation

Deciding that a Marcus, Iowa, theatre man could not be held on charges of violating a local Blue Law because all admissions were collected on a week day although the picture was shown on Sunday, the justice of the Marcus court in Cherokee county, dismissed a charge brought against a theatre man of that town for running a show on Sunday.

The theatre man's plea was "not guilty" and was based on the fact that he had sold all tickets for the Sabbath show on week days preceding the performance and that no money was taken in exchange for admissions on Sunday.

Robertson Co. to Have Seven Detroit Theatres

The James N. Robertson Theatrical Enterprises, Detroit, Mich., will have seven theatres in that city, according to plans just announced.

The company is now operating the Cinderella and the DeLuxe. In August the New Roosevelt will be opened, and the company has announced that another house will be built at Charlevoix and Mt. Elliott. In addition to these there will be another house located on the east side and two more on the west side of the city.

Greater Movie Season Plans

By Will H. Hays,
President, Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc.

GREATER MOVIE SEASON has been tried. It has proved that it is profitable to all exhibitors who participate in it. In the Northwest, in the South, in California, large and small exhibitors, having seen direct and lasting good results, have also predicted still greater possibilities in the making of the season a national affair with a national service bureau to handle the details.

Exhibitors have requested me to establish that. Last year H. M. Richey, general manager of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Michigan, Inc., deferred a Greater Movie Season campaign until 1925 in order to have behind his effort the force of a national drive. In 1922 when I attended the opening of the "Northwest Go to Movie Week" in Minneapolis, W. A. Steffes, chairman of the Allied States Organization, pointed out how much could be achieved by complete cooperation. In Philadelphia and New Orleans, I am informed, similar movements were individually successful.

In San Francisco for three years, in Los Angeles and smaller California towns last year Greater Movie Season was a great stimulant and the men back of the campaigns have continually urged a National Movement.

Where exhibitors have united and worked in harmony, results never have failed to exceed expectations.

Greater Movie Season answers what many theatres have asked for: one undivided effort to lift summer business and build permanently throughout the Fall.

Bakersfield, Calif., concentrated upon Greater Movie Season last year and theatres there broke all house records, according to the statement of Harry C. Arthur, Jr., then general manager of West Coast Theatres, Inc. In other towns located in the same valley as Bakersfield where no effort was made, business remained poor.

What is true of Bakersfield may be true elsewhere.

Movie Season Campaign Launched in Chicago

LOUIS BRAGER, special representative for the M. P. P. D. A., reports that the Chicago campaign for the Greater Movie Season already is under way under the leadership of Ralph T. Kettering of Jones, Linick and Schaefer.

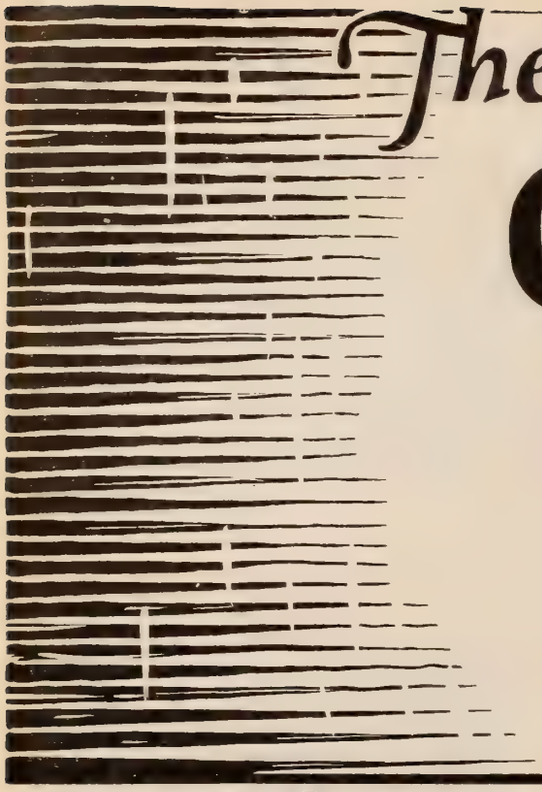
At a meeting of the Chicago publicity and exploitation men, presided over by Mr. Brager, Kettering was selected general manager, Louis P. Kramer, chairman of the publicity committee, and Dan Roche, Charles Raymond, Lloyd Lewis, Russell Moon, Al Sobler, and Harry Earle to the executive committee.

William Hollender of Balaban and Katz will supervise all advertising. According to tentative plans a mass meeting will be held this week with the leading Chicago exhibitors in attendance. The entire campaign will be outlined and funds raised to carry it to a successful conclusion.

Greater Movie Season presents no advantages that are exclusive to large theatre circuits, whose annual gross can pretty well be reckoned in advance and expenditures arranged to fit that figure. I have in mind the smaller exhibitor, working from month to month, who usually can hope only that July and August will be no worse than last year. Here we believe is a means that will make them better.

He can beat the summer depression by cooperating with his fellow exhibitors who face the same problems; by organizing a committee and appointing one general manager and allocating to each member some specific share of the local campaign for which we have laid the general foundation.

This national service bureau has no huge appropriation to spend. We have provided, however, the necessary funds for establishing a staff competent to secure, first, the active cooperation of public bodies with millions of members who naturally include their share of those who attend motion pictures only when specially urged; to effect commercial tie-ups by which national advertising and window displays throughout the United States will carry the "Go-to-Movies" theme; to provide advertising and publicity for exhibitors' own use; to syndicate and publish through newspapers and magazines material that will help to build respect and added patronage for motion pictures; to furnish exploitation service by mail, and in person when possible, to exhibitor committees; and to prepare for theatres posters and accessories that will be sold at cost.



The campaign has aspects wider than to increase patronage during a certain definite period. August has been chosen for the business stimulant which any great national drive coming at a more or less dead and unexpected time, must entail. Greater Movie Season begins then. It continues—not for a week or a month, but for as long as theatres, by the entertainment they afford, justify the enthusiastic support that this season will inspire nationally.

Our exploitation men will work with exhibitor committee. Our staff will continue to promote motion picture interest wherever the written or spoken word can aid in patronage and good-will; and I feel that to the extent that the theatres will accept that aid and operate collectively their business will reflect the effort.

The members of our association realize that in order for this campaign to be a success, they must supply pictures of a quality worthy of such a demonstration so that when the people go to see the Greater Movie Season pictures they will be satisfied that what we have said about the improvement in motion picture entertainment is true. The campaign will arouse interest in motion pictures, but it will be the programs themselves that will be the final testimony that will win the case.

THE GREATER FORTY

Lesser's Results

MORE than twenty per cent increase in profits during August, 1924, over August, 1923, at the West Coast Theatres, California, as a result of last year's Greater Movie Season, is reported by Sol Lesser. "Because the benefits of the season have been made so very certain to us, we are taking advantage of this business-getting opportunity this year with renewed vigor and enthusiasm," states Lesser.

Actual percentages of increase of some of the important West Coast houses over July, 1924, and August, 1923, are given in the following table:

Theatre	Pct of gain Aug. 1924 over July 1924	Pct of gain Aug. 1924 over Aug. 1923
California, Bakersfield....	67%	66.4%
California, Pomona.....	29.7%	76.2%
Strand, Los Angeles.....	7.8%	6.5%
Circle, Los Angeles.....	4.6%	11.5%
Wilshire, Los Angeles....	7.1%	18.3%
F. & D., Oakland.....	8.8%	41.7%
California, Stockton.....	16.1%	26.5%
San Jose, San Jose.....	18.3%	22.8%
Capitol, Redondo	4.9%	28.8%
Loew's State, Los Angeles	17.3%	17.8%

The average increase over the entire circuit, comparing August, 1924, with August, 1923, was 20.16%.

"We regard this increase in business as a genuine accomplishment," says Lesser, "particularly in view of the fact that in the majority of our theatres August has always been a poorer show month than July, and, too, this remarkable showing was made despite the depressed conditions following the hoof and mouth disease epidemic and the great drouth suffered by California last year, together with the generally unsatisfactory business conditions.

"We would also like to state that the business done during August of last year, as a result of the Greater Movie Season activities, was greater than that done during many of our fall months, when the motion picture business is at its peak.

"Last August initiated our participation in the Greater Movie Season activities, and was largely an experiment—the details not being thoroughly worked out. This year we are thoroughly organized and, having learned a great deal about its possibilities, we look for even greater results."

Newspaper Contest

A NATIONAL newspaper contest with a trip for two around the world as the capital prize and trips to Miami and Los Angeles for second and third, has been arranged as one of the interest-builders for Greater Movie Season. The Red Star liner, Belgenland, beginning her second world cruise November 25th, will carry the winners from New York to the Orient, India, Egypt and Palestine, Italy, the Riviera and Spain, returning to New York April 6th, after a tour of 132 days. First class expenses will be paid throughout, including shore excursions under the guidance of the American Express Company.

The winner of the second prize will have the choice of a trip for two to Los Angeles or Miami, while the third prize is whichever tour the second winner does not elect to take. The winners will be guests of the Miami or the Los Angeles Chambers of Commerce during two weeks with transportation and hotel expenses paid.

According to plans the Will H. Hays office has formulated, the contest takes the form of an essay on motion pictures, not longer than 300 words, and debars only professional writers and employees of theatres and newspapers that participate. It will be placed with one newspaper in each city or town where Greater Movie Season is celebrated, with preliminary announcements during July, and closing date towards the end of August. In addition to the principal prizes, local awards will be arranged—donations by stores, commercial firms and theatres—so that the extent of cooperation between merchants and theatre-owners may be widened immeasurably.

Working in conjunction with exhibitor-committees, the national bureau will handle details of syndication. A special press-sheet has already been prepared. Conditions governing the contest, feature stories and advertising displays for newspaper use, quite apart from theatre material are contained in this sheet. Pictorial one-sheet posters for newspaper delivery wagons, newsstands and billboards, together with slides to accord each cooperating theatre full benefit of the publicity, are included among the contest accessories.

As a means not only of promoting interest in advance but also of maintaining it throughout the season, this contest, which is perhaps the most ambitious yet attempted between newspapers and motion pictures, stands as one of the high-lights of the Greater Movie Season direct-to-the-public campaign.

Navy Co-operation

THE U. S. Navy has swung behind Greater Movie Season in battle formation. For the first time since the war—although in individual instances the Naval Recruiting Stations have lent their aid to specific pictures—a complete national tie-up has been effected between the movies and the marines. Washington, quick to appreciate the immense public interest the screen will command during July and August, has instructed all naval recruiting stations throughout the United States to display special posters linking Greater Movie Season with the fleet's Australasian Cruise.

No less than six thousand five hundred of these posters will occupy the navy's street-boards in almost every city from Coast to Coast.

"Greater Movie Season means better pictures on display. The Navy's Australasian Cruise shows the world in a navy way!"

That is the message the Navy will broadcast and each recruiting office stands ready to turn its efforts in such direction as exhibitor-committees may ask.

Noted Authors Helping

FAMOUS authors have agreed to write special stories for Greater Movie Season, supplementing the general newspaper features the press-sheet contains. Among those who will contribute, each in his or her particular and well-known style, are Rex Beach, George Barr McCutcheon, Cosmo Hamilton, Rita Weiman, Edwin Balmer, Temple Bailey, John Emerson and Anita Loos, Meredith Nicholson, Gerald Mygatt, Richard Connell, Elmer Davis, Thomas Dixon and Wallace Irwin, whose Japanese Schoolboy will discuss most learnedly the honorable pictures that motivate. Particular interest attaches to the birth of the motion pictures as covered in an illustrated article by Terry Ramsay, historian of the screen.

These stories will be syndicated from the Hays office on a regular releasing schedule, direct to theatres and exhibitors' committees, to be placed exclusively with local papers. Quite apart from regular picture patrons, the reading public is so familiar with the writers that their articles automatically influence the occasionals and absentees at whom the Greater Movie Season campaign is aimed.

Strong Advertisements

"TO clinch any campaign use newspaper advertising. To clinch this campaign use more!" says an ad-itorial that accompanies an unusual array of copy, designs and lay-outs for Greater Movie Season. "Every dollar spent means not only an immediate return but also a continuous return; for Greater Movie Season is institutional, not keyed to one picture or to five pictures but to a whole year's program. What you do now will build patronage permanently."

Thirty-five examples of advertisements, from full page smashes down to two-inch single-column teasers hit that objective. Sound constructive thought is evident throughout them—constructive but not ponderous; for the copy catches both the gala spirit of the occasion and the human-interest "behind the screen" appeal that registers with regular picture-goers no less strongly than with those who must be "sold."

Quoting the introduction of a full-page:

"Celebrate Greater Movie Season . . . . From yesterday's flickers to today's masterpieces—yes, real ones: . . . From penny arcades to theatres of ease and elegance where most of us go to see and be seen—and don't we? . . . . From the battered piano to splendid orchestras.

The drive's objective is well expressed. The new season's motion pictures have arrived; the improvement both on the screen and in the entertainment surrounding it is driven home by frank comparisons with movies as they used to be. That vein is followed in a quarter-page headed, "Don't long for the 'good old days!'" illustrating the entrance to an old nickelodeon in sharp contrast with a modern auditorium.

Copy that for three years has stood the test of Los Angeles and San Francisco campaigns will be immediately recognized by California exhibitors in the three-column advertisement, "Are You Behind the Times?" This is an appeal for fair judgment by people who are still prone to regard motion pictures from old-fashioned viewpoints. Experience on the coast showed that this persuasion won instant and favorable reaction. To repeat it, thus bringing it to the notice of all exhibitors, reveals a sound conception of responsibility on the part of the national service bureau.

"Entertainment is for sale and entertainment means just as much to the critics as to the friends of motion pictures," according to a statement from the Greater Movie Season bureau. "The man who rarely attends picture theatres may or may not have perfectly good reasons for his absence; but we have endeavored to present to him the very important facts that motion pictures today represent the efforts of leaders in every art, while, in most cases, the presentation of those pictures, the music and divertisement also entail considerably more thought than goes into the average theatrical performance at $2 a seat."

Many suggestions are made for cooperative advertising, chief of which is a full-page lay-out that should find ready acceptance by stores when newspaper space-sellers are enlisted with local activities. "Things are not as they used to be!" the streamer reads, and in individual lay-outs below latest models of men and women's clothes, automobiles, radios, phonograph records and electrical equipment are illustrated in striking contrast with their former styles. The copy for each store is written, requiring only the addition of names and addresses to complete the display. The central position tells of the new productions and the Greater Movie Season opening, with space to list current attractions.

Straight type ads, cartoon and teaser series, mailing card copy, program announcements, letters, proclamations for mayors to sign, all carry the diversity of appeal and the practical sense of showmanship that stamps the entire campaign.

Almost every piece of copy is interchangeable and equally adaptable to large and small spaces. The variety of cuts—twenty in all—range from half-column slugs up to seven columns; and what is highly important to exhibitors who may wish to alter the present lay-outs to suit their own particular style, no copy beyond the head-lines or the actual words "Greater Movie Season" has been worked into the illustrations.

As in the case of the posters, cuts and mats are available at cost price, through the cooperation the Western Newspaper Union has readily extended to the movement.

Special Press Sheet

WHAT might be called an achievement in press-sheets is the twenty-four publication that takes Greater Movie Season as an idea and carries it through every stage of development into the second and third weeks of its success. The full organization is detailed there. Contests and national cooperation are explained fully. Six pages of exhibitor advertising, three pages of publicity and feature stories, other pages closely packed with illustrated exploitation convey an impression of the enthusiasm with which the national service organization has tackled the job.

One significant feature of the sheet is the page of endorsements that Greater Movie Season has received from national executives and leaders of civic, commercial and social organizations, in letters to Mr. Will H. Hays. That compilation, presented as it is, should prove a convincing argument in the hands of committees when local campaigning is begun. No less than thirty great public bodies together with eight or ten State Governors and Secretary of Labor James J. Davis, have expressed themselves strongly in favor and support of the movement. These endorsements are being supplemented almost daily; others which have arrived since the sheet went to press will be placed in exhibitors' hands later.

The exploitation suggestions obviously have been written from the exhibitors' angle. They include no impossibilities. Full details even the wording of special song slides, etc., that accompanied the recent Balaban and Katz Old-Fashioned Movie show are presented with the thought that Greater Movie season, emphasizing the screen's general improvement, is a suitable occasion for such performances generally. Parade organization is dealt with extensively; methods of bannering and ballyhooing find liberal space.

How departmental cooperation can be enlisted and what to do with it when once it has been secured, lobby display, merchandising, every avenue that can be used profitably and every peg on which the Greater Movie Season message can be hung, are all gone into exhaustively, to the extent of nearly a hundred stunts.

The Navy Recruiting Poster for Greater Movie Season

Press sheets will be forwarded to exhibitors and committees on application to Jerome Beatty, Director Greater Movie Season, Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., 469 Fifth avenue, New York City.

Striking Posters

EXHIBITORS' advice—"Say it quickly, briefly, and use big type to drive it home"—governed the selection of Greater Movie Season posters from numerous block and pictorial sketches submitted by prominent New York artists. By a process of elimination, the block designs chosen follow a color scheme of blue and yellow with an additional red in the case of the twenty-four sheet.

This particular stand has been devised to meet requirements both of theatre groups and the individual house conducting the campaign. To balance a red-disk bearing the slogan, "Let's Go!" an unoccupied space is left to the upper right hand side where, it is suggested, the current attraction can be posted; also on a red disk, if the stand is used as part of one theatre's display; while for all purposes the "Let's Go!" message can be blocked out with a Second, Third and Fourth week announcement to carry the season along.

The block one-sheet and three-sheet combine visibility and poster-effect with a certain artistic distinction that will blend harmoniously with any lobby display.

On the four-color pictorial one-sheet the Girl in the Ticket-Box strikes a note familiar to every picture-goer. Passing a ticket across the marble slab with the happy "How Many?....Thank You!" around the aperture in the glass, she is an essential part of every theatre, typical of it, and in every way a sounder "selling argument" than the usual symbolic figure with a helmet, a spear and pennants of film.

By special arrangement with the Morgan Lithograph Co. of Cleveland, Ohio, a price of three cents a sheet has been fixed for block-posters, six cents for the four-color pictorial one-sheet and three cents for the window card.

Accessories Available

CANVAS banners and pennants head the list of Greater Movie Season accessories to which nearly every manufacturers of exhibitor material has made some cost-price contribution, with the result that twenty or more ticket-selling novelties are available.

The banner conforms to the blue and yellow poster scheme, while pennants come in blue, red, green and black. A set of four slides hits the idea from four different angles. Dr. Frank Crane, nationally famous editorial writer, has supplied a powerful article, "The Movies" for the two-color herald. Official booster-badges of gilt and buttons in two sizes, balloons, noise-making snapper-jacks, steel bells and Mutt-and-Jeff metal puzzles carry a variety of appeal.

Particular attention has been paid to material intended for store-window display. Two artistic efforts under this schedule are a 22 x 28-inch bas-relief piece depicting a theatre-interior and screen; and a 6 x 10-inch debossed mat sign, gold-letters on blue, "We join in Greater Movie Season. Let's go!" The former for lobby and hotel vestibule exhibition, the latter for stores generally should meet with ready acceptance.

Cloth flowers for decoration, stickers, paper hats and a walking doll for kiddies are included in the novelty division.

Two trailers, one of two hundred feet, the other one hundred, will provide entertainment in themselves, it is promised. After considerable research shots of the earliest productions and pictures of some of the movie stars of twenty-nine years ago have been unearthed. Appropriate text is employed to accentuate briefly but powerfully the tremendous advance achieved in the screen art, and the trailers close with a compelling piece of animated salesmanship on the entertainment that patrons can look forward to by the inauguration of Greater Movie Season.

Smith's Endorsement

GOVERNOR "AL" SMITH, of New York, is a movie-fan. He is more than that. He has his own projection machine. And his endorsement of Greater Movie Season is characteristic of him.

"Of course I believe in a Greater Movie Season.

"All of us are always hoping that the motion picture will realize the full extent of its genuine possibilities.

"If you are going to make this a season of better pictures I can look forward to some more entertaining evenings in my home with my picture machine.

"Naturally I wish the movement success."

A Correction

In "An Editor on Broadway" last week, K. W. Linn was inadvertently referred to as Export Manager of Universal Pictures Corporation. Mr. Linn is at present handling the foreign rights of the group of pictures purchased by Universal from Selznick Pictures Corporation. Universal's export manager is, and for some time has been, N. L. Manheim.

Say Quality Will Depend on Bookings

Independents Claim Exhibitor Demand Will Regulate Their Production Schedules Next Season

THAT the quality of feature attractions independents will make next year will be dictated by the exhibitors is the firm conviction of leading producers, distributors and exchange men in the independent field.

Independent producers are all set for a season of efficient picture-making and the facilities are at hand for the turning out of the highest quality of class A pictures if the exhibitors will encourage the plan by increasing their play dates on independent pictures. This is the unanimous opinion of several representative independents whose views were sought by MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

The fundamental reasons for the improved working conditions are that the independents now are organized, money for investment in their picture-making operations is available at reasonable rates of interest, and the independent producing companies are better equipped than they ever have been before.

The opinion given on the pictures which will be made next year concur to a degree in expressing the utmost confidence that the biggest theatres will be able to obtain an abundant supply of quality pictures from independent sources if the theatres signify their intentions of supporting the movement with increased play dates.

Some of the men whose opinion was solicited are quoted below.

Ben Amsterdam

"THE independents are geared to go. I have considered the announcements of many producers and on paper have figured it out that there will be an adequate supply of first-rate pictures to fill the demand should exhibitors go through with their announced intention of increasing independent play dates. But even more encouraging and convincing than these 'paper' considerations is the knowledge that these companies can make quality attractions. They have the organizations, the brains, the executive capacity and access to the necessary capital to make pictures that will compete with the best.

"Establish the assurance that a good independent picture can obtain bookings on something like an equal footing with those of the big distributing organizations, and the independents will improve their pictures and go on to further accomplishments in the future."

Harry Rathner

Pres. Astor Distributing Corp.

"THE necessity for the independent exhibitor to protect his own future by encouraging the independent producer and distributor has been urged so often and for so long that the arguments themselves have become time-worn. But the necessity is greater today than it ever was in the past, and so the arguments are more pertinent and convincing.

"The independent producers must be encouraged to carry on. They cannot be expected to progress or even exist if the exhibitor will not make an effort to give their pictures increased bookings, and if ever the independent producer passes from existence the independently owned and operated theatre must pass with him.

"By increased bookings, I mean an increase in the amount of money the theatre spends with a producer. Merely adding playing time to his allotment to the independent producer is not in itself sufficient. If the exhibitor will increase the amount of money which he spends with the independent by as little as ten per cent, that will be sufficient to encourage the producer to go on and develop gradually to a point where he may be depended upon absolutely to supply all the pictures necessary for all the theatres in the country."

Arthur Lee

Pres. Lee-Bradford Corp.

"IF the exhibitors increase their play dates on independent pictures there is only one course open to the independent producer and that is to make pictures which will compete at the box office with the best offerings of the big group.

"The situation is one which the independent may face with confidence, for there never has been any doubt about the ability of an independent to acquire first-rate box office attractions if the outlet was there for them.

"I have recently returned from abroad. The situation in England is one we might envy here. The theatres are absolutely open, I found, but there was room for only good pictures. Offer a really good picture and you were sure of bookings. Of the independent producer in this country I might say, show him the possibility for bookings and he will show you good pictures."

W. Ray Johnston

Pres. Rayart Pictures Corp.

"THE production schedules of independents for the coming year are dedicated to the policy of making greater pictures, on the theory that there will be greater opportunity for volume bookings.

"I do not believe independent producers and distributors seek more than fair competitive methods of business in the industry and they are ready to meet fairness with fairness, giving the exhibitor the benefit of a wider and more open market

"The Playdate Bureau will accomplish much for the independents. Its greatest work will be in the effort to open up territories which now are practically closed to independent productions. Through this closed situation the independent product is prevented from realizing much of its potential value. With these certain blocked territories opened up, the independent producer will realize the returns he has a right to expect from productions which have demonstrated their worth in other territories and the grade of pictures will steadily increase."

Bobby North

Apollo Exchange, New York

"THE quality of the independently produced pictures for next season rests with the exhibitors. The producers have the organizations, they can obtain the acting talent, the type of stories and the directors, to make box office attractions of the highest order. Whether they will do so is simply a question of available bookings.

"One thing is certain, there will not be a lack of good pictures to fill the increased dates if dates are forthcoming. The plans which the leading producers have announced will require no alteration whatsoever to bring out an adequate supply of first-rate attractions. The stories they have announced include several of the most promising sort as material for high class pictures. If they are encouraged to spend the money in producing those stories they will make fine product."

Jesse Goldberg

Pres. Independent Pictures Corp.

"THE best answer as to what may be expected from independent producers next year is the fact that the majority of them made profits last year. Therein lies the key to the main situation, which is financing. With proper financing facilities the independent producers can and will make good pictures.

"Taking the situation on a conservative basis the increase of 25% of the playing time accorded independent productions will more than cover the increase in capital which this year will be invested in independent films.

"The saving grace, the factor which makes it certain that there will always be an opportunity in the motion picture industry for the independent, is the fact that the public demands variety in its amusement. The more companies there are producing pictures the more variety there will be in pictures and if the theatre has the opportunity to select the choice productions from a great number of producing organizations the more certain is that theatre of being in a position to give its public, which after all is the factor which rules the industry, the variety it not only desires but demands."

Sam Sax

Pres. Lumas Film Corp.

"IF THE exhibitors elect to do so they may vote the straight independent ticket and make immediate profits as well as secure profitable returns on their investments in the future.

"By this I mean the independent market will supply theatres with all the first run pictures necessary to its success. Box office titles, stories providing the all-necessary exploitation 'angles,' players of general and widespread popularity among the screen patrons, directors capable of making the kind of production the public demands, all these things are within the reach of the independent producer.

"The flexibility of the independent producing organization in itself is a great factor contributing toward the ideal of pictures which will please the public. The independent is a more plastic operator, is quicker to sense the trend of public taste, and better equipped to take advantage of it by suiting his pictures to popular demand than the great, highly organized and cumbersome machines which have been built up by the producers in the big group."

Laemmle Urges Summer Sales

Creates Sales Trophy as Stimulant to Exchange Activities During Hot Months

FOR the purpose of stimulating Universal exchanges to greater interest and sales activity during the summer months Carl Laemmle has created a Sales Trophy to be held for one year by the exchange which does the best work each summer. The Trophy will be a silver ornament valued at $10,000.

Each year the trophy will be awarded to the exchange leading in the amount of business done during the summer period, the name of the winning exchange being engraved on the ornament, which will remain in possession of that branch until the following year.

The Universal exchanges have received instructions to bend their activities towards a country-wide observation of Greater Movie Season. It is expected that this event will materially aid exchanges in getting business during the month of August.

In addition to the first White List, which are available at Universal exchanges for summer showing, there will be a number of western features for the sales force to use as a basis of increased sales during the next few months. Another aid to the exchanges which Universal banks upon as added material for increased sales this summer is the Complete Service Plan, recently put into effect by the company.

Mayer Discusses Production

Says Studio Organization is Basis of Successful Photoplay Making

ORGANIZATION is responsible for the success of motion pictures exactly as machiery is responsible for the successful running of a ship, according to Louis B. Mayer, vice president of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

"No captain could pilot a ship alone," declares Mr. Mayer, "and to make successful pictures the director must have a complete organization in back of him. The greatest generals, in war, finance and industry, never tried to do anything single-handed; why should it be assumed that the motion picture industry is different in fundamental principles from those of any highly technical business?

"Our whole organization, for instance, is devoted to one thing: helping the director make a good picture. We do this by working with him on the selection of his stories, and seeing to it that the story has the proper requisites before actual production commences. This is where our box office knowledge is valuable, for where he has made, or is making, one picture, we have made dozens and know the elements that make for popularity.

"In casting, we have studied the qualities and values of our players, and we thus know how a cast should be balanced to get the maximum from it; in all the details of production our judgments are based from the experience derived from handling hundreds of similar incidents, and the directors realize the value of this, for we are really sharing their burdens to help them.

"Of course, we make mistakes. Everyone does, for the human race is still fallible, but in our organization the responsibilty is so divided that errors as well as benefits, are shared.

"Someone must stand apart from the director to get a separate viewpoint on his work and to see it with unprejudiced eyes; he cannot do it, because it is his own and because he is bound up with it. We have competent executives to do this, whose wide knowledge of production allows them to advise and counsel our directors.

"To sum up, we expect our directors to devote all their artistry to their pictures, and to leave to others in our organization the worries of the details, which by virtue of their experience, they are more competent to deal with."

With five new units recently started on productions for the new Warner Brothers' program, the company's big plant in Hollywood has every bit of studio space occupied with production work.

Weekly Edition of Exhibitors' Box Office Reports

Productions listed are new pictures on which reports were not available previously.

For ratings on current and older releases see MOTION PICTURE NEWS—first issue of each month.

KEY—The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage rating of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

Something new in co-operative pages was devised by A. J. Sharick, Universal exploiteer, for the "Oh, Doctor," engagement at the Liberty, Youngstown, Ohio. Sharick sold 11 ads of sizes varying from quarter pages to single columns, but instead of having them concentrated on one page, he had them laid out on two pages in regulation pyramid style with reading matter surrounding them. Each page carried a publicity story on the picture, and each ad had "Oh, Doctor" inserted in a prominent place.

A contest was also run in connection with the pages. The announcement said that since the picture play dealt with a man who imagined he had all kinds of chronic ailments, the contest would be for an essay or outline of not more than 300 words on the theme: "Why should a person enjoy perfect health who patronizes advertisers on this page and the page opposite?" One of the requirements was that "each entry sent in must mention the article or articles advertised on these pages and tell why each should help to keep one healthy, and each advertisement on these pages must be covered in the essay."

Two cash prizes of $15 and $10 and a number of ticket awards were distributed among the winners.

"Lady of the Night" Copy Aimed at U. S. Sailors

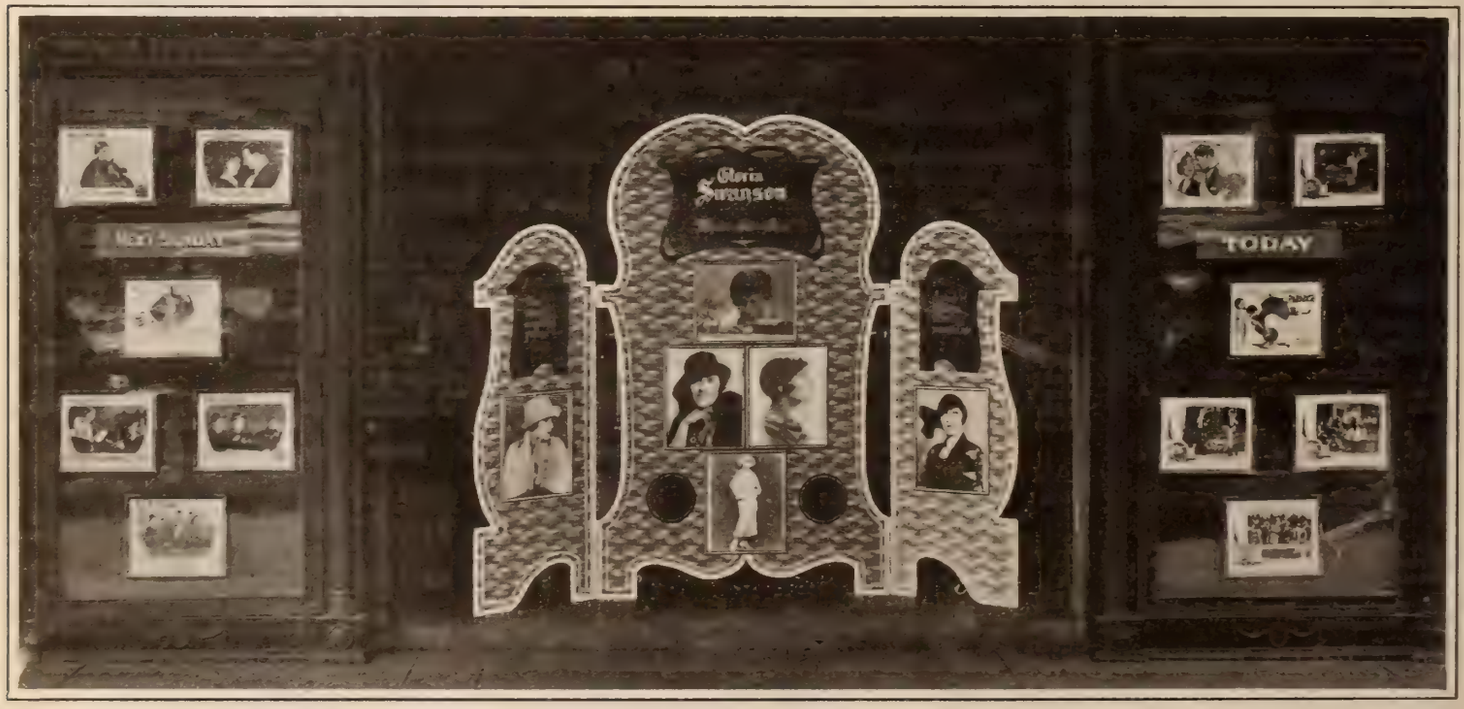
When more than 30,000 sailors were recently given shore leave daily at San Diego, Cal., where "Lady of the Night" was playing at the Plaza theatre, bids for this trade were made by Manager C. C. Struble of the theatre and H. D. McBride, Metro-Goldwyn exploiteer. The interest of thousands of visitors to a series of important horse races of Tia Juana was also captured by this campaign.

The catchline, "The world was her hunting ground—men her prey," was used in all advertising, while the lines "Welcome, Navy" and "Men of the U. S. Navy will find much to enjoy in 'Lady of the Night'" were also featured. Five thousand heralds were distributed among the heavy automobile and pedestrian traffic, and in view of the fact that on the opening night of the attraction thousands of sailors and civilians were unable to obtain hotel accommodations, an all night performance was given. The electric lights above the theatre announcing this circumstance were put on at about ten o'clock in the evening, thereby preventing opposition theatres from using the idea.

In keeping with the title of the photoplay the lights in the theatre lobby were changed to blue, with signs on the marquee in red. Two street lamps, similar to those featured in the picture, were placed on the edge of the sidewalk with a red light, while eighteen-inch letters in red lighting carried the title on the top of the theatre. A heavy newspaper campaign supplemented these features.

Manager Barry Burke of the Palace theatre, Fort Worth, built a reproduction in his lobby of a dealer's window display on "The Dressmaker from Paris" (Paramount).

Striking Marquee Flash on "The Lady" by Schade



George J. Schade made up his mind to let the people of Sandusky, O., know in good time that "The Lady" was to be an attraction at his Schade theatre, and when George J. makes up his mind to do a thing—well, it's as good as done.

Schade started off by running small ads in the Sandusky newspapers; sort o' ticklers as it were. Then he ran ads a little larger.

Reading matter, the most of which Schade himself got up and had printed, was distributed from house to house not only in but all around Sandusky, and the streets of the city fairly shouted "Norma Talmadge in 'The Lady' at the Schade Theatre Soon," for banners and picture layouts in huge frames were placed here, there and everywhere.

The thing that attracted more attention than anything else, however, was a "flash" that Schade had put on both sides of the Schade's marquise. This attractive business puller was designed by Schade and executed by a young man by the name of Skidmore, whom Schade recently pulled away from Findlay, Ohio. Anything that Schade can design Skidmore can make, and so, the combination is a hard one to beat. But, as to the "flash," or "flashes," for there were two of them; there was a huge likeness of Miss Talmadge at one end; a likeness done in colors and so well done that it not only caught the eye but caused a lot of talk besides. Running up to the picture was a sign, "Norma Talmadge in 'The Lady,'" painted in white on a black background. Letters and picture were so illuminated with frosted electric light lamps that the layout on the whole was a thing of beauty by day and a knockout by night.

There wasn't a little part of the busy Market street shopping section from which the Schade's "The Lady" show-off could not be seen.

Special advance display board was used with attractive effect by Manager H. C. Farley of the Empire theatre, Montgomery, Ala., to advertise the engagement of "Madame Sans Gene" (Paramount) at that house, using star portraits rather than scene stills.

Title Writing Contest for "Zander" in Baltimore

Attention was drawn in Baltimore to the Century and Parkway theatres when "Zander the Great" played simultaneously at these two houses by an elaborate campaign staged by Norman W. Pyle, Metro-Goldwyn exploiteer.

A title-writing contest was run in the Baltimore News, the best five titles submitted daily for the picture being published and awarded two free tickets. This contest proved so successful as to win enthusiastic comment from Managing Editor McCabe of the News. Cuts and notices appeared daily in the dramatic sections of both the News and the American.

On the Sunday preceding the opening a cross word puzzle contest was run in the American to which thousands of answers were received. The correct solutions were awarded free tickets. A special story on this contest and a photo showing the pile of answers received found space in the paper. Special stories were published in both the News and American throughout the week, one of which included a photograph of Joe Weber and Lew Fields buying tickets at the Century box office to see the picture. An inquiring reporter, reports of patrons on the picture and an inquiring photographer furnished material for these stories.

The Luxor cabs carried strips on the back of each cab reading "Special taxi cab service all week to the Century theatre to see Marion Davies in 'Zander the Great,'" and a photograph of ten of these taxis lined up and full of people was carried with a special story in the Baltimore News. The critics' reports were broadcast by radio on the Tuesday of the week of the showing.

Thirty-five 24-sheets were posted and innumerable small posters also helped exploit the showing. Window cards were also distributed.

Co-operative tie-up with a local drug store on a window display for "Madame Sans Gene" (Paramount) at the Empire theatre, San Antonio, of which Vinton Sholl is manager. The display centered about perfume, the Sans Gene souvenir coins and late photos of the star.

Beauty Shop in Lobby as "Mad Whirl" is Shown

A tiny beauty shop, installed in the lobby, dispensing free marcel waves to women patrons who bought theatre tickets, was the exploitation A. H. Blank, manager, and Jack Edwards, Universal exploiteer, arranged for "The Mad Whirl" when it played the Rialto theatre, Des Moines.

The tie-up was made with Shinn, Lorenzen and Shinn, beautifiers to the Four Hundred. One of the Misses Shinn was in attendance daily during the afternoon and evening and cards were distributed which entitled women ticket purchasers to a special discount at the beauty shop. A large card illustrated with photographs in the Shinn shop called attention to the Rialto engagement. Advertisements were run on the society page both Sunday and Monday.

Through an arrangement with the Fashion Hosiery shop a pair of all-silk chiffon hose was given free to every bride of the week who registered at the Rialto box-office. There was also a large display of fine hosiery at the shop with a card announcing that similar hose was worn in "The Mad Whirl."

A tie-up with the largest furniture store in Des Moines procured a phonograph for the lobby which, supplied with the proper records, gave a jazz tone to the engagement. The store also used a window display and an inside flash.

A real "circus" front was given "The Great Circus Mystery" (Universal) when that picture opened at the Bijou theatre, Trenton, N. J., as shown here. The marquee was dropped to resemble the "big top".

"Quo Vadis" Screened for Philadelphia Clergy

Philadelphia clergymen were given a special morning showing of "Quo Vadis" as guests of the North American, during the run at the Arcadia theatre. More than 400 members of the clergy accepted the invitation from the editor of the North American and were present. Edgar Wolf, of the Stanley company, welcomed the clergymen in a brief address and assured them it was the desire of the company to co-operate with the clergy in the presentation of films for the public satisfaction.

The tie-up with the newspaper, which was arranged by A. P. Waxman, First National representative, at no cost at all, was the means of producing some excellent newspaper publicity as well as obtaining much mouth-to-mouth advertising from the ministers. Some of those who attend the special performance made mention of the picture in their Sunday sermons.

Teaser Poster Interests on "Thier in Paradise"

A feature of the exploitation campaign for "A Thief in Paradise" used by Manager Al Lever of the Isis theatre Houston, Texas, was a special teaser poster. He had fourteen signs, four feet high and ten feet long painted and placed at the entrance of each parking zone of the city five days before the opening of the picture. The poster was divided into panels by a blank strip horizontally through the centre. Above this strip was painted "Beware of a Thief." Underneath the strip was this warning, "Park your car inside—Play safe." On the day of the opening, Lever had the following painted in the strip through the center of the poster, "See 'A Thief in Paradise.' Isis Now Playing."

A diamond shaped card reading "Beware of 'A Thief in Paradise,' Isis theatre" with the word thief played up big was dropped inside and fastened to doors of all automobiles parked uptown starting three or four nights in advance of the showing.

A window display was obtained in a main street music store of the song "A Thief in Paradise" together with a card calling attention to the showing of the picture at the Isis. A card was also used on the music mounter.

During the showing of "A Thief in Paradise," Manager Lever turned the lobby of his theatre into a motion picture studio, with two arc lamps and a motion picture camera and took photographs of the patrons of his theatre announcing that the pictures would be shown on the screen throughout the following week.

Fac Simile Licenses Boost "So This is Marriage"

Ten thousand marriage licenses exploiting "So This is Marriage" were recently distributed with excellent effect in Detroit, Mich., where this production played at the Broadway Strand. This feat, achieved by Albert Kaufman, Metro-Goldwyn exploiteer, aroused much amused comment and interest in the picture.

A young couple in wedding finery were driven about the streets during the week preceding the showing in a machine decorated with white ribbon and old shoes. Across the back of the auto was a banner announcing the engagement. A press campaign, liberal posting and a furniture store tie-up completed this campaign.

Striking atmospheric lobby display by Manager Don Barhydt of the Palace theatre, Meriden, Conn., on "Salome of the Tenements" (Paramount).

Taxi Firm Makes Tie-up on "Seven Chances" Stunt

Cloth banners reading "Buster Keaton Took 'Seven Chances' But Our Drivers Never Take Any," were carried on the backs of 75 Red Top taxicabs in St. Paul, when "Seven Chances," played recently at the Tower theatre, in accordance with terms secured by Morris Abrams, Metro-Goldwyn exploiteer. These banners were carried into all parts of the city throughout the week of the showing and achieved widespread exploitation for the picture. A number of these banners were also carried by personal cars about town.

Extra space was taken in both dailies and a trailer was used in the theatre. The town was liberally posted and there was a special lobby display of special cut-outs. Three window displays helped exploit the showing also.

Manager Mick of the Tower co-operated actively with Abrams throughout the campaign.

Live Children in Window as "New Toys" Stunt

G. A. Cross, manager of the Garden theatre, Battle Creek, Mich., gave "New Toys," a window display in the Holly Heiman store which excited much interest and attracted passers-by to gaze into the window.

A low picket fence, painted white, was erected in the store's corner window. In it was placed several toys such as delight the hearts of children—a teddy bear, balls, etc. A boy and a girl were allowed to play with the toys in the window. In the background was a large card carrying the name of the star, theatre and title of the picture. The title was composed of letter blocks, each block carrying a letter of the title.

This realistic miniature railroad was furnished by the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad to exploit "Excuse Me" (Metro-Goldwyn) at the Tower theatre, St. Paul, and on the strength of it, the display was gotten into the window of the Cable Piano company.

Exhibitors Box-Office Reports

METRO-GOLDWYN

Greed—
Very morbid picture. Business was off throughout the week. (Middle West.)

They didn't think much of this one in this town. Business, very poor. (Middle West.)
The Beauty Prize—
Confessions of a Queen—
Extremely interesting romance, although at times burdened with unnecessary complications. Alice Terry and Lewis Stone add greatly to film's success. (Middle West.)

F. B. O.

The Bandit's Baby—
A very good western. Fine reports from the box office. (West.)

This is a fairly interesting movie, but couldn't compete with the rising temperature. (Middle West.)
The Night Club—
Generally conceded to be one of the funniest comedies of the year.

Madame Sans Gene—
While not as good as some of this star's former pictures still it has its good points and star is liked. (West.)
The Crowded Hour—
This drew fairly well on the average. Bebe Daniels gives excellent performance. (South.)

Old Home Week—
Meighan is well cast and his admirers liked the picture very much. (Middle West.)
The Charmer—
Patrons liked Pola in this her latest feature. Business was fair. (Middle West.)
The Spaniard—
Cortez well liked by our audiences in The Spaniard. Heat made business poor. (Middle West.)
A Kiss In The Dark—
Voted to be excellent hot weather fare. The suave Menjou is always likable although the plot bore nothing more than a forced suggestion of the original stage play. (Middle West.)

STATE RIGHTS

The Wizard of Oz—

Not enough of the dog in this picture. Otherwise it is entertaining. Didn't do much business though, because it was too hot. (Middle West.)

The Lady—
Patrons didn't like Norma in this English story of a rather depressing nature. Business off which is unusual for this house when Norma appears. (East.)
I Want My Man—
More triangle stuff over which audiences did not enthuse. Business off. (East.)
Patrons seemed to like it. Fair business. (Middle West.)
The Necessary Evil—
An average picture of its type. Business held up. (Middle West.)
Soul-Fire—
This is a bigger picture than "Tol'able David" and entirely up to the standard of this star's features. But the crowd didn't hear about it and hot weather kept a lot away. Pretty warm. (Middle West.)
Dick Barthelmess comes back after "New Toys," and again proves himself a real actor. Business good despite warm weather. (East.)
Pleased many patrons. Heavy drama for hot weather. (Middle West.)
Great bit of acting contributed by Barthelmess. Box office reports great. (Middle West.)

An excellent production with Hope Hampton doing well as the star. Very good attendance for the week. (South.)
Back to Life—
Introduce Me—
This is one dandy comedy and a rare laughmaker. Those who saw it were enthusiastic about it. But it's hard to drag them indoors in this warm weather. A good clean picture. (Middle West.)
The Sky Raider—
Melodrama of the most lavish type. Much of the local success of the film was due to the personal appearance of the star, Captain Nungesser, French air hero. (Middle West.)

WARNER BROS.

Recompense—
An average picture. No business with the thermometer flirting with the 100 degree mark. (Middle West.)
Kiss Me Again—
One of the best comedy-dramas shown here in some time. They all liked it. (West.)

Short Subjects and Serials

Century Lists Four for June

Two Reel Comedies Starring Wiley, Gordon, Marian and Darling on Current Schedule

A GROUP of four two-reel comedies is announced for release through Universal by the Century Comedies for the month of June. They are "Speak Freely" which stars Edna Marian, "Kicked About" with Eddie Gordon in the stellar role, "Gridiron Gertie" in which Wanda Wiley is starred and "Married Neighbors" with Constance Darling as the featured player.

The first release is a "bride and groom" picture, "Speak Freely," and stars Edna Marian. It was directed by William Watson, with Al Alt and Hilliard Karr in the chief supporting roles. It recounts the adventures of a young bride and groom whose parents visit them just after their first marital spat.

The second is "Kicked About," starring Eddie Gordon. Larry Richardson has the chief supporting role, and the comedy was directed by Noel Smith. The two-reeler gives Eddie ample opportunity to do many of his funny acrobatic stunts and shows him as an amateur detective in one mix-up after another.

"Gridiron Gertie," is set for release June 17. This one stars Wanda Wiley, showing her as a foot-ball substitute. Edward I. Luddy directed.

The last June release is another "June bride" comedy entitled "Married Neighbors," and was directed by Charles Lamont. Constance Darling is the featured player, with Billy Engle and Hilliard Karr as the chief support.

Christie Bans Broadcasting

Will Not Permit Players Under Contract to Appear on Air Programs

AL CHRISTIE has come out flat-footedly against radio appearances by players under exclusive contract to the Christie organization. He has banned them from going on the air on the plea that it is unfair to motion picture exhibitors. In a statement on his stand, Christie said:

"After going into the matter of radio carefully it seems to us that the competition radio programs are giving the motion picture theatres more than outweighs the publicity the players and pictures gain by doing the broadcasting. After all we are in the motion picture business and we can better devote our efforts to picture making if we do not dissipate the players' time by working them in getting up stunts and numbers for broadcasting.

"What our own organization does in this matter will not have any great effect on radio programs and will certainly not make or break the air programs that are being broadcast from Los Angeles and Hollywood. However, in our small way we do not wish to give the motion picture exhibitor any more competition than he already has.

"It is still an open argument the amount of box office money the radio takes from motion picture theatres. We are not convinced radio does not keep certain people from going to the theatre a few nights a week and it is our firm belief the picture industry will soon have to make up its mind whether or not it will lend its talent for the bolstering of air programs."

Clara Horton Leading Lady in Walter Hiers Comedy

Clara Horton, who made her debute on the screen as a child star and is now one of the rising ingenues of the screen, has been chosen for the role of leading lady opposite Walter Hiers in "Oh Bridget," which will be a July relase on the Educational program.

Three of the leading episodes from "Lost—A Wife," a Paramount production.

International Films Big Aerial Spectacle

Probably for the first time in history a smoke screen was thrown about a dirigible when Naval officials blanketed the huge Los Angeles with a dense smoke as it flew over Washington on June 3. The spectacle was filmed by International Newsreel as an exclusive feature for its topical reels for last week.

The demonstration was arranged by the Bureau of Aeronautics, U. S. Navy, and the Marine Corps, at the suggestion of International Newsreel.

Navy officers said that the demonstration would prove of incalculable value, while motion picture experts declared the picture to be among the most beautiful and thrilling ever made.

Stage Stunt Scenes for New Pathe Serial

Stunt scenes for "Play Ball," the new Pathe serial based on a story by John J. McGraw, were staged on the Harlem river near New York during the past week. The filming attracted huge crowds which cheered the stirring fight episodes enacted by Walter Miller, leading man, and several opponents.

The picture is in its eighth week of production under the direction of Spencer Bennett. Allene Ray will be starred. The first chapter of "Play Ball" will be released on July 9th.

Pathe Announces June 21 List

Two Hal Roach Comedies Top Program of Diversified Short Subjects

TWO Hal Roach Comedies head the program of short subjects which Pathe has announced for release during the week of June 21. The list also includes the seventh chapter of "Sunken Silver," Pathe's current serial play, a Pathe Review, an "Aesop Film Fable," "Topics of the Day" and the regular two issues of Pathe News.

The Roach contributions are a two-reel comedy, starring Glenn Tryon, and titled "Thundering Landlords," and a single-reeler, with James Finlayson featured, called "Into the Grease."

Tryon appears as the head of a family which has incurred the wrath of their landlord and therefore is forced to move into their own unfinished and unfurnished house. Fay Wray appears in the leading feminine role and others prominent in the cast are Noah Young, Irene Allen, Marjorie Whiteis, "Husky" Hanes, and James Finlayson. "Thundering Landlords" was directed by James W. Horne.

The single-reel picture was produced under the direction of Jay A. Howe. Finlayson is supported by a group of well known Roach comedians.

"Face to Face" is the title of the seventh episode of "Sunken Silver," which is based on the Albert Payson Terhune novel, "Black Caesar's Clan." The opening scenes of the chapter show the star, Allene Ray, trapped in a tunnel under a Florida swamp and the following action reveals the heroism of the hero to release her from the grip of the Black Clan.

The Pathe Review No. 25 shows another subject taken by the Alvin V. Knechtel "process-camera." In "The Mystic Menagerie," produced at the Selig Zoo in Los Angeles, leopards are featured in marvelous trick scenes. The Pathecolor feature brings one to "The Land of Eternal Summer," Pau in the foothills of the Pyrenees and another of the "Here Comes the Bride" series is presented. "The Dutch Bride" is revealed and the customs and costumes are authenticated by the Holland Society of New York

"The Runaway Balloon" is the latest of the "Aesop's Film Fables" and tells the timely moral "A loud speaker is a sound investment." The Pathe release schedule for June 21st is completed by "Topics of the Day" and Pathe News Nos. 52 and 53.

Pre-release Reviews of Features

(Berger Prod.-Associated Exhibitors—Six Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

A PICTURIZATION of the same story in which Norma Talmadge appeared way back in the old Triangle days and which has now been given a modern tinge. The picture also serves to bring Louise Glaum back to the silver sheet. It opens with a camera tour of the French capital, showing us views of the points of interest in the upper and lower world.

The tale, as will be recalled by some of the old timers, has as its theme, "what is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander." An American millionaire visiting in Paris meets, and later weds a mannequin-dancer, but tiring of her "steps out" with a beautiful divorcee. The wife decides to do the same thing, and after the husband's jealously has been aroused and he learns that the "framing" of his wife and "the other man" was just a trick of his new flame, there is a reconciliation.

Hope Hampton has the leading feminine role and during the action of the story displays a great array of latest styles for milady direct from the fashion centers of Europe. These gowns and jewels will be a good selling point with which to interest women patrons. Opposite Miss Hampton is Lionel Barrymore who gives a clear-cut characterization of the role of Harmon, millionaire. Miss Glaum is adequate as the vamp, while Arthur Donaldson and J. Moy Bennett inject the comedy element.

There are some interesting scenes in the cafes of the Parisian underworld which have been filled with realistic color. There are shots of mannequins displaying gowns in a Paris atelier which suggest a style show as an exploitation theme. There are apache dances which give opportunity for some fine musical accompaniment.

THEME. A society drama in which a wife finding her husband falling for the other woman gets him back on his feet by stepping out with another man.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The scene of Paris above and below the boulevards. The scenes in the fashion emporium. The Apache dances in Montmartre. The framing of the wife and "the other man." The gowns and jewels worn by Miss Hampton. The appearance of Louise Glaum.

DIRECTION. Has succeeded in injecting a Parisian atmosphere in this one which also contains enough action to hold the interest as well as a wealth of novelty.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up the names of the stars and emphasize the return to the screen of Louise Glaum. Put on a style show. Stage an apache dance as a prologue. Use stills of Miss Hampton for foshion ads.

DRAWING POWER. Should do business in most houses with a little exploitation. Should go good in the towns where its Parisian atmosphere will arouse interest.

SUMMARY. A good program picture which, because of its large number of exploitation angles, should be developed into a good box office feature. There is a good cast, an interesting, if not overly original plot.

Speed Wild

(Harry Garson Production-F. B. O.—Five Reels)

(Reviewed by William Campbell)

THIS is a mighty good program picture with "Lefty" Flynn in his best role to date. The picture lives up to its title from beginning to end. It opens with "Lefty" doing his stuff in a speedy car along the California coast boulevard with a speed cop doing 70 or so to overtake him. Then enters the element of mystery as "Lefty" spies some suspicious looking characters sending light signals to a schooner off shore. Then a member of the motorcycle squad is beaten up by the smugglers and "Lefty" offers to take his place and hunt down the law-breakers.

He soon meets up with the foe, but in chasing them in a fleeing motor car he is forced off the road, over a cliff and down into the sea. This thriller is "shot" from above and shows "Lefty" diving into the water. It is a clever bit of camera work. But this incident only spurs "Lefty" on to greater efforts and soon we find him in Chinatown where he unearths the information that the villain who has been paying attention to his sweetheart is the "brains" of the smuggling outfit.

"Lefty" also finds his fiancee's long lost brother and then there is a fast and action-packed climax in which the hero dashes to the rescue of the kidnaped heroine in which sequence he beats up the whole gang in an underground cave with the whole motorcycle squad arriving just in time to lend a helping hand in the free-for-all.

"Lefty" is supported by an excellent cast. Dorothy Dwan is attractive as the heroine. There is some good comedy injected by Raymond Turner, a comedian of dusky shade, who has been appearing to advantage in several recent Flynn offerings.

THEME. A comedy drama in which a scion of the idle rich with a mania for speed volunteers to act as a member of the motorcycle squad and help to clean up a gang of Chinese picture bride smugglers.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The scene in which "Lefty" is forced off the road and dashes from a cliff into the sea. The fight in Chinatown as "Lefty" rescues his sweetheart's brother. The second battle at the climax when "Lefty" takes on the whole gang to save his fiancee.

DIRECTION. Harry Garson has turned out a picture that is fast moving and keeps the star on the jump from first to last shot. He has given the film an attractive mounting and has inspired the cast to enter into the "speed" idea.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Have a truck drag a battered motor car thru the streets, labeled "This is what happened to a man who was SPEED WILD. See the picture at, etc." Have a man drive a high powered racing car about town with a motorcycle cop behind him and with suitable advertising on the speedster.

DRAWING POWER. Good warm weather entertainment for the program houses.

SUMMARY. Flynn is going to win a lot of new admirers with this picture which has a bunch of thrillers in it and keep things moving "on high." There is a good cast and a pretty heroine. The backgrounds are realistic and colorful. The climax brings the picture to a peppy close.

THE CAST

Jack Ames.....Lefty Flynn
Mary Bryant.....Ann May
Wendell Martin.....Frank Elliott
Herbert Barron.....Charles Clary
Charles Bryant.....Ralph McCullough

(Paramount—6800 Feet)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

ANOTHER bid has been made to the intelligence in this fantastic conception. Some will argue that it is far in advance of its time. But the only method to appeal to the imagination is by giving picturegoers such inventive subjects as this in small doses, thus awakening a response for something unusual. "Beggar on Horseback" follows the play by Messrs. Kaufman and Connelly in all its detail, besides carrying on the spirit of the original. The authors satirizing "big business," boobery, and babbittry with bitter irony. Their weapon was fantastic ridicule. But it is problematical how this picture will be received—whether audiences will catch the deep-seated irony back of it. There is no denying, however, that it makes a strong play upon the imagination.

James Cruze was the proper choice to mould this play into a picture. He's had experience with this sort of "nut" story in "Hollywood," a film which also revolved around a nightmare. And he's caught the authors' idea and embellished it with some imaginative touches of his own. If the picture lacks the vitality of the play it is because the carrying out of the jazz spirit cannot be expressed without noise—much noise and much confusion. Here the composer, his nerves on the breaking point, wants peace and transquility. He falls asleep and a weird nightmare envelops his mind. His ideals are shattered as he sees himself sold on the altar of Big Business. He makes futile gestures to escape (these ironic twists may escape the average mind) and finally in despair kills his wife and in-laws. With his awakening comes appreciation of the sympathetic girl across the hall. And a check from the music publishers brings success and happiness.

Where it falters is in its repetition—or the different adventures awaiting the dreamer—the only variety being in the settings. Cruze has taken the only course possible to keep one interested by bringing emphasis upon the backgrounds. The humor, naturally, is not so broad in the silent version. Admitting that it may not break box-office records it stands, nevertheless, as a milestone among artistic creations.

THEME. Comedy satire on conflict between an idealist and those who would mould his destiny—blessed as they are with wealth.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The imagination in the design of the sets and atmosphere. The dream—and the wild, crazy adventures of the composer.

DIRECTION. Shows rare invention in taking humorous fantasy and bringing out the correct spirit of play. Emphasizes the irony and humor. Creates some bizarre sets to fit the mood of the story. Shows results in every department.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Needs heavy exploitation as a radical departure from the conventional stuff. Play up as a distinct novelty. Put on a pantomime suggested in the pantomime of picture.

DRAWING POWER. For highclass audiences. Distinctly for the highbrows in its theme though the treatment should appeal to most adult minds.

SUMMARY. Something different. Points irony and fantastic humor in treatment of play. Presents unusual sets and atmosphere—showing fine invention by director. Capitally played—with humor and pathos excellently balanced. Out of the ordinary in its production values.

Feels unable to continue romance with sympathetic girl through lack of funds. Is about to consider marrying a rich girl who worships jazz when he falls asleep and dreams a horrible nightmare. His fanastic adventures while unconscious lead him to kill his oppressors. He awakens to appreciate the sympathetic girl and seek happiness with her when his publishers reward him with royalties.

Wildfire

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

RACETRACK stories don't seem to have any more variation of plot and characters than the average western. They are all identical in pattern. The horse must be in constant danger from poison or fire—through the devilish scheming of the villain and it must win the race to lift its owner out of debt. That's the plan followed here—and if you can overlook its obvious plotting and the string of convenient episodes that stress the villainy and paint the hero in a bad light you will be fairly well entertained. For one thing it has some honest-to-goodness atmosphere since the Oriental track at Havana serves as a background. Moreover, it is good in its lighting and photography.

The characters, however, are not drawn as very intelligent. It doesn't seem reasonable that the fair owner of Wildfire could be so gullible as to believe the villain one moment, defy him the next—and then carry out the same attitude with the hero. There is a bitter feud between these two men—the hero having the inside track even though he has been absent five years. So the rival plots to destroy Wildfire—and tries to have the colored jockey throw the race when the horse is saved.

The story becomes quite involved with all this plotting. The hero buys Jackdaw, the only rival in the field. But the heroine misunderstands his motive. He has believed his enemy to be the owner of Wildfire. And he wants to trim him in the race. In the earlier scenes some emphasis is given to a group of anti-racing enthusiasts. Which accounts for the stealthy, secretive way in which the heroine conducts herself. There is conflict involved with the introduction of nearly every character.

Wildfire wins and lifts her owner's debts. And the heroine sees the light of understanding. There are some exciting moments, even if there isn't much color in the acting. The everyday audiences should enjoy it. The production is good.

THEME. Melodrama of race-track showing how owner of horse foils the villain and prevents him throwing the race. Is reconciled to lover she has doubted because of misunderstanding his intentions.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The race. The local color. The atmosphere. Scene when Wildfire is brought out of fire. The humor in episodes featuring colored players. The photography and lighting.

DIRECTION. Doesn't tie threads together—as plot appears uneven. And fails to make characters convincing in the way they doubt each other. Builds up race sequence with plenty of color and action. Mounts it well.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Mention it as Lillian Russell's erstwhile stage success. Play up the racetrack atmosphere. As this is the racing season you should stimulate real interest with it.

DRAWING POWER. For average audiences. O. K. for downtown, neighborhood and small town theatres. Title and exploiting it as a race-track story should draw them.

SUMMARY. An orthodox story—carrying out a cut-and-dried plot without much conviction. Characters fail to register much intelligence. Relies too much upon coincidence and haphazard construction of scenes. Has good local color and atmosphere.

THE CAST

Claire Barrington	Aileen Pringle
Myrtle Barrington	Edna Murphy
Garrison	Holmes Herbert
Dr. Woodhurst	Edmund Breese
Marie	Mary Thurman
Ralph Woodhurst	Antrim Short
Matt Donovan	Tom Blake
John Duffy	Lawford Davidson
Bud	Will Archie
Hortense	Edna Morton
Chappie Raster	Arthur Bryson
Valet	Robert Billoups

By George V. Hobart and George Broadhurst. Directed by T. Hayes Hunter.

SYNOPSIS. Fair owner of Wildfire is determined to keep secret the fact that she owns a race-horse because of her sister's engagement to son of anti-racing enthusiast. She is in debt to caddish owner of stables—who is determined to have Wildfire lose the race. Her fiance returns after five years absence and renews his feud with stable-owner. The heroine mistrusts him. Wildfire wins the race and the misunderstanding is cleared away. Reconciliation follows.

Parisian Nights

(F. B. O.—Six Reels)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

WHEN Parisian Apaches start their activities one can rest assured that there will be enough excitement to sustain the interest despite the fact that this type of melodrama has been worked to death on the screen. It makes lively entertainment because the director has colored it with incident and atmosphere. Not for a single moment does he forget that his hero must be an active sort of scoundrel who is just as violent in his love-making as he is when subduing the rival "wolves" of Montmartre. And so by enlivening it with elemental action—which is tempered in a few places with romantic interludes he has fashioned a picture that should please the average patron. This steady filmgoer is not to be scoffed at—he's the chap who keeps the exhibitor in business.

There is no slam-bang, hit-or-miss melodrama visible here. The goal of happiness is reached logically and progressively through colorful scenes which, if they are not true to actual Apache life, at least, carry out the layman's usual ideas of the Paris underworld. It begins with the American sculptress in despair because she cannot find inspiration for a masterpiece. She has given an exhibition of her designs—and Director Santell has brought forth an ingenious touch when the Paris critics declare the statues as anything but life-like, only to be fooled when these same statues step off their pedestals and walk out of the room. Then when the sculptress is registering despair the Apache breaks into her house. Realizing him to be the perfect model she saves him from the police if he will pose for her.

Which begins the romance—a romance punctuated with thrills as the hero's "panthers" give battle to the "wolves." We are taken on an adventurous journey to underground dens where killings and stabbings are given full expression. In the end the hero triumphs over his jealous rivals—and the picture is over. Lou Tellegen plays the Apache in a theatric manner since he strikes a lot of heroic postures. The best performance is given by Renee Adoree as the discarded sweetheart of the hero. Elaine Hammerstein hasn't much to do as the sculptress. The picture has good detail and is mounted in an appropriate manner. It should do business with every-day audiences.

THEME. Melodrama of American sculptress in Paris who saves Apache robber from police by compelling him to be her model. The romance effects his redemption.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The color and atmosphere of settings. Moment when heroine's home is entered by Apache. The development of the romance. The fight between the "wolves" and the "panthers." The fight.

DIRECTION. Certainly brings out all the color and atmosphere of the Paris underworld. Builds romance with dramatic action and suspense and spices scenes with first rate incident. Balances episodes throughout.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Bill as a fascinating film of Paris underworld. Play up Elaine Hammerstein, Lou Tellegen and Renee Adoree. Put on prologue featuring life in the Montmartre, such as Apache dances, etc.

DRAWING POWER. With good exploitation of the title, the players and the color of story this should draw in all types of houses. O. K. for first runs and average houses.

SUMMARY. A very good melodrama is this picture—one which affords plenty of excitement—which is excellently balanced with romance. It's cut from a familiar pattern, but its action and incident and atmosphere keep the interest sustained all the way. It is played in competent style, too.

THE CAST

Adele	Elaine Hammerstein
Jacques	Gaston Glass
Jean	Lou Tellegen
Fontaine	William J. Kelly
Pierre	Boris Karloff
Marie	Renee Adoree

By Emil Forst. Scenario by Kennedy Myton. Directed by Al Santell.

SYNOPSIS. American sculptress studying in Paris lacks inspiration to create a masterpiece. When almost discouraged she meets an Apache who has broken into her home to rob her. She saves him from the police with the condition that he will become her model. She not only finds inspiration to create a masterpiece, but also has a romance with the youth who finds redemption.

Hearts and Spurs

(Fox—4600 Feet)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THERE should be no question about this newest Buck Jones western satisfying the action lovers. They needn't look for anything original. In fact it covers old ground in its plot—and the characters run true to type. They comprise the rip-roarin' cowpuncher, the weakling son of an Easterner, who has sent him to the ranch to find his manhood, the youth's sister who has come West on a visit—and the ever-present villain who, in cheating at cards, has the drop on the brother, thus causing him to carry out certain evil schemes to enrich himself.

From the start it is easy to anticipate the action. The girl and her maid are met at the station by the cowboys and "flivvered" up to the ranch. The hero is not accepted very warmly. Which gives the author the opportunity to inject the necessary conflict as the villain gets the inside track in the heroine's affections. The director has brought forth some pleasing incident of a comedy nature in having the maid "fall" for the hero's pal. When the heroine is rescued from tumbling boulders while taking her morning constitutional the hero enters the remantic sweepstakes—and eventually he wins out after frustrating the villain and saving the brother from the law.

The melodrama is balanced effectively with the comedy relief. It offers some first rate incident—typically western in that it features the customary hard ridin' and fist action. The villain has compelled the weakling to hold up the stage coach so as to pay his poker I O Us. He also has one of his henchmen ready to rustle the cattle. But the hero wrings a confession from the brother and captures the villain just as he is about to kill the youth. The tumbling boulders come down, smash the shack and end the life of the bad man.

The director has shot the story against some picturesque backgrounds and these seem to blend with the action in such a way that it appears convincing in spite of its exaggerations. There is no pause once it gets going. Buck Jones, having learned not to take himself so seriously, comes through with a good performance.

THEME. Western melodrama of cowpuncher who wins love of Eastern girl when the cards are stacked against him. Overpowers the villain and saves heroine's weakling brother from disgrace.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The fast action. Scene at station when girls are greeted by cowboys. Scene when hero saves girl from tumbling from boulders. The fight in the shack. The scenery. The easy performance by Buck Jones.

DIRECTION. Has familiar material to work with but moulds it into acceptable entertainment by keeping action lively—and balancing it with melodramatic incident and comedy relief. Stages it against fine backgrounds—and gets results from cast.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Bill as Buck Jones' latest picture—one which gives him plenty of opportunity to put over western heroics. Th title offers teaser possibilities. Play up star's horsemanship.

DRAWING POWER. First rate for the average houses—those catering to westerns. Where Jones is popular, picture should draw.

SUMMARY. Buck Jones may have had more exciting westerns, but none that carried more action or better scenery. It is enlivened with good incident—the romantic element is well brought out—and while plot is familiar it succeeds in capturing the interest and holding it.

THE CAST

Hal Emory	Buck Jones
Sybil Estabrook	Carol Lombard
Victor Dufresne	William Davidson
Oscar Estabrook	Freeman Wood
Celeste	Jean Lamott
Sid Thomas	J. Gordon Russell
Jerry Clark	Walt Robbins
The Sheriff	Charles Eldridge

By Jackson Gregory. Scenario by John Stone. Directed by W. S. Van Dyke.

SYNOPSIS. Eastern girl and maid come West to visit brother who had been sent to the ranch to make himself into a man. He gets into the clutches of a gambler who compels him to violate the law to pay his poker debts. The youth wins gratitude of girl when he rescues her and through his love for her saves the brother from disgrace. The bad man is captured and an avalanche of boulders kills him.

Silent Sanderson

(Stromberg-Producers Dist. Corp.—Five Reels)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

HARRY CAREY'S newest picture gives him one of those strong, silent men roles — in which, being an actor of restrained emotions, he is able to carry out all the requirements. It is more of a man's picture than a woman's — inasmuch as the heroine is not painted in the best colors. Besides it features a lot of elemental action, there being one episode where Carey, in the title role, mills all around the interior of a snow-bound cabin with his enemy, played a trifle too dramatic by John Miljan. The fault is not entirely the player's since the author gives him a scene in the climax which doesn't ring very true.

It's a very simple plot and introduces the hero's brother being rejected by his sweetheart when a more sophisticated lover steps into her life. The youth takes his defeat extremely hard and when the victor comes to taunt him over his blighted romance there are words followed by a scuffle. The boy pens an unfinished note telling of his grief — which carries sufficient suicidal threat to make the villain kill him and escape suspicion. The next seen of the heroine she is making ready to flee with her husband (who has married her immediately after the crime) and the accusation she faces as a wily temptress when the hero appears before them.

The scene shifts from the open ranches to the white open spaces of the Yukon — when the Klondike is offering up its gold. There isn't sufficient piecing together of the sequences to make it appear as a well-knit story. Events transpire too suddenly. The action doesn't develop a man hunt. It merely features the heroine as having escaped from her drunken husband and finding refuge as a dance-hall girl in a Dawson honky-tonk. The hero, having changed his name, rescues her from a lustful brute, buys her from the proprietor, and takes her to his isolated cabin. When she asks him his motive he cannot answer. But she fears him because of his brutal manner and loves him for his indifference. Eventually the husband comes back into their lives — and the logic disappears when he fails to recognize their voices when he is stricken with snow blindness.

The big punch shows the hero giving him a terrific punishment before tossing him out to the wolves. The woman's redemption brings understanding — and the man's love and sympathy are kindled.

THEME. Melodrama of man who becomes woman-hater when disillusioned over girl he trusted. He gets her into his power and wins her love and respect when her mate is killed.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Carey's poise and restraint. The vigorous fight in the cabin. The dance-hall episode. The exteriors of the snow country. The suspense when the wolves appear.

DIRECTION. Gets a lot of melodrama out of simple plot. While threads are not tied together very well, interest is held through action and scenery. Might have made climax more convincing.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up the snow exteriors. If you have Carey following, go after the crowd with this one—which gives star a vigorous role. Feature as fine picture for hot weather—with its snow stuff.

DRAWING POWER. For average crowds—those who like elemental melodrama. O. K. for downtown and neighborhood houses.

SUMMARY. Not so original in story and treatment—but affording Carey a vigorous role of which he takes full advantage. Features some hefty fights and plenty of action. Has color in its atmosphere. But doesn't convince in the loose construction of plot and the manner in which villain conducts himself.

The Bandit's Baby

(F. B. O.—Six Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

HERE is the best picture Fred Thomson has made to date and one of the best westerns we have seen this season. It is a film packed with the "unusual," and there is enough action in it for several features of its type. Thomson outdoes himself in this one with some stunts which we will guarantee will drag audiences to the edge of the seats. And as for "Silver King," Fred's beautiful white horse—well all other equine stars better look to their laurels when this one hits the screen. Folks will not soon forget the scenes in which "Silver King" acts as a nurse for the bandit's baby nor will they again see a better thrill than that in which Thomson rides the horse in front of a fast express train through a tunnel, over a high bride and rescues the baby a minute before the iron monster roars over the spot where the infant was playing in the tracks. It is a climax that will put this picture over 100 per cent.

And as for the bandit's baby, we're sure that Mary Louise Miller is one of the cutest tots as well as the most unmindful of danger that we've seen in a long time. Mary takes the part of a little boy and she is simply a knockout, supplying many moments of real humor. There are some hard riding shots when "Silver King," races with "Midnight," at a rodeo and more thrills when Thomson, about to be arrested, leaps his horse over a few high fences, grabs the silver trophy and is away to his hill retreat before the sheriff has time to consider what's going on. The baby show provides more laughs and there are some spine quiverings injected in the runaway train scene and the beating up of the villain by one of his own men.

Thomson is a comer in these western pictures and "The Bandit's Baby," is going to win for him a host of admirers. He has a good supporting cast in this one and the picture is rich in attractive western landscapes. And we hope to see little Mary again soon. Her smile is irresistible. We recommend this picture to exhibitors seeking something different to make folks forget the heat.

THEME. Western in which a bandit, his horse and a baby, keep things moving along at a rapid pace, foiling a "smart" sheriff, bringing a murderer to justice and the heroine into the hero's arms.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The baby show. The scenes in which "Silver King," acts as a nurse to the baby. The runaway train. The wild ride of Tom and "Silver King" ahead of the limited to save the tot playing in the tracks. The work of Thomson and his juvenile support, Mary Louise Miller.

DIRECTION. James P. Hogan can well rest his laurels on this one. It is a western with a punch, surprises, action and a "wonder horse," that is a marvel.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Tell the folks about the almost human work of "Silver King," the great little tot, Mary Louise Miller, and the race between Thomson and a train. Arrange window display of infants' wear.

DRAWING POWER. A sure bet for houses catering to the western fans.

SUMMARY. A good picture for summer presentation. It has so much action that your patrons will forget all about the heat. There is some really remarkable work shown here by "Silver King," the horse, and a baby actress who makes some of the grownup players blush when it comes to natural acting. A climax with a wallop that is sure to register in any house.

White Fang

(F. B. O.—Six Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

THE presence of Strongheart, the dog actor, is a saving factor in this picture which is nothing more than an ordinary western with a series of sequences somewhat disconnected and with some of the characters not very clearly established in the early episodes. This was Jack London's last and one of his most widely read novels but the picture does not do the book justice. "Strongheart," is a great selection for the role of "White Fang," but the other characters for the most part are not very convincing.

The plot is not startlingly new. It deals with the saving of a youth, who is ill, from a pack of wolves in the north country and the return of this young man later to bring to justice a mine foreman who has been the ringleader of a gang that has been robbing the Lucky 13 mine. The dog figures prominently in cornering the villain and bringing him to his doom.

The picture opens with some attractive snow scenes and the interesting shots of the battle with the wolves in which Kiche, a real timber wolf, trained, of course, takes part. From this northern clime we are suddenly transported to a western mining camp in a warmer climate where there is much ado over a fight between White Fang and a bulldog brought to camp by a bully. Here the hero reappears in time to save White Fang. While the actual battle between the dogs is not shown it is given realism by the expressions on the faces of the folks on the sidelines.

There are some tense moments in the scene in which the villain returns to find his wife of a day alone with the hero who has just discovered the identity of the gold ore thief. Then ensues a battle between the two men. The climax is also thrilling and shows the great dog attacking the villain. These scenes, however, are shot in the dark for the most part and are not easy to follow.

THEME. Another "dog" melodrama which brings to the screen the last of Jack London's stories and with the dog, "Strongheart," the redeeming feature.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The battle between the mine superintendent and the timber wolves. The fight between White Fang and Cherokee, a bulldog. The bout ensuing as the villain arrives home and finds the hero with his bride.

DIRECTION. O. K. when handling "Strongheart," but rather poor when dealing with the action of the human characters. Has failed to connect the sequences in a very convincing manner.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Arrange a book store window display of the Jack London novel. Play up "Strongheart." He's your best bet. Have boys lead police dog thru streets with appropriate ads.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for second class downtown houses, community houses and the towns.

SUMMARY. There is a demand in some communities for dog pictures and this one will be O. K. if your patrons are not too critical on the rest of the film. There are a number of good fights, a battle between a man and wolves and a realistic attack by Strongheart against the villain.

Siege

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THERE is nothing of a war flavor about this picture even though the title suggests it. Instead it is a character study, soundly written, carrying rich humanities and realities—and never once failing to record truthfully the bitter conflict of wills. Samuel Hopkins Adams has struck deep with this story. He has also struck off something novel in drawing his central figure as an iron-willed woman in place of the masculine counterpart so usually favored. And so ably has it been adapted, so sympathetically has it been treated and so convincingly played by Mary Alden that the spectator is drawn right into the story and becomes a party to the siege in breaking down the old woman's spirit.

She is master of all she surveys. She dictates her will to the clan and to the town alike. And her many relatives dare not voice their disapproval. She stands out a perfect cameo as portrayed by Mary Alden. Her expressions—her attire—her gestures and carriage—these all carry out the eccentric whims of the old lady—who through some sorrow of her youth has allowed the passing years to warp her soul.

Svend Gade, the director, has admirably caught the contrasts—and the sharp conflict. He has emphasized the Ruyland spirit in its haughty despotism. You take in the clan at dinner and at conference, noticing the wistful pathos of the mute Ruyland whose spirit has been broken years before. You notice how even the story is—of how it builds logically to the point when her daughter-in-law, a strictly modern girl, with a will equally as dominant, breaks the old lady's spirit and humbles her by saving her life when she would commit suicide. The entire plot hinges around this conflict of wills, though it is tempered with tender moments in the study of the pathetic mute—played with fine feeling by Marc MacDermott.

But the elderly figure dominates the scenes—and so sure is Mary Alden's touch that you feel like bowing to her will from the moment that she appears. Such characterization isn't seen every day. A compact picture this—one holding up the mirror to a quaint study of life. It is so true—so vital that it will not be easily effaced from the memory. It shows the conflict between old traditions, old customs and habits and those of the modern day. And the way it is told its figures come to life. A picture of heart throbs.

THEME. Character study of a strong-willed elderly woman in conflict with youth—and of how her spirit is broken and her pride humbled through the young woman's sacrifice.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The marvelously human performance by Mary Alden. The portrayals by Marc MacDermott and Virginia Valli. The suicide attempt. The many side issues of conflict.

DIRECTION. Has mirrored life as represented in quaint traditions of yesterday and today. Carries out every value of story and characterization. Keeps his poise and never becomes melodramatic.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Emphasize that it is not a war story. Play it up as a truthful study of life—of old age in conflict with youth. Feature its quaint highlights. Play up Mary Alden enacting her finest role.

DRAWING POWER. For intelligent patrons. For high class houses, first and second runs. Will be understood by those who appreciate the better things.

SUMMARY. An unusually compelling story of character studies—telling a story vivid in its contrasts and conflict. It is accurate and points a lot of truth. Pathos and humor finely balanced. Mary Alden gives an exceptional performance. Rich in its atmosphere and detail.

THE lighting facilities of the Hippodrome Theatre and the York Opera House, of York, both picture theatres operated by the Nathan Appell interests, were crippled at the matinee performances recently because of a large fire in the business section of the city about a block away from the theatres. This was due to damage done by the fire to electric wires. The difficulty was removed in time for the evening performances.

Some quick work in developing local views of the flight of the U. S. Navy airship Los Angeles, over the city of Reading, was done by a cameraman in the employ of the Capitol Theatre in that city. The big blimp was sighted there at 2 p. m. and four hours later, at 6 p. m., motion pictures of the ship in Reading were displayed on the screen of the Capitol. The views were shot from the roof of the theatre.

The juvenile inmates of the Good Samaritan Shepherd Home, in Allentown, were guests of Walter J. Hurley, manager of the Orpheum picture theatre in that city, at a recent film show featuring Jackie Coogan. The Lehigh Valley Transit Company provided free transportation for the youngsters between the Home and the theatre.

Samuel A. Keubler, manager of the Colonial picture theatre, operated by the Wilmer & Vincent interests in Harrisburg, was in charge of the distribution of gifts to a large group of Civil War veterans and their wives who were guests of honor at a noonday luncheon staged by the Harrisburg Kiwanis Club in the Penn Harris Hotel, Harrisburg, on May 28. The club annually entertains the veterans about Memorial Day.

The Comerford Amusement Company has announced its intention to hold the formal opening of the new theatre it has erected in Kingston, a suburb of Wilkes-Barre, before the close of June. It is to be called the Kingston theatre.

A new picture theatre is being erected in Forest City by the Friedman interests. It is to be modern and spacious and the backers of the project are hoping to have it completed some time in September.

The Wilmer & Vincent Company, which operates about forty picture and vaudeville theatres in Pennsylvania and other states has transferred William J. Fries from the post of treasurer of the Hippodrome, in Reading, to that of house manager of the Orpheum Theatre, in Altoona, a big Pennsylvania Railroad shop town. Mr. Fries, who was connected with the Hippodrome for four years, will be in charge also of the Mishler theatre in Altoona. John Malloy has been transferred from Altoona to a Wilmer & Vincent theatre in Richmond, Va.

Albany

WEDDINGS are interrupting the June routine of exchanges and theatres in this section. John Garry, manager of the Empire in Glens Falls, was married last Saturday and is now on his honeymoon with Alex Sayles, manager of the Clinton Square theatre in Albany, looking after the Empire for the time being. Miss Sadie Epstein, cashier at the King theatre in Troy, is to be married on June 14, while Bessie Dollard, a billing clerk at the Universal exchange, has resigned to become a bride. The employees presented her with a handsome chest of silver.

Louis Buettner has disposed of his theatre in Mechanicville and is now devoting his entire time to his theatres in Hudson Falls and Cohoes.

The theatre in Silver Bay is scheduled to close on June 15 for the summer. The house is run by M. Spellman. H. E. Flack, an old time exhibitor in Potsdam, discontinued business during the past week when the block housing the theatre was sold to Alexander Papayanakos.

Making the same time as the Empire State Express, a group of exchange managers motored down from Syracuse the past week with Leon Medem, manager of the Pathe exchange here. According to Alec Herman and some of the others, the trip was of a hair-raising type, the 150 miles being negotiated in about three hours.

The Albany Zone is attracting more and more attention from exhibitors who are not hesitating to call upon the secretary, Carolyn Goodman, to handle their affairs with the exchanges, just the sort of work for which the Zone was created. Many complaints are being adjusted without the necessity of exhibitors coming on to Albany.

Sam Goldstein of Springfield, Mass., made one of his periodical visits to Albany last week, driving over but finding the town so hot that after visiting one or two of the exchanges he decided to return to the Berkshires.

Bob Landry, of Ogdensburg, who runs the Strand in the northern town, also hit film row during the week, but found little to his liking with the mercury touching 100 and decided to motor back to the cooling breezes of the St. Lawrence.

Featuring the milk fund pictures over his entire change, William Smalley, of Cooperstown, was as busy during the past week as the proverbial one-armed paperhanger. Mr. Smalley took over the theatre in Delhi last Monday and keeps on adding a house every now and then. In order to show the milk fund pictures on Sunday night, in Mohawk, the only house which Mr. Smalley has which runs on Sunday, he kept a messenger in Albany throughout the day and until such time as the pictures were received by the Universal exchange from New York. The pictures were then carried by automobile to Mohawk.

Despite the hot weather, Oscar Perrin kept at work during the week in improving the Leland theatre, the new carpet in red and black design arriving during the week. The weather was too hot, however, for Mr. Perrin to make his regular trip on Tuesday to Glens Falls. C. H. Buckley, who is the owner of the Leland and who is also running the Clinton Square and the Empire, is negotiating these days for a couple other theatres, but refuses to disclose their whereabouts.

In all probability, there will be a meeting of the Albany Zone Committee some time this month, after which there will be no further meetings until some time in the early fall.

Someone asked Uly S. Hill, managing-director of the Strand group of houses in Albany and Troy, if he found the weather hot enough to suit him. With perspiration standing on his brow, Mr. Hill apparently decided that the least exertion the better, and simply winked his eye. Mr. Hill is a bit better off, however, than many of the exhibitors for his home is located at West Sandlake, and his wide verandas are generally swept by cooling breezes.

Jake Golden, who has been making a name for himself by the crowds that he has been drawing with double features at Harmanus-Bleecker Hall in Albany, was transferred during the past week to the Griswold, in Troy, and Joe Saperstein was sent from the Griswold to the Hall. It would not be entirely unexpected if something good was coming the way of Mr. Golden this fall, and he may be found handling some one of the big Proctor houses in another city. Mr. Golden started to make things hum at the Griswold last week by running fight pictures. He is also staking a series of dance contests, the winner of which will be given a professional engagement.

E. J. Smith, division manager for F. B. O., was in town during the week, and in company with Herman Stearn, the local manager called on some of the bigger exhibitors in the territory.

Changes at the Fox exchange during the week resulted in E. Vaughn succeeding E. Conlon, as poster man, while B. Pangborn, a booker, resigned. James Bailey has been promoted and is now doing the booking as well as serving as assistant manager.

When Uly S. Hill refers to daylight saving time, he calls it "foolish time," and there are a whole lot of other exhibitors who believe the same.

There was a change at the Victoria theatre the past week, in Watertown, when Wayne H. Hadcock, who has been running the Victoria for many years, sold a half interest to John Ludlow. The house will be entirely redecorated and when reopened will be under the personal management of Mr. Ludlow, who formerly managed the Bijou as well as Wonderland, both housese in Watertown, that served in years past.

Fred W. Mausert has bought certain church property in Glens Falls, assuming prossession June 8, and will erect a motion picture theatre with a seating capacity of about 1,500. Mr. Mausert was former owner of the Rialto.

There were great doings last Sunday night at the home of Jake Rosenthal, in Troy, when something like thirty-five relatives and friends dropped in. Mr. Rosenthal decided to leave the management of his theatre to his assistants for that night and later provided the gathering with ice cream. Miss Cecilia Rosenthal has just returned from an enjoyable automobile trip to New York.

Elmer Crowninshield, who keeps busy equipping or overhauling the projection machines in theatres in this part of the state, spent a few days in New York during the past week. Mr. Crowinshield is equipping the Pember, in Granville, with a couple of machines, the house also having contracted for an entire new Mazda equipment.

The Rosewind Theatrical Enterprises, consisting of James Rose and H. C. Windekenecht, will run a motion picture theatre at Queechy Lake, two nights a week this summer. Mr. Rose is spending the greater part of his time in handling the Columbia in Rensselaer, which has just been equipped with a set of ventilating fans. Mr. Windekenecht is handling the Bijou in Troy, playing double features each Friday night and which will continue throughout the summer the four o'clock shows for children each Saturday afternoon.

Al Lemay, operator at the Lincoln in Troy, blossomed forth last week with a brand new car. Ben Stern, assistant manager of the Troy theatre, is spending a week's vacation in Atlantic City.

The past week proved a rather busy one for Tony Veiller, manager of the Lincoln theatre in Troy, and a former student at Union College. Although the temperature was around the nineties on Thursday night, Mr. and Mrs. Veiller attended a dance at Union College and on Saturday night Mr. Veiller was on hand at a reunion of his fraternity.

William Benton intends to lose no time in getting his new theatre under way in Mechanicville. He is planning to install his projection machines within two months and hopes to have the house in readiness for opening in September or October.

Graham is now manager of the Metropolitan, being also in charge of the Grand theatre in Regina.

Davis, energetic manager of the Metropolitan theatre, Winnipeg, Manitoba, has closed the house until Monday, August 3, when it will re-open under a new policy for the presentation of selected pictures and Pantages Vaudeville, the latter being an innovation at the "Met." Mr. Davis, who has been the manager of the house for the past 10 months, reports that the "Met" has had the most successful winter season in its history. ARTHUR WALSH, one of the string of pitchers of the Pathe Home Office baseball team, held the strong United States Lines' team to one run in a recent game, striking out a total of eighteen men. Walsh is a member of the Laboratory Staff of the Pathe News and for the last two years he has had nothing whatever to do with baseball, save to read about it in the newspapers, as any good fan would. On Saturday, May 23rd, however, he stepped into the box as the Pathe pitcher and for nine innings gave his attention so assiduously to the subject of baseball that he struck out eighteen men. Altogether, he allowed only three hits, and he isn't at all satisfied with himself about it. If he had managed to strike out those three men in addition to the standing army that he did make sit down, he would have had a perfect score. In spite of his phenomenal work, Pathe lost by a score of 1 to 0.

Rivoli, Broadway, Installs Cooling System

Atmospheric Conditions Ideal During Hottest Weather; Box Office Receipts Equal Winter Season

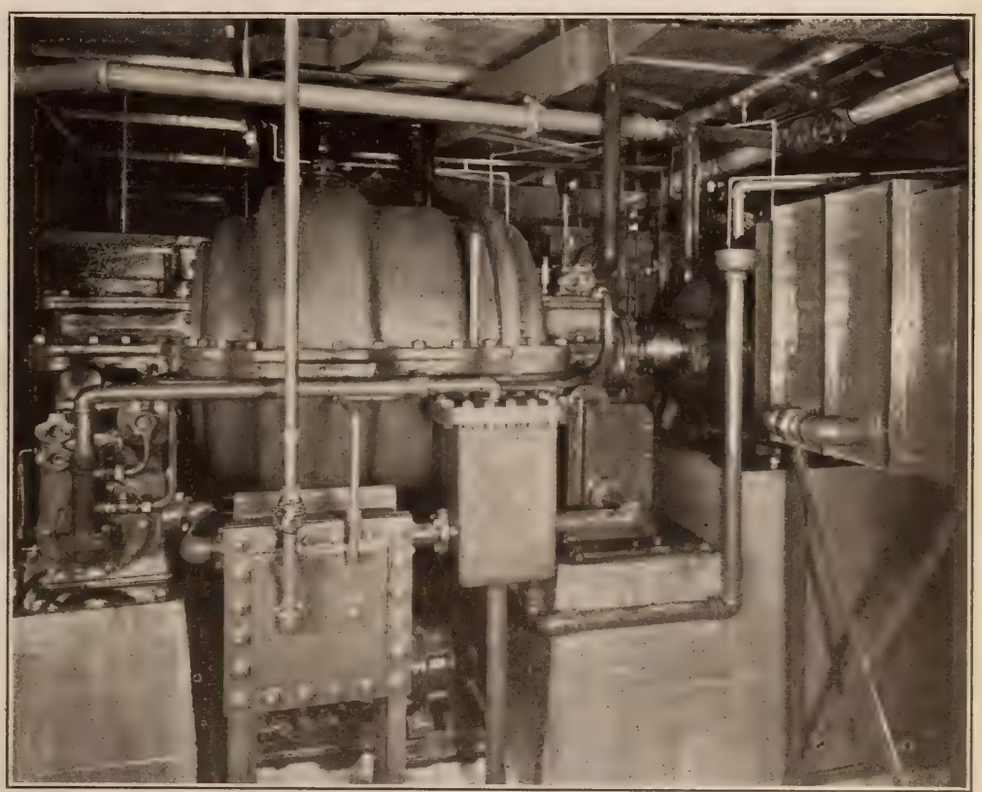
THE first serious depression in attendance with the motion picture theatres on Broadway was experienced last week during the record hot wave. However, there was one outstanding exception to this slump in attendance—the Rivoli theatre not only maintained normal receipts but actually enjoyed abnormal attendance during the entire hot weather. The explanation for this very remarkable attendance record lies in the fact that this theatre was prepared to set into operation the new cooling plant which had been installed during the early Spring. The enviable results obtained by this system in the Rivoli has been the cause of general comment among theatre men.

The cooling system was installed by the Carrier Engineering Corporation of Newark, N. J., and is the most recent of a series of such installations which that firm has placed in a number of other large first-class theatres, among which are Grauman's Metropolitan; the Palace, Dallas; and the Texan, Houston. These theatres are mentioned in support of the showing of the Rivoli's record hot weather attendance as these large houses are also reporting exceptional summer business resulting from complete control of atmospheric conditions within their auditorium proper.

Judging from what the writer has seen and felt in the Rivoli when the most humid and hot weather out of doors only served as a contrast for the perfect conditions within the theatre, it is our prediction that the time is not far distant when all modern motion picture theatres will have similar installations. We are placing this prediction on two grounds: First, because an installation of this type apparently completely eliminates the summer slump and in so doing eradicates a very material loss to theatres in nearly every part of this country; Second, atmospheric conditioning installations will be forced on those theatres who do not take the initiative in being the first to install such systems through competition with houses who are in a position to dominate a great majority of the summer business.

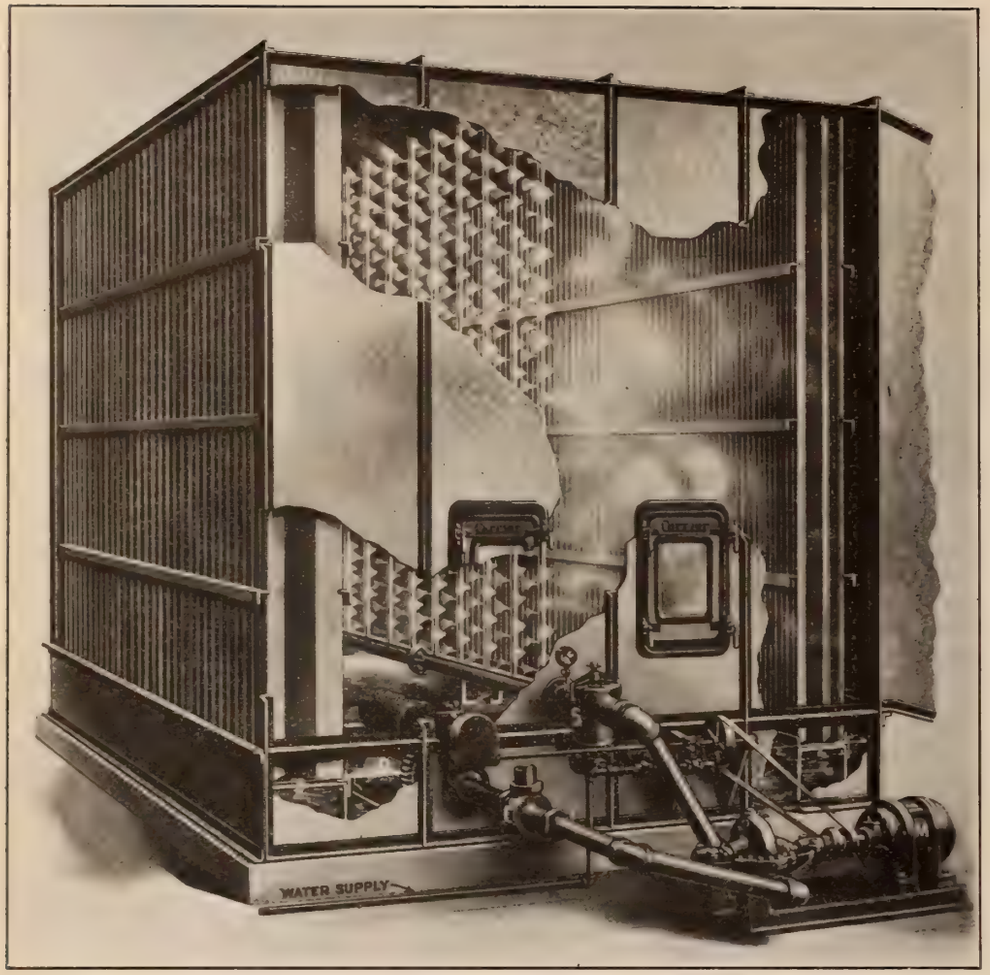
Our prediction is that these new developments in engineering are now in a fair way to eliminate hot weather as a competitor in this industry.

Though descriptions of installations of atmospheric conditioning apparatus similar to that installed in the Rivoli theatre have previously appeared in this department of the NEWS it is timely to again describe their salient features. The purpose of the system for summer operation is four fold, i. e.: to cool the air; to condense and remove excess moisture or humidity; to wash the air or free it from all foreign matter, and finally, to so distribute the air in the theatre that no drafts or unventilated pockets are created.



The cooling, dehumidify and washing is accomplished by passing the air through a spray chamber such as shown on the following page. To cool the water for use in this spray chamber, an efficient refrigeration machine, known as the Carrier Centrifugal Refrigeration Unit, which is entirely self-contained, is employed. This unit does not include the familiar reciprocating compressor as the compressor is centrifugal or rotary, and is motor driven. The other major parts of the unit are the evaporators and the condensor where the refrigerant is recovered and returned to evaporator. The entire unit is compact and occupies, it is claimed, only about one-quarter the space of other systems.

In the Rivoli theatre, this machine with all its parts, is capable of producing 150 tons of refrigeration and is located in a small room beneath the lobby approximately twelve feet. The machine is automatic in operation and maintains the air at any desired temperature and humidity.



A very unusual feature about this system is its operation at a vacuum rather than at a pressure, so that any leaks that might occur are always inward. The refrigerating medium is a harmless liquid.

The automatic temperature and humidity controls acting upon the temperature of the air and regulating the chambers, maintain a very uniform condition of temperature and humidity in the theatre.

With such a system for the proper atmospheric conditioning of the air as has been described above, the final consideration is the proper air distribution and circulation. This is accomplished at the Rivoli by admitting the air through numerous diffusers in the ceiling of the auditorium. The velocity of the air thus submitted is low enough so that it is never perceptible as a draft. The air passes down over the audience, reaching the breathing zone first, and then over the bodies, finally to be exhausted at the low points of the house. It is then returned and mixed with fresh air, or it is rewashed while certain portions of it are discharged to out of doors.

Plans for New Chicago 2,200 Seat House Are Drawn

It is reported that plans are being prepared by Walter W. Alschlager, for a twenty-two hundred seat motion picture theatre, which will be erected at the southwest corner of Halsted and 35th Streets, Chicago, and operated by Harry Reckas & Brothers. The architects say that the design will carry out the idea of a Babylonian banquet hall, with the entire seating capacity on one floor, the monotony of which will be broken by a series of terraces.

Attractive 800 Seat Theatre Opens in Aurora, N. Y.

The beautiful new Aurora theatre was opened in East Aurora, N. Y., on the evening of June 2. Roycroft town may well be proud of this fine new 800-seat motion picture theatre, fire proof to the highest degree, most attractively decorated and featuring equipment equal to the largest houses in the land.

Merritt A. Kyser is the manager of the Aurora and the following are members of the board of directors: Elbert Hubbard II, president; Irving Price, vice-president; James W. Persons, Robert North, Lyman S. Looms, Cecil M. Jackson, secretary and treasurer.

The house is built of brick and hollow tile with concrete floors, wide aisles and more exits than the law requires. The lobby is of fireproof construction. The building is plastered on metal lath and is fully equipped with sprinklers. It has the lowest insurance rate of any structure in the town. The roof is supported by structural steel girders on brick piers with independent foundations below the frost line and the structure conforms with the most rigid city building inspection codes. Comfort as well as safety is essential in every modern public building and the owners have looked after this feature with great care. The 800 seats are roomy, with deep, curved backs and upholstered seats. The Simplex projection machines are used in the modernly equipped booth. Comfortable dressing rooms, a large stage, 32 by 25 feet, footlights, border lights, dimmers, etc., are ample to meet all possible demands for local performances if needed.

The plans were drawn by Robert North of the North, Shelgren & Swift, Buffalo architects. The mason work was done by Iuppa & Maggio of Rochester. Admission is 30 cents for adults and 15 cents for children. The Becker Theatre Supply Company of Buffalo installed the booth equipment and the Raven half-tone screen.

Many New Theatre Projects in Oregon Towns

There is considerable activity in theatre building in Oregon. Eugene has just opened a handsome new picture house known as the Lowell theatre.

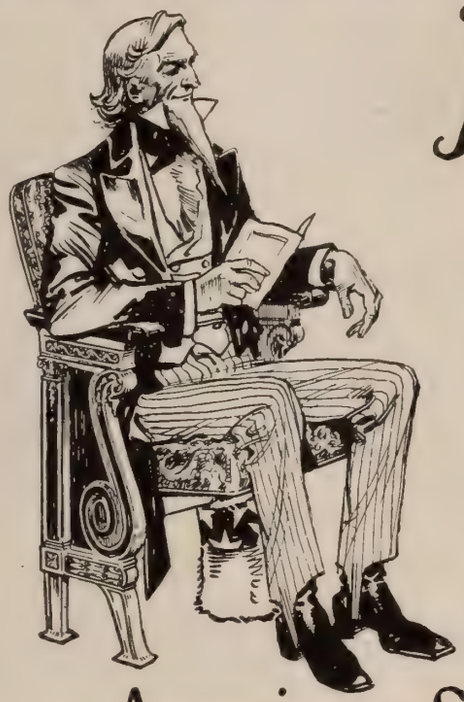
Salem is to have three new houses one of which is to be built by Frank Bligh, who owns and operates the present Salem theatre which bears his name, another by George B. Guthrie, manager of Oregon, Liberty and Grand theatres, and the third by a recently organized company known as Salem Amusement Company.

Three theatres are in the process of erection at Astoria, and a fourth, the new Liberty theatre, of Jensen and Von Herberg, has just been opened. Warner Brothers are building one of these new theatres and Sam Sax is building another.

Ed. Blair is building a theatre at Nye Beach.

A suburban theatre at East 28th street and Hawthorne avenue is to be erected by Jensen and Von Herberg, who own a number of Portland theatres. The contract is to be let May 22 and the building is expected to be ready by autumn.

This motion picture house is to be reinforced concrete and the exterior is to be stucco with brick and stone trimmings. The building which will house the theatre will provide space for four retail stores and will occupy nearly a block. The theatre will seat 1,200 and will be equipped with rest rooms, check rooms and a stage large enough for road shows.



Nashville House Opens in Residential Section

The Hillsboro Theatre was recently opened in the residential section of Nashville, Tenn., and provides one of the most up-to-date and attractive houses in that city. The new theatre is in the center of the business section of the Hillsboro section, and was erected by M. A. Lightman of the Malco Amusement Company, who operates a chain of five theatres.

The Hillsboro Theatre has a large pipe organ and a stage that measures 60 feet wide by 25 feet deep. This stage is the largest in Nashville, and was especially designed to accommodate road shows.

Every modern convenience has been installed in this theatre for the comfort of the patrons. A fine air cooling system is used, which is expected to provide a comfortable atmosphere during the hottest weather.

An unusual feature is incorporated in the box office, in that a mesh wire screening is used during the summer months in place of solid construction. This meshing is removed during the winter.

Stage and organ grilles of the Egyptian theatre, Portland, Oregon.

Handsome Portland Suburban Theatre Is Enthusiastically Received

EGYPTIAN architecture lends distinction to Portland, Oregon's most pretentious suburban theatre. This new motion picture house was recently opened and the patronage which it has already received supports the contention that there is a growing need for suburban theatres which can successfully compete both in beauty and equipment with the downtown theatres.

Graeper's Egyptian occupies a space of 126 by 145 feet, It is of reinforced concrete and has a concrete roof. The exterior finish is in buff and the Egyptian note is carried out both in exterior finish and interior decorations.

The theatre cost approximately $85,000 and was built in 90 days. It has a seating capacity of 1,200. Projection room and system of light control is of the newest and most efficient arrangement. The lamp room is 11 by 17 feet and is ventilated by the house ventilating system and outside exposture. Directly below it is the valet chamber where the motor generator set is placed.

Autumn colorings with accenting notes of blue and gold are used in decorating both the exterior and interior. Egyptian designs in fresco ornament the walls and pillars and appear in the cast plaster ornaments and the organ grilles. Egyptian designs also decorate the border of the handsome curtain and the thick carpet carries out the same decorative design.

The auditorium is shaped like an elongated horseshoe and has an egg-shell dome ceiling which facilitates ventilation and light diffusion. Lighting is indirect and light is so well diffused that patrons at no time have difficulty in moving about. Thermostatically controlled ventilation gives a change of 96,000 cubic feet of air every three minutes.

"Make it a family theater" was the instruction of W. A. Graeper, owner of the theater to the architect Edward A. Miller and Mr. Miller caried out these instructions to the letter. The comfort of no member of the family has been overlooked. Rest rooms for women open off the balcony and fronting these is a public reception room where women may meet their escorts.

Off the balcony also is a sound proof nursery room whose plate glass front gives an unobstructed view of the stage and permits mothers with crying babies to enjoy the picture undisturbed by the fear that the babies' cries are bothering any one else.

There are also a men's observation smoking room with toilet at the rear and boys' and girls' comfort stations at either side of the orchestra pit.

Wurlitzer-Hope-Jones unit orchestra has been installed.

Fred Mausert to Build in Glens Falls, N. Y.

Fred W. Mausert, popular exhibitor of Glens Falls, N. Y., has purchased the Presbyterian church property at a reported cost of $200,000 and will convert the church into a theatre and in addition will erect a three-story office building. The new theatre will be known as the State and will seat 1300 in the orchestra with an additional 400 in the balcony.

Mr. Mausert, who will take possession of the property June 8th, came to Glens Falls twelve years ago and opened the Park theatre and five years later added the Rialto to his holdings. About a year ago he sold his interest to his associates and had planned to locate in a Massachusetts town until the opportunity came up to buy the church property.

J. H. Robertson Ent. to Erect 2,000 Seat Detroit House

A modern theatre is to be constructed by the John H. Robertson enterprises at the corner of Mt. Elliott and Charlevoix avenues, Detroit, known as the Savoy. It will seat 2,000 persons and will be a replica of the Cinderella theater on Jefferson avenue, also owned and operated by the same interests. Actual construction has already been started. It is expected that the new house, badly needed in this district, will open its door to the public early next Spring. The Roosevelt and De Luxe are other units of the Robertson chain in Detroit.

Lobby Display Frames As An Attractive Theatre Decoration

By Samuel Weinstein, Pres., Menger, Ring & Weinstein, Inc.

TO THE average exhibitor, the lobby frame's functions begin and end with the display of paper, such as three-sheets, one-sheet or photographs, simply as a container for his advertisements. To view it from its decorative aspect, to see in it a focal point for his lobby, a center of attraction, so to speak, that—a good many have overlooked.

The difference between the theatre lobby and other lobbies or foyers is that while the hotel, the library or hospital need grandeur and bigness, almost aloofness, as though to show the newcomer his place, the movie theatre lobby, while it requires grandeur, must also have warmth and coziness, hominess and a certain degree of familiarity.

The moving picture theatre, to those who visit it once or twice weekly, assumes the aspect of a club, almost a social center. He or she meets his or her neighbors and friends there. They will make appointments to meet there of an afternoon, and will often come in to rest up a while, when tired out from shopping. A certain degree of warmth is necessary—something cold marble will not give.

The lobby frame, if properly finished and ornamented with the right toning and harmony of color, is not alone attractive, but also easy on the eyes, as one would express it in slang.

In almost every lobby, there are some irregular corners or spaces that can not be used for anything in particular. Such spaces can well be used for the placing of a mirror and console table. It takes no great expert to realize what that means to the ladies, when coming out of the show, with the uncertainty of the position of their bonnets.

A settee placed in an odd corner, or underneath a large frame in a deep lobby, for elderly people to sit on while they are awaiting the next show would be welcomed by a good many patrons. These suggestions do not imply the placing of odd pieces of furniture around the lobby. If the lobby display man knows his business he will be able to make those pieces up in conformity and in keeping with the rest of the lobby display frames and wall cases, making a pleasing whole. There are a good many theatres where such installations might be impractical, for instance, the theatre on the very busy thoroughfare, where every inch of space counts; but the theatre in a smaller town, or the one located in a residential section, could well look into such suggestions with profit.

For the deep lobby and foyer, the lobby frame in its infinite variety, is an invaluable ally. It breaks up large empty wall spaces, and covers many unsightly spots. For instance, to camouflage an unsightly switch, a framed mirror, hinged like a door, with an electric lighting fixture overhanging, is the answer, and an ugly spot is turned into an attraction, acting at the same time as a door for the switch box.

These are merely a few suggestions. The possibilities of the lobby frame as a decorative medium are unlimited—all you need is a lobby frame man who knows his business.

It is, therefore, important that before placing the contract for decorations, the lobby frame man be consulted.

G-E Incandescent Projection Used at Empire State's Famous Spa

At Saratoga, N. Y., where visitors from everywhere in the United States gather to witness "the sport of Kings," G-E Incandescent Lamp Projectors are giving satisfaction to exacting audiences in the beautiful Congress Theatre.

The development of the Mazda lamp for motion picture projection has not only saved money for exhibitors but has greatly improved working conditions for the projectionist and enabled him to secure better screen results. There are no fumes, dust or excessive heat from a Mazda lamp and operation is simplified, no adjustments being necessary after the machine is started.

The Congress shows a picture 12 ft. x 16 ft. at a throw of 112 ft. The seating capacity is a little over a thousand, 640 on the main floor and 370 in the balcony.

But few theatres are built nowadays too large to enjoy the advantages of incandescent projection. Why not consult the nearest G-E office about your theatre?

A Tale of Woe

FROM D. K. Wiegman, Projectionist at the Palace Theatre, Ashland, Ohio, comes the following:

Dear Sir—

Thank you for your letter of May 25th. I have just finished the night performance and decided to let you know some of my troubles.

We are using the Mazda lamps now; started using them the first of April, and although we get nearly as good a light from them as we did from the arc, they will cost us as much in a year as the D. C. arc did.

The light is much more pleasing to the eye; really more restful than any light we ever used before. The trouble I am having is with the bulbs. First of all I will tell you what model lamp we are using.

We had a couple of the old Argus Adaptors here that they used in the old Band Box Theatre before they built this one. They had the old prismatic condensers in them and when we decided to try out the Mazda we got the new Bausch & Lomb Cinephor condensers, new reflectors, etc., and are very well satisfied with light, as said before.

The current bill was cut down to less than one-third its former value, but I am having trouble getting the average life out of the lamps.

The longest I have got out of them yet was 135 hours and a couple that I put in burned off at the filament before they got really heated up.

They did this at 28 amperes and now I am wondering if these old regulators could be off a bit. The ammeters seem to be all O. K. as I had them tested with an ammeter from the local light company. At the time they had no voltmeter and as you know it isn't the amperes that burns bulbs out, it is the excess voltage. A bulb will take so many amperes, depending on its rating, but it wont take an overload in volts.

Would you advise me to have the regulators and ammeters sent in and tested and repaired if necessary, or do you think that it is my fault that the bulbs burn out, or warp, or short before their life is up

When I install a new bulb, I burn it at 28 amperes for about 75 hours and then bring it up to 30 amperes.

The boss is rather disgusted with the cost of having to replace so many bulbs and was talking of putting in another motor-generator set. I hope he doesn't because I sure do like the Mazda to work with, no carbon dust, or heat to bother with.

If you can possibly suggest a way in which I could remedy this I shall be very grateful to you.

D. K. Wiegman.

Expensive?

Before attempting to analyze your trouble, Friend Wiegman, we would like to discuss some things generally. You say that while your Mazda outfit gives satisfactory screen illumination the cost of operation over the year will be as high as that of the arc.

That is certainly interesting, since the biggest talking point of the Mazda is economy of operation. One of the biggest factors in securing this economy of operation is in cutting down the power bills. In your letter you say that the power bills have been reduced over two-thirds, so this seems to be okeh.

As for the lamp renewal cost, the lamp manufacturers make the claim that this item should not exceed the carbon renewal cost of an arc outfit. Whether or not this is so depends upon the quality of lamps you receive and the way those lamps are handled.

Incandescent lamps, are, after all, rather fragile things and difficult to make so that they will give uniform performance. The manufacturers being fully aware of this, make allowance for poor quality by allowing credit on all defective lamps.

Current Regulation

The 900 watt motion picture lamp is the most efficient Mazda lamp made. It is operated at slightly over 3,000 degrees centigrade which is very close to the melting point of Tungsten.

For this reason it is extremely important to closely regulate the current so as to prevent an overload which would quickly burn out the lamp.

It is the current, Friend Wiegman, not the voltage, which causes the burning action. The voltage merely drives the current of electricity through the filament.

A ten percent increase in current will cause more damage to this filament than a ten percent change in voltage.

For this reason, precautions are taken by the lamp manufacturers to rate the lamp in amperes and to provide an ammeter with a scale stopped at 30 amperes.

Cause of Trouble

Now the most likely causes of your trouble are the ammeters, the regulator or defective lamps in the order named.

In spite of the fact that you tested the ammeters with one from the local power company it may easily be possible that the power company's meter might be wrong too.

The writer recalls a test on Mazdas which was recently conducted in the laboratory of one of the large projector manufacturers. In checking the ammeters against two specially calibrated instruments, every meter in this manufacturers' stock was found to be wrong, some by as much as 2 amperes, This included three makes of ammeters, one of which was high priced.

Now an increase of two amperes (to 32) would mean burning your lamps out at 50 or 60 hours instead of 100.

Inspect your ammeters again and note whether the needles swing free and easy when the current is turned on or whether they move sluggishly and by fits and jerks.

It is also quite likely, since you are using the old Argus equipment, that your regulators are off. This outfit is now obsolete and has been replaced with equipment having many improvements.

We would seriously recommend having your ammeters and regulators carefully tested by some competent laboratory near you, if one is available. If this cannot be done, then send it to the Street Lighting Engineering Dept., General Electric Co., River Works, West Lynn, Mass.

I am also advising the lamp manufacturers of your difficulty so that you should get some action.

Talking of satisfactory performance, when using the new Bausch & Lomb Ospheric condenser, your Mazda outfit ought to come pretty close to equalling a 60 ampere D. C. arc with even screen illumination.

Does it do that? If not you are not getting the most out of it and you should study up on the outfit.

Another word of caution, Friend Wiegman, in turning on the current through the lamps be careful to do this slowly so as to allow the filament to warm up gradually and assume its new position slowly.

Furthermore, be careful of your mirror setting since, if you focus the mirror image directly on top of the filament you are merely reheating the filament instead of meshing the images as should be done. This will also cause early burnouts.

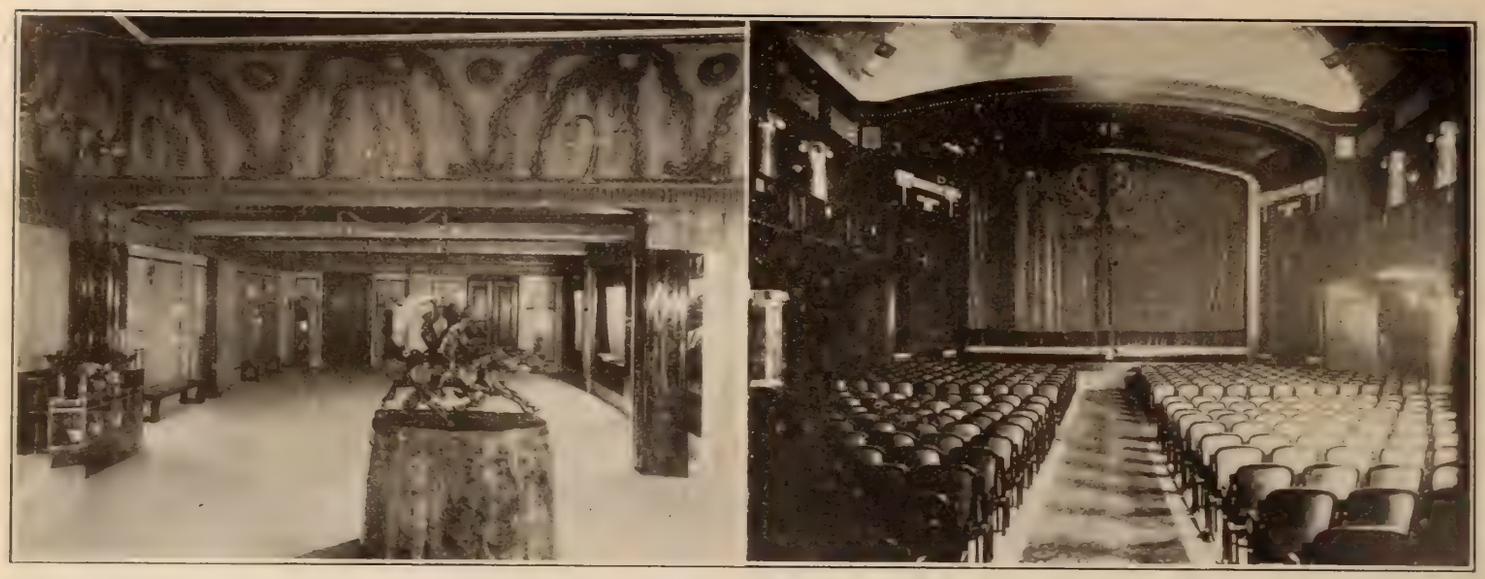
There is no reason, if the screen illumination is satisfactory, why the other characteristics of the outfit should not be equally pleasing.

Theatre Building Activities Under Way in N. C.

S. S. Stevenson, of Henderson, N. C., is building new houses in Burlington, N. C., and Goldsboro, N. C. This circuit is increasing very rapidly.

The Piedmont Amusement Company of Winston-Salem, N. C., states that they have let the contract for the new theatre. Erection will begin immediately. This theatre they expect to have open on or before October 31st. The seating capacity of this theatre will be about 1,000.

James Estridge, of the Gastonian Theatre, Gastonia, N. C., states that the contract is about to be awarded for his new $200,000 theatre in Gastonia, N. C., and it will be one of the finest theatres in the South.



Definite and Real

Exhibitors who keep a careful eye on the box office find that photographic quality on the screen has an influence with patrons that is definite and real.

That's why it's worth while to make sure the picture is printed on the film that carries quality from studio to screen—Eastman Film.

Eastman Film is identified by the words "Eastman" and "Kodak" in black letters in the film margin.

Theatre Building Program Continues Exceptionally Heavy

The theatre building program for this country is still maintaining its record breaking stride, judging from the new theatre projects reported to this office during the last fortnight. It will be recalled that many optimistic predictions for construction of theatres were made at the beginning of this year. At the same time also predictions were made indicating new building would fall short of previous years. It is therefore of unusual interest to watch the developments in this field to learn which estimates were in error. To date there seems little room for doubt.

An inspection of the list of new theatre projects shows that California again leads while New York is a close second. This report differs from the last in that the Central states are not prominently represented.

The latest reports received are as follows:

Newspaper Opinions on New Pictures

"Black Cyclone"—Pathe—Capitol, New York

New York Times: "A remarkable picture called 'Black Cyclone,' was presented last week at the Capitol. We imagine that as it contained horses as players, it would be overdone and therefore very dull at times. Such an idea was dissipated after we witnessed one reel, as we became absorbed in the story, feeling a deep sympathy for Lady, the gray mare, and no little admiration for Rex, the hero, a fine flashing black horse, who, toward the end, figures in a fight with the Killer, a dastardly pinto. This conflict was far more thrilling than most film fights with human players. This picture is one of sterling merit, which will interest everybody whether they ride horseback or lean back in automobiles."

Sunday News: "All the movie actors on Broadway last week kicked about, barked, whinnied, ate oats, or hised. Some one discovered that animals are natural actors and never suffer from fits of temperament, and so they were starred and the movie girls and boys called in to support them. At the Capitol the human actors didn't have a chance to come up to the wonderful wild horse, Rex, that trotted through the scenes with all the dignity of Jack Barrymore. Supporting Rex were snakes, lions, dogs, skunks, and bears. The humans managed to slip in every now and then, but didn't seriously spoil the picture."

"My Wife and I"—Warner Bros. —Forum, Los Angeles

Record: "As a piece of film work it is one of the best shown here for some time, for it has a perfect roundness and a lack of unnecessary detail. Casting, direction, acting and title work are all exceptionally good. Irene Rich is especially lovely and lovable. Huntly Gordon is his usual self and John Haron does an excellent piece of work.

Herald: "Millard Webb has handled this story with such splendid understanding that it is a picture that cannot fail to please. Miss Rich plays with her usual ease and is at all times pleasing to the eye. Huntly Gordon gives her splendid support. His expressive face and understanding of his part put him on a par with Miss Rich for an all-around good performance. Constance Bennett enacts her part in a very convincing manner."

Examiner: "The picture is well worth seeing. The cast is particularly good. Millard Webb directed the film with a deft appreciation of Miss Rich's best qualities."

Times: "Miss Rich is appealing and extremely sympathetic. Huntly Gordon plays in his usual adequate fashion, while Johnny Harron is most convincing."

"Proud Flesh"—Metro-Goldwyn—Loew's State, Los Angeles

Los Angeles Evening Express: "'Proud Flesh' is a scintillant comedy as fresh as a breath of spring air. The thing is so well co-ordinated as to direction, title writing and acting that it has a delightful lilt to it. No one who had anything to do with the picture took himself or the story seriously. As a consequence there is a brightness to the film that is rarely seen. Eleanor Boardman as Fernanda is beautiful and spirited. Pat O'Malley, curiously enough, plays Pat O'Malley and he makes it one of the most likable roles he has ever played. The outstanding playing of the picture is that of Harrison Ford as Don Jaime Diego. Ford plays the role with finesse and injects much subtle charm by the suavity with which he clothes his movements. Trixie Friganza William J. Kelly are splendid as the aunt and uncle of Fernanda. Trixie films like a million. 'Proud Flesh' is highly amusing."

Los Angeles Examiner: "King Vidor has directed the story for all there was in it. Harrison Ford as the Spanish don, does the best work of his career. He is most effective as the suave, nonchalant balcony climber of Barcelona, and puts a neat little devilish twist into the finale of the picture which evoked plenty of mirth at the performances yesterday. Pat O'Malley, as the plumber, is great. He's the typical young American to the core. He stands up for his rights and demands an honest love in exchange for his heart's devotion, with a courage which would justify a better cause. He's good at it, too, and whether his attire is that of the smart young business man, or the working plumber, he commands more than the usual ohs and ahs of admiration from his house. Eleanor Boardman makes the most of her role and Miss Friganza plays Mrs. McGee with plenty of good clothes and good comedy."

Los Angeles Daily Times: "The cleverest portrayal in many respects in that of Ford as the Spaniard. I do not believe I have ever seen him do anything more finished. At the same time Miss Boardman's work as the heroine is splendid. She exhibits more decided comedy talent than ever. O'Malley performed very valiant service as the hero."

Los Angeles Record: "It's one of the most entertaining pictures in town. Take 'Proud Flesh' for that tired feeling; for that dejected spirit; for what ails you. There is unusual freshness in its treatment, sparkle in its titles and novelty in its plot."

"Kiss Me Again"—Warner Bros. —Stillman, Cleveland

Cleveland Plain Dealer: "You will find, if you will go to the Stillman this week—and if you are an adult and appreciate sound humor, I hope you'll go—that Ernst Lubitsch has 'done it' again. He has discussed the solemn state of matrimony in what Americans popularly believe to be the French methods. In other words he has treated it frivolously, harmlessly and most amusingly. 'Kiss Me Again' is the picture, and it's splendid humor and entertainment. Lubitsch did it the first time with 'The Marriage Circle.' His new one treats the subject a little more broadly and a little more humorously. I'd certainly try to see 'Kiss Me Again' if I were you. It's fine sport, and I say it's adult entertainment not because it's unfit for children. It is fit. The treatment of the play is new. And in these days of film making the treatment is everything."

"Are Parents People?" — Paramount—Rivoli, New York

Bulletin: "This young person who sprung into popularity with 'Peter Pan' keeps on winning more and more admirers with every picture. Further on this reviewer comments that 'Are Parents People?' is an ideal summer film."

The Post: "'Are Parents People?' at the Rivoli this week, is more than usually entertaining light comedy from the story by Alice Duer Miller."

World: "As for Miss Bronson, her first appearance since her skyrocket rise in 'Peter Pan' is promising if not epoch-making."

Herald Tribune reviewer: "Admirers of Betty Bronson, the 'Peter Pan' of the films who had any fears that the youthful actress might be doomed to be an inane picture-star can now rest easy. For in 'Are Parents People?' her second photo-play which is playing at the Rivoli Theatre this week, she reveals once more all of the vivid and distinctive charm of her first performance."

"Beggar on Horseback"—Paramount—Criterion, New York

World: "It tickled me last night, and that is all I was looking for last night with the possible exception of a keg of iced beer."

Tribune: "'Beggar on Horseback' is a perfectly directed picture. It follows the stage play closely and is able at times to improve it, since the screen can do much more than the stage with the stuff that dreams are made of. . . By all means see 'Beggar on Horseback.' It is an interesting picture."

Times: "There came to the Criterion theatre last night a delightful novelty in the film version of 'Beggar on Horseback,' the eminently successful stage satire by George S. Kaufman and Marc Connelly. The photoplay was directed by James Cruze who produced 'The Covered Wagon,' and once again this versatile director has rung the bell. . . Here is a picture which is another feather in the cap of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, and one we feel certain which will keep persons in a jolly mood during the whole of its screening."

Journal: "'Beggar on Horseback' opened at the Criterion last night, and we enjoyed it so much we forgot the heat. . . For its imaginative spirit, it is one of the best pictures we have ever seen. . . The whole evening was great entertainment."

Bulletin: "One amusing situation followed another, and the audience was kept happy by the unusual story. Even though the temperature was four degrees cooler than Death Valley the audience remained in high spirits and applauded the picture throughout."

Mirror: "James Cruze scores triumph in fantastic screen version of popular Kaufman-Connelly play."

Sun: "The Beggar on Horseback," a fine upstanding cinema effort."

What's Back of the Big Swing to Simplex?

WHEN there's a noticeable wave of increased demand for a particular commodity there is always a substantial reason for it.

We believe the nation-wide increase of preference for Simplex Projectors indicates that more and more theatre owners are finding that there is a real tangible relation between the quality of projection and the popularity of a theatre. They have learned that the earning power of a theatre depends on the quality of projection as well as the quality of pictures.

Many theatre owners tell us they choose the Simplex because of its design and sturdy construction; knowing at the same time that its steady, smooth performance is due to the craftsmanship which makes each part correct to the last hidden detail. They know the Simplex will bring out the best there is in any picture.

Others choose on results of experience. They know the Simplex is dependable—that many of the largest theatres in the country insist on this machine—and they know it pays to have the best.

The whole answer, then, is maximum value—long life; steady, dependable performance—and better projection.

You want to get maximum value for your money. Look into this question of better projection. It has a dollars-and-cents value to any theatre. You'll find, as thousands of others have, that it pays to buy a Simplex.

Raymond Griffith

Edward Sutherland, Director

RAYMOND GRIFFITH Comedies

RAYMOND GRIFFITH is the new comedy king of the screen. He earned the title with "Changing Husbands," "Forty Winks," "Miss Bluebeard" and "The Night Club." He clinches it with his latest, "Paths to Paradise," the funniest picture of 1925.

Today, Griffith is a star, with his own producing unit—his own director (Eddie Sutherland, former assistant for Chaplin), gagmen, scenarists, cameramen, technical staff, etc. He picks his own stories and supervises their production from 'script to screen.

In other words, Raymond Griffith is in the position of an independent producer. With this difference he has no financial worries; he doesn't need to pinch the pennies; he is not forced to assume the roles of star, banker and prop boy at one and the same time; and he has the entire resources, in money and talent, of the greatest motion picture organization in the world to draw upon.

Under these ideal conditions, Raymond Griffith is producing two elaborate feature comedies for The Greater Forty:

"ON DRESS PARADE." The merry mix-ups of a high-hatter trying to be a regular fellow.

"THE STAGE DOOR JOHNNY." Raymond prospecting among the Broadway gold-diggers.

MEIGHAN PRODUCTIONS

DURING the next six months the Thomas Meighan producing organization will make two features of exceptionally high calibre for Paramount release:

"THE MAN WHO FOUND HIMSELF." Written especially for Meighan by Booth Tarkington. With a cast including Virginia Valli, Lynn Fontanne, Ralph and Frank Morgan, Norman Trevor, Julia Hoyt, Hugh Cameron, Charles Stevenson and Victor Moore. The profoundly dramatic story of a millionaire black sheep who, though innocent, goes to jail and has to fight his way up to honor and happiness upon his release.

"THE SHAMROCK." Meighan in a real Irish story. Can you imagine the response at the box office! Starting as a hard-boiled New York politician, the role calls for Tom to journey to Ireland on an underhand errand and there learn the meaning of true manhood. The cast will amaze you. The production is bound to be the greatest Meighan ever.

These two Greater Meighan Pictures in THE GREATER FORTY are more examples of what Paramount's Independence PLUS means to your box office!

If You Haven't the Streng
At Least Sell Your Hous

(No. 440—Straight from the Shoulder Talk by Carl

I AM DOING EVERYTHING IN MY POWER TO KEEP YOU in business as an exhibitor.

I AM DOING THIS FOR MYSELF AS MUCH AS I AM FOR you, so I am not posing as a philanthropist.

YOU CAN RUN YOUR HOUSE BETTER THAN ANYONE else in the world can run it. Your personal interest in it makes your brain work better and faster than the brain of any man you might hire to run it.

NO PRODUCER CAN RUN YOUR HOUSE AS WELL AS you can. He does not know your clientele as well as you do. He doesn't know local conditions. He hasn't the personal following that you have in your community. For that reason you are a better man to run your house than any producer in the world, including myself.

I DON'T WANT TO BUY YOUR HOUSE. I'VE TOLD YOU that a dozen times and I mean it. But—

IF YOU HAVEN'T THE COURAGE TO HANG ON TO IT, if you haven't the backbone or the resources to fight to keep what you have built up, don't imagine for one minute that you have got to give it away to the first producer who may happen to try to scare you into selling.

DON'T BE FOOLED INTO THINKING THERE IS ONLY one possible buyer for your house. I'll pay you the best market price

th to Hang On and Fight,
e to a Friend, Not a Foe!

Laemmle, President of the Universal Pictures Corp.)

for your house if I have to buy it. I still say that I can't run it as well as you can and I still say no producer can do so—but rather than see you licked to a frazzle and rather than see you give your house to a producer who wants to hog the whole industry, I'll come through and buy at the right price.

THIS IS PRETTY STRAIGHT TALK. IT MAY COST ME money. It is not the kind of talk a prospective buyer usually uses, but I'm not in the habit of bluffing or stalling and I don't propose to do either with you.

I KNOW YOU CAN HANG ONTO YOUR HOUSE AND win a glorious victory for independence. I know the force of public feeling will back you up. I know you can get all the independent pictures you need to keep your house on a paying basis. I know that all you need on earth is the guts to fight for what you are entitled to keep. But if in spite of all that, if you still think the business is setting too hot a pace for you, don't imagine you are licked. You can still get what your house is worth, take my word for it.

DON'T BE BULLDOZED INTO SELLING TO A MONOPoly. Don't be fooled by threats to run you out of business. If you are absolutely bent on selling, for heaven's sake at least sell to someone who has not worked day and night to ruin you and control the whole industry.

Some Opinions

"WHAT will the exhibitors do?"

"What has come out of the Milwaukee Convention?"

"What do you think of conditions—of the future?"

I have had these questions put to me for the past several weeks by men of varying trade connections, many of them in prominent positions.

I, too, have put the same queries to others; so suppose I give herein the replies I received in confidence from some men of eminence and experience—a picture man, a lawyer, a banker and a newspaper editor.

The picture man—not, by the way, of the so-called "Big Three"—said, in conclusion: "You see, every point we have discussed leads right back in a circle to—good pictures. Box office attractions. Shows to make the theatre pay. Big theatres; little theatres; Broadway theatres; rural theatres. All are up against this one problem: PICTURES! That's what worries them, and that's what worries me—as a manufacturer, also as a distributor. Product!

"Theatres? That's the other fellow's problem—and a big enough one. Let the other fellow run them; I want to book them. And I know mighty well that I will, if I have the attractions. So that's my sole job and it doesn't leave any time for speeches, flag raising or schemes to get to market by any shorter route."

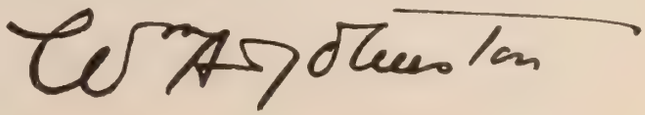
The banker and the lawyer make themselves felt in this business—and in some others. What they said can be summed up in a single utterance: "You fellows have got to be decidedly more sincere. That goes high and low. Big Three and Little Three, trust and independents, producers and exhibitors."



The banker went further. "Call it honesty," said he. "Just plain honesty, that's all."

"You've got to deal with each other with the cards on the table. All the cards. Stop holding back. Stop pussy-footing. Shrewdness is one thing, but a little thing; character is a big thing and the foundation of all business. If yours is a game of politics, play them. But if it's a business, cut the politics out. You claim that over a billion dollars are invested in the American industry. Well, then, that's a business, not a poker game. It's big business and therefore demands big business methods—the basis of which is frank, straightforward dealing and not bluffing, sharpshooting and windjamming."

Said the newspaper man—he is not to be hired, by the way: "I've been reading some of this stuff aired to the public about your trusts and your independents. I've kept it out of my columns because it's all Greek to me, and the public, I conceive, doesn't understand it and hasn't the slightest interest in it. You seem to be pretty hazy yourselves, as to just what an independent is.

"The public is, however, interested in pictures, tremendously so. So it seems to me that here lies the supreme interest of the man who sells to the public, the exhibitor—in pictures; what are the best, where to get them, how to buy them. His line of demarkation isn't between trust and independent; it's between good and bad pictures, between salable and unsalable merchandise. If, as a publicist I were asked to advise either group, trust or independent—if such groups do exist—I'd say to each: 'Saw wood and say nothing—except about good pictures,' and there I'd say a lot."

An Exhibitor on Independence

FRED S. MEYER, of the Palace Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio, believes that the public ought to know the internal situation in the industry. He devotes a page in his "Palace Theatre Magazine" to a discussion of "Independence," and writes:

"Of late the public has heard and read a great deal about the contemplated war against 'The Big Three,' so that the independence of the theatre may be preserved. Believing that the theatre-going public in general, and the readers of this Magazine particularly, are interested, we've decided to devote our entire Editorial Page this month to a frank discussion of conditions as they really exist. The public has a perfect right to know what it's all about, and this enlightenment should be frank, unbiased, truthful.

"To that end, the editor wants it clearly understood that the Palace Theatre is an independent theatre in all that the name implies; independently owned, operated, booked and managed, and considered as independent by Film Producers and Distributors. This policy has been maintained since the inception of this theatre and will be so continued in the future. Therefore, any explanation made here can be construed neither biased nor as propoganda.

"Theatre-owners feel they have a legitimate complaint because Paramount, Loew and First National no longer content themselves with the production and distribution of pictures, but acquire theatres as well, operating these in direct competition to independently owned theatres. In other words, according to one side of the argument the Film Companies want it all; and unless they're stopped, they'll have us 'going and coming.' And the 'Big Three' come back with the reply that 'we only buy or build where we are forced to, in order to procure an adequate representation for our product.' And strange as it may seem, there's much truth and logic in both arguments.

"Marcus Loew operated theatres long before he entered the producing and distributing field; he bought Metro-Goldwyn in order to assure himself of the required number of good pictures 'for self-preservation.' First National was founded by a group of theatre-owners who aligned themselves into another, also for the sake of 'self-preservation,' in order to be able to have good pictures, and without being forced to subject themselves to the mercy of Paramount.

"This, then, would make it appear as though the Famous Players-Lasky Corp., or Paramount, were 'the root of all evil.' Perhaps they are; let's see. Fairness prompts the admission that Famous Players were the first to give us big pictures; this meant higher production costs, necessitating in turn higher rentals. It is neither our place nor inclination to discuss the equity of 'film rentals' and whether they are justified or not; but in this, like any other argument, we always try to 'see the other fellow's point of view.' If Paramount bought or built theatres, they did so because the theatre that formerly used Paramount pictures either could not or would not pay a fair rental for quality product, with the result that Paramount had to acquire theatres 'for self-preservation.'

"The independent policy of the Palace Theatre will be continued in the future as in the past; we may again 'sign up' for Paramount—and we may not. If we do, it will be because it is our honest belief that Paramount has a greater amount of consistently good quality pictures than any one else. We're neither afraid nor alarmed at the possibility of Paramount, First National or Metro coming into Hamilton to build or acquire a theatre if we do not use their product. Theatres can't be operated as chain-stores because nobody can take away from us our community standing, our willingness to help and be of service to our town, our individuality.

"As we said before, there's much room for argument on both sides of this controversy. Paramount does not produce all the good pictures on the market, but it does offer consistency to a greater degree than any one else. And we're just selfish enough to admit that 'self-preservation is the first law of nature' with us as with you and everybody else. If we can buy the best at equitable terms, you will be benefited. If we are forced to take the 'bitter along with the sweet,' then there'll be plenty opportunities for one or all of the 'Big Three' to invade Hamilton.

"And if it comes to that, we're more than willing to rest our case in the hands of you—and of those whom we've tried to serve in the past five years."

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

Director Monta Bell is using Ann Pennington to impersonate Ann Pennington in the Follies scenes of "Pretty Ladies" (Metro-Goldwyn), now in work.

CRACKING THE WHIP

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS with his new picture, "Don Q, Son of Zorro," has literally and figuratively, cracked the whip—literally in the competent and colorful manner in which he uses it to defend himself and outwit his opponents, and figuratively in the way he will hit the box-office. If our predictions count for anything at all it looks as if he has a real, Brand A, Number 1, attraction here—one which will draw the crowds.

He has cracked the whip in favor of dashing melodrama, romantic adventure and all the appeal which plays up the heroics. He has returned to the type of story that established him as the leading romanticist of the screen.

You remember "The Mark of Zorro?" Well here is "Don Q," a chip of the old block. But more moving, more compact, more spontaneous, more picturesque. Like Fred Stone on the stage—an actor who always surprises his audiences with some new accomplishment, Douglas Fairbanks sees to it that the public (the fickle public) must be constantly surprised. No going over the old bridges. He burns these once he has used them.

He comes on in this picture, a dashing Don—a playfellow with a whip. He wields it with much better grace, much finer polish than he did the sword in "The Three Musketeers." He fights his way into romance—and fights his way out—to save his head.

No picture has carried greater speed, nor a finer swing. Its plot will be understood by child and adult—of any race and clime—and just as easily appreciated. In addition to its concentrated, high-pressure action it has the tone and quality of atmosphere and settings which always mark a Fairbanks picture.

At the Globe Theatre, New York, where it opened Monday night to a distinguished audience, it was enthusiastically acclaimed as a gem. The night was excessively warm, yet this audience kept its seats—the humidity being forgotten in the swirl of events which raced so rapidly across the screen. Fairbanks and his players held them all in a tight embrace. He cracked the whip and we followed him through his trials and triumphs.

"I DO"

JACQUELINE LOGAN and Ralph Gillespie responded with "I Do" the other day when the clergyman asked them some very pertinent questions. The wedding took place at the bride's home in Hollywood, with only a few intimate friends at the ceremony. The benedict is prominent in real estate circles.

An ironic twist of humor accompanied the announcement of the wedding. On the day Miss Logan became Mrs. Gillespie, her latest picture, "If Marriage Fails?" was playing the New York Colony Theatre.

Ten thousand live bees—count 'em—ten thousand—appear in this scene for "The Keeper of the Bees" (F. B. O.) which the James Lee Meehan company is shooting. Meehan, the son-in-law of Gene Stratton-Porter, the authr, is directing.

PUTTING IT OVER

GEORGE O'BRIEN is making a great hit with the Fox forces—and also with the public. From the day when he appeared in minor bits to just a trifle over a year ago when he emerged from obscurity and became a star he has added to his popularity. There is a reason. He is always sincere. We first noticed the conviction about his work in "The Man Who Came Back," where he gave a warm, sympathetic study of the young ne'er-do-well who found his honor. His talent was no flash in the pan. His ability to feel the role was just as marked in "The Iron Horse," "The Roughneck" and "The Painted Lady." One trait stood out noticeably. He is modest. He doesn't flaunt any heroic postures, but simply strives to humanize his characters in as quiet a manner as possible.

Now that he has "arrived" his sponsors have rewarded him with two of the most attractive roles of his meteoric rise to stardom. They are enthusiastic about his work in "The Fighting Heart," and "Havoc,"—characterizations widely different. In the former he plays a country youth who fights liquor and pugilists to conquer himself, his enemies, and win the respect and love of the girl. It is a part which calls upon O'Brien to show his athletic prowess. In "Havoc" the young star plays a British soldier of the late war who, living through those hectic days, finds himself caught in the quicksands of social intrigue. It is a role calling for the utmost expression. That his versatility is appreciated one need only to turn to his newest production which gives him a character totally different from anything he has portrayed, heretofore. The picture is the silent version of John Golden's play, "Thank You," and O'Brien enacts the part of a young minister.

100 PER CENT

ONE HNDRED PER CENT representation has been given the Johnny Hines series of pictures by the National Board of Review when it included "The Crackerjack" in its selected list of photoplays along with "The Speed Spook" and "The Early Bird." Which is some achievement, as it is doubtful whether a series of state-right or national releasing organization productions has ever been accorded this distinction by the Board.

This, to us, is the ultimate in courage among screen players—Billie Dove permitting Archie Stout, the cameraman, to trim her bobbed tresses while on location in Arizona for "Wild Horse Mesa" (Paramount). Zane Grey, left, and George Irving, right, offered counsel.

NEW TRIMMINGS FOR TOM

NOW that Tom Mix has been presented with a saddle and the other accoutrements used by the Northwest Mounted he can go ahead and "shoot" a story around this famous troop who patrol the Canadian open spaces.

It was while he was in Canada recently that he expressed a wish to own such an outfit. A woman who had stood next to him the day he was in Toronto overheard the remark he made to one of his friends and sent along the w. k. trimmings—with her compliments. She had felt herself indebted by reason of the hours of clean and wholesome entertainment he afforded her through the medium of his pictures.

Now Tom astride Tony can go out and get his man.

Speaking of Tony reminds us that the day the celebrated steed reached Mixville ranch after his trans-continental tour, his equine Pullman de luxe looked like a modern rail-riding Noah's Ark. A count showed fully a score of specimens of animal and bird life.

Here is the census: One satin-coated sorrel pony, known to civilization as Tony, one black long-haired Belgian police dog presented by Brussels exhibitors; one French sheep dog, presented by the Fox exchange of Paris, one English sheep dog from the London exhibitors, one Chow given to Tom's daughter by Lady Trevor of London, one black Great Dane from German exhibitors, one St. Bernard pup given by the people of Rheims, one Highland terrier presented by Glasgow exhibitors, one German boar hound from Count von Baravig's kennels in Berlin, one German police dog from the Berlin police department, one yearling colt—a descendant of Man O' War—given by Cincinnati exhibitors, one gentleman goat presented by Indianapolis newsboys—and one pair of owls (with whiskers) given by a St. Louis police official.

Tom intends to place the dogs in a set of de luxe kennels—the offspring of Man O' War will become a stable mate of Tony and learn equine etiquette from him, the goat will be put to work as a four-legged "white-wing", cleaning the ranch of tin cans and debris—and the owls will be trained to eat field mice and holler "Tom!" instead of "Hoot!" While they are hoot owls Tom doesn't want them paging Hoot Gibson—unless Hoot is there to answer the call.

EGRABBED THROUGH THE ETHER

EDWARD GRIBBON had the unique experience recently of being signed for a new production by radio. Marooned with other members of the company in the fastness of the Royal Gorge—fifty miles from any habitation—it became necessary that word be gotten to Eddie that he had been cast for a prominent part in the film version of the play, "Seven Days." Unable to communicate with the much-sought player either by mail or telegraph, his manager put the message on the air by means of KFWB, the broadcasting station of the Warner studio, in order that his client might hold himself in readiness for his next engagement.

The Universal Ranch Riders, those daring boys who bust the bronc' and rope the rarin' steer in Universal Westerns, brave the musical efforts of Josie Sedgwick between less strenuous scenes.

A VOICE FROM LONDON

THEY comes and they goes. Some go away for a long, long time and when reminiscences are indulged in, the past gives up its figures. Here is Nigel Barrie, for example. He was a leading man for several of our leading actresses a few seasons ago—and before he became associated with the screen was a headliner in vaudeville, expressing the modern dances. He writes us that he is still in the land of the living. As he puts it—"I have been away from Hollywood for two and a half years and I expect most people have forgotten that I ever existed by now, but I'm coming back some day when I get a chance."

Mr. Barrie, now located in London, has been kept busy ever since he went to the old country (a term which is still used by the foreign-born). He spent the first year starring in four Gaumont films in London, and has been over in Germany doing the same thing in four Ufa productions, playing parts (as he puts it) such as he never got in Hollywood.

With the experience gained over there, Mr. Barrie should have no trouble in interesting American producers when he decides to return to the U. S. A. He expects to come back in the near future and settle down in Hollywood.

AIT COSTS BUT $350.00

ALMOST unusual two-reeler was shown to newspaper men at the Universal projection rooms in New York last week. Entitled "The Wail of the Banshee," it was written, directed and produced for three hundred and fifty dollars (there's economy for you) and is dedicated by its author, Tom Reed, western director of publicity for Universal, to all the "Vons" in the industry—including Stroheim, Sternberg, Lubitsch, Tirpitz, Seyffertitz, Eltz, et al. It is a satire on realism in the movies.

PATHE'S OUTING

ANYONE trying to enter Pathe's offices this Saturday will find the doors locked and the shades drawn. The typewriters will be silent and the chairs will be vacant. It will be Pathe's day. The employees of the home office and the New York and Newark branches of Pathe will hold an outing—taking siege of the Panchard Inn at Massapequa, Long Island.

This means that a few of the boys will have to be up bright and early for the buses make their departure at 9.30 A. M.

The outing will be in the nature of a general social get-together of the Patheites. Golf, baseball, quoits, croquet (yes, it's still being played), "duck-on-the-rock," leap-frog, mumbly-peg, follow-the-leader, hide-and-seek, pushball, handball, and dancing are some of the pastimes scheduled for the outing. The edict has gone forth from the higher-ups that anyone caught talking shop during the day will be tossed over the Queensboro Bridge on the return trip.

INSURING THE COW

BUSTER KEATON has taken out insurance on his cow. While it has become the common thing for actors and musicians to insure their fingers, legs, eyes and voices, the frozen-faced comedian has started something new by taking out a policy on a Jersey bossy.

"Brown Eyes" (that's her name) has become burdened down with enough insurance to pay completely for Buster's new picture. The cow and long-eared mule left Hollywood pastures the other day. They went via motor truck to graze upon Arizona alfalfa—and eventually will participate in practically all the scenes of Keaton's new comedy.

Let it be said for "Brown Eyes" that she screens well. Out of film tests of a thousand cows—tests that took up many weary hours—she was the only entry that registered a sure-fire cow-like expression. She has poise, restraint—and milk in abundance. Two dairy farm-hands will act as "chambermaids" to the cow while she is on location.

As for the mule—well we cannot find out whether this usually stubborn actor carries any policy. Probably not. Being an independent critter he doubtless kicked when the veterinary looked him over for inurance.

While a mule is a mule, still this being the age when the evolutionists are having their say, it is barely possible that this particular mule will appear a trifle changed by the time the journey is completed. He may look a little cowed or somewhat sheepish in keeping such constant company with a docile cow.

AN EDUCATIONAL ROMANCE

A ROMANCE which had its inception during the third national convention of Educational Film Exchange managers, held at Los Angeles last year, was disclosed when L. Maynard Schwartz, manager of the Chicago office, announced that he was married a few days ago to Bertha Isaacs, a Los Angeles girl whom he met at the Coast convention.

Just a year ensued between the meeting of the pair and their marriage, and the young benedict and his bride celebrated the nuptials by coming on to New York for the fourth national convention — just completed. The newly-weds will spend their honeymoon in an auto tour which will include Lake George, Niagara Falls (of course), Saratoga Springs and Washington.

PARAMOUNT'S PRIDE

PARAMOUNT is registering pride over the fact that out of ten pictures listed for appreciative review in the forthcoming Exceptional Photoplays Bulletin, four of them carry the Famous Players-Lasky banner. Whole Country is Organizing for Greater Movie Season

Committees in Leading Cities Set Wheels in Motion

ELEVEN cities—New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Detroit, Kansas City, Atlanta, Milwaukee, Indianapolis, Denver, Salt Lake City, and New Haven—have organized exhibitor committees for the "Greater Movie Season" sponsored by the Hays organization.

In New York more than 150 theatre owners met at the Palace Theatre June 16, and the August drive was set before them by Charles L. O'Reilly, President of the T. O. C. C. and Jerome Beatty, director of the national campaign.

The following committee of twenty-three was selected to take charge of the drive: R. F. Woodhull, Sydney S. Cohen, Lee A. Ochs, J. J. Murdock, Nicholas Schenck, Dr. Hugo Riesenfeld, Joseph Plunkett, Samuel Rothafel, B. S. Moss, A. H.Schwartz, J. J. Maloney, Charles Levine, Lawrence Bolignino, Rudolph Sanders, William Brandt, Marty D. Schwartz, Charles Steiner Bernard Grob, Charles Moses, Louis F. Blumenthal, Joseph M, Seider, Leon Rosenblatt, Jerome Beatty, and Charles L. O'Reilly, temporary chairman.

The committee will meet at luncheon June 22 to arrange a complete campaign. Joseph M. Seider as president of the Jersey M.P.T.O., issued a statement on June 17 in which he said that the participation in the movement by New Jersey had not been definitely decided upon, but would come up for action at the organization's convention to be held at Asbury Park commencing June 29.

Ten other great centers—Chicago, Philadelphia, Detroit, Kansas City, Atlanta, Milwaukee, Indianapolis, Denver, Salt Lake City and New Haven—have organized their exhibitor - committees and enthusiastically adopting the Greater Movie Season plan, have set in motion statewide campaigns of a size never before attempted on individual territories. The fact that the field organization of Greater Movie Season had been operating through the country only a week when these ten cities swung into line, showing the way for others to follow, is indicative of the national exhibitor approval that the movement has now won.

A meeting of prominent Chicago theatre owners, managers, and exchange executives, heartily endorsed the appointment of Ralph Kettering as general manager of their campaign. Kettering who is well-known as a writer on motion picture subjects and as an executive of the Jones, Linick and Schaefer Theatres, will have as his aides on the Publicity Committee Lou Kramer, Universal, chairman; Al Sobler, Balaban and Katz; Harry Earl, of Lubiner and Trinzi; Russel Moon, Paramount; Dan Roche, Producers Distributing Corporation; Charley Raymond, Balaban and Katz; and Jay M. Shreck of the Exhibitors Herald.

More than one hundred and fifty exhibitors in Philadelphia appointed Frank Buhler, managing director of the Stanley Company, as General Chairman, with David Barrist heading the Finance Committee; Abe L. Einstein, Publicity; H. D. Westcott, Speakers; Edgar Moss, Film Exchanges; Edgar Wolf, Decorations. A special executive committee has as additional members Ben Amsterdam, George P. Aarons, Abe Sablosky and Bart McHuh. The Philadelphian structure was made still more concise by the creation of zone committeemen who will supervise operations in their respective theatre zones.

The following were appointed: Charley Thompson, Harry Smith, Denny Berkory, Joe Forte, Ben Fertel, Charles Segal, Marcus Benn, Jay Emanuel, Jack Rosenthal, M. M. Wexler, Clarence Hexter, Sam Blatt, Al Fischer, Zake Stallman, Mike Lessy, Elmer Prince, John Evans, M. Fineman, Jack Flynn, Doc. Steumpfig, Jack Ridgway, Herb Elliott, Sam Hyman, Bill Jones, John Bagley, Columbus Stamper, Morris Stiefel, Johnny Eckhardt, Abe Altman, Charles Rappoport, John Hays, Morris Brenner and Sam ("Steve") Stiefel.

H. J. Schad, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware, one of the speakers, voiced his interest in the campaign and pledged his support to its success.

Frank Buhler emphasized the fact that the Greater Movie Season Campaign was non-partisan in its appeal and scope and that its purpose was to benefit all exhibitors, large and small and all branches of the motion picture industry. He called for the undivided support of those present in making a success of the drive and assured them that the benefits accruing to the industry would compensate the exhibitors many fold for their outlay of time and money.

The operation of the campaign throughout Michigan will be in the hands of H. M. Richey, general manager of the Theatre Owners of Michigan, Inc., who already has placed interesting plans before the Hays office and has been one of the most enthusiastic supporters of the season from its inception. For the city of Detroit, David Palfreyman, Secretary of the Film Board of Trade, will be general manager, Fred T. Grenell, of the Grenell Advertising Agency in charge of publicity and John E. Niebes of the Dawn Theatre, treasurer.

At the first meeting a budget of $10,000 for this city was passed upon, this money to be spent for newspaper advertising, billboards, novelties, parade expenses, etc., which from all indications will give Detroit a campaign of far reaching possibilities, and one of the most effective in the entire country, due solely to the efforts of H. M. Richey of the state organization.

Weekly meetings are planned to report on the advance made by the different committees and to offer suggestions and ideas that come up from time to time.

In Kansas City Jay Means, vice-president of the M.P.T.O., will control the Greater Movie Season as general manager, assisted by C. E. Cook, who is also secretary of the M.P.T.O. Financing will be attended to by Dave Harding of the Capitol Enterprise Theatres, with Jack Roth, of the Isis Theatre assistant general manager, of the budget committee, other members of which are Bruce Fowler, Manager of the new Newman theatre, and R. R. Biechele president of the M.P.T.O. of Kansas and Missouri.

Theatres and exchanges are well represented on the publicity committee, the personnel being, Samuel Carver, Liberty Theatre, general manager; Bob Dary, Universal, assistant manager; R. Cunningham, Paramount and M. Jacobs, Royal Theatre, committeemen. William Flynn of the Globe Theatre will organize the parades, while Arthur Cole of Paramount brings the idea before civic and commercial bodies.

Mr. Biechele is organizing all the Kansas-Missouri exhibitors for state-wide drives.

A telegram from Atlanta says:

"At enthusiastic meeting with one hundred per cent exhibitor representation the details of plans and finances were agreed upon and the following elected to the organization. Willard C. Patterson of the Metropolitan Theatre, Chairman; Tom Games of Loew's Grand, Tom Coleman of the Cameo. James Jackson of the Tudor, Howard Kingsmore of the Howard Theatre as chairman of the board of directors and Alpha Fowler of the Palace, secretary.

That Atlanta exchangemen will match local exhibitors in promoting Greater Movie Season was indicated in substantial terms on Monday when, at the regular weekly meeting of the Film Board of Trade, plans for the campaign outlined by M. C. Coyne, advance man sent out from the Hays organization, were unanimously endorsed and a committee from the Board named to work in conjunction with Atlanta exhibitors.

George R. Allison, who heads the Fox Film Corporation in this territory, was chosen chairman with Ralph B. Williams, branch manager for Universal; W. W. Anderson, Pathe branch manager and Dave Prince, branch manager of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation completing the personnel of the committee that will meet with local exhibitors to form the permanent organization pledged to put over Greater Movie Season in Atlanta.

At Monday's meeting the Film Board of Trade not only endorsed the plans and purposes of Greater Movie Season, but officially tendered the use of the Board's headquarters at 307 Haas-Howell Building, and the services of their executive secretary, E. L. Cole, for the duration of the campaign.

Further impetus was given the movement when Dan Michalove, Universal's assistant sales chief in the South, consented to allow Earle E. Briggs to handle publicity for the campaign.

That everyone in Milwaukee is behind the movement heart and soul and that the season there will be a guaranteed "wow" is the report from field-representatives in that territory. A budget was fixed and sub-committees selected at a mass meeting of exhibitors, on June 12th, to support Tom Saxe as general manager of the campaign. Newspaper and general publicity work has already commenced, backed by the efforts of Stan Brown of the Saxe Enterprises; Anne McMurdy, Universal; Eddie Weisfeldt, Wisconsin Theatre; Eddie Corcoran, Famous Players; James Williamson, Orpheum Circuit, and Emil Francke of the Silliman Enterprises.

At a banquet on June 19th, members of the industry and press will celebrate the opening of the campaign in Indianapolis, where Ace Berry and H. C. Dressendorfer will supervise the various committees. Incidentally the Indianapolis News heads the initial list of newspapers that will participate in the National Contest with trips for two around the world, to Los Angeles and to Miami as the three principal prizes. From first to last the News will make the contest a front-page feature, joining other papers that have been quick to see the value of cooperating strongly with exhibitors at a time when public interest focuses, almost exclusively on the screen.

Excellent cooperation is reported from Denver where leading theatres have gone on record in endorsement of the season.

Harry Long of the American Theatre heads the list of executives there. Harry E. Huffman, president of the Colorado M. P. T. O., expressed such favor of the plan that an exhibitors meeting elected a board of directors that is one of the most representative throughout the country. F. H. Ricketson, Rialto Theatre; Harry E. Huffman, Blue Bird Theatre; Gordon B. Ashworth, Federal Theatre; Homer E. Ellison, Jr., Queen Theatre; R. J. Garland, manager Metro-Goldwyn Exchange; Charles R. Gilmour, manager Vitagraph-Warner Bros.; J. H. Ashby, manager First National. The board decided to secure a high-grade campaign expert to assist Mr. Long, believing that the drive deserves the entire services of such an exploiteer.

Tentative plans are being formulated for the exhibitors and exchange men of Salt Lake City to do their part in the Greater Movie campaign that will be started the middle of July preparatory to the beginning of the drive which starts the first week in August. Lloyd Willis, representing the Hays organization in connection with the drive is in Salt Lake and laid the plans of the campaign before the local men.

At the first meeting a general committee was appointed to select other committees and to start the ball rolling. The exhibitors are enthused over the idea and there is but little doubt that the part to be played will be done with the utmost ability and power. Carl A. Porter, manager of the Victory Theatre was elected chairman of the general committee which is acting in the capacity of a board of directors.

The other exhibitor members are Eddie Diamond, manager of the Pantages Theatre; H. H. Rand, manager of the Isis Theatre; George E. Carpenter, manager of the Paramount Empress Theatre; C. F. Montgomery, manager of the American Theatre, and L. Lanning, managing the Kinema Theatre. The exchange managers represented on the committee include W. F. Gordon, Associated First National; Al G. Pickett, Famous Players-Lasky, and Samuel Henley, Universal.

At the first meeting Chairman Porter selected Eddie Diamond, Weir Cassidy of the American Theatre, George Carpenter and L. Lanning as members of the publicity committee; and Montgomery, Rand, and Lanning to the finance committee. Montgomery is the treasurer.

Based on plans put into effect in Los Angeles, Minneapolis, San Francisco and other cities where season of this kind have been put over successfully hitherto, the national system elaborated by the Hays office has in all instances been accepted in toto as the most thorough method of turning every channel of patronage and publicity to the motion picture theatres during August. Posters, pressbooks and all accessories are going forward to meet the demands of exhibitors while in New York still further important commercial cooperation of national scope has been arranged.

British Delegation Sails for Home

FIVE members of the British delegation who came over to attend the convention of the M. P. T. O. A. at Milwaukee and later visited the West Coast studios, sailed for home June 17 on the Berengaria. W. Gavazzi King, head of the delegation, sailed last week.

Sydney S. Cohen, chairman of the M. P. T. O. A. Board and R. F. Woodhull, president of the organization, went to the pier to bid the delegation bon voyage.

Those sailing on the Berengaria were: Major A. J. Gale, A. Cunningham, G. F. McDonald, Capt. J. W. Barber, and F. H. Cooper.

The delegation will submit its report to the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association of Great Britain and Ireland at the organization's summer conference.

Hays to Equip Industrial School for Pictures

The Tallulah Falls Industrial School of Tallulah Falls, Georgia, the only school in America owned and operated by a State Federation of Women's Clubs, is to have free motion pictures regularly. The Hays organization through Courtland Smith has offered to equip the school with a modern projector and screen, and the picture industry of Georgia has pledged free service of pictures through the cooperation of the Atlanta Film Board of Trade.

The Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs recently completed a campaign of two years' duration to raise funds for the building of the school.

Vitagraph Eastern Studio to Remain Closed

WARNER BROTHERS have closed down the Vitagraph studios in Brooklyn for the remainder of the present year at least and will correspondingly increase their production activities in Hollywood. The Brooklyn studios were opened in 1905 and have played a conspicuous part in the development of motion pictures. What disposition of the Brooklyn studios will be ultimately made is still to be determined, according to Warners.

Work is to start at once in the enlargement of the Vitagraph studios in Hollywood. The improvements, it is said, will cost a quarter of a million dollars. The expansion and new arrangement will permit Jack Warner and his associate, Benny Zeidman, to supervise the entire Warner output.

Golf Prizes Held Over for Fall Tourney

Because of the fact that rain interferred with the golf tournament held at the Briarcliff Country Club last week and caused many players to retire before completing the course, a number of the trophies originally offered will be held over for competition in the Fall event. This was the decision arrived at by the committee in charge of the event.

Following are the prizes that were not distributed last week: Special prize donated by Watterson R. Rothacker, special prize donated by Jack T. Cosman, and other special prizes donated by Arthur W. Stebbins, Inc., M. S. Schlesinger and Gus S. Schlesinger, Carl Laemmle of Universal and by Du-Pont-Pathe, Inc.

Fox Executives Guests of A. M. P. A.

Newly appointed executives of the Fox Publicity and Advertising department were the guests of honor at the weekly meeting of the A. M. P. A. at the Cafe Boulevard luncheon in New York last week. They were Gerald K. Rudulph, publicity manager, and Donn McElwaine, manager of accessories, both of whom were introduced by Vivian Moses, head of the publicity and advertising department.

Report Warners Will Buy Orpheum In Chicago

JONES, LINICK & SCHAEFER'S Orpheum theatre will be taken over by Warner Brothers, according to persistent reports on Chicago's Film Row. This would give Warner an outlet in the Loop district. While the Orpheum's seating capacity is only eight hundred it has one of the best locations in Chicago on State, near Monroe street, and has been doing a splendid business as a long run, pre-release house. Many of the most important pictures released in the last few years have been shown on its screen from four to six and eight weeks.

Official confirmation of the deal was not forthcoming at either Jones, Linick & Schaefer's office or the Warner Chicago headquarters, but it was practically admitted that negotiations were in progress and Film Row expects an announcement of its consummation any day.

Four Big Companies Figure In Financial News

New F. P. Issue; First National and Fox, Listed

FOUR important concerns figured in financial news this week. Official announcement was made by Famous Players-Lasky of the issuance of additional common stock at $90 a share. The New York Stock Exchange admitted $2,500,000 in cumulative eight per cent participating first preferred stock of First National to trading. First National also declared a quarterly dividend of two per cent on this class of stock, payable July 1 to stockholders of record June 15.

Fox Film Corporation Class "A" common stock made its first appearance on the New York Curb Market on Wednesday, with 20,000 shares traded in, the high price of the day being 51 and the low 49¼.

The first balance sheet of the Fox company to be made public shows total assets of $24,509,470, of which one-third are cash assets and over one-half are current assets.

454% Increase in Universal Earnings

Universal also got prominent attention in financial circles. The company's net earnings for the fiscal year ended November 8 last were $1,405,011, an increase of 58 per cent over 1923 and 454 per cent over 1921.

The official statement issued by Famous Players said:

"This new stock is being offered to shareholders at $90 a share on a basis of one new share of common stock for each two shares held: Payments may be made in full or in two equal instalments.

"The stock subscribed will be issued as of October 1, 1925, and will be entitled to share in all dividends on the common stock of the Corporation declared to holders of record after that date. Interest at the rate of 8% per annum from July 24, 1925, to October 1, 1925, will be allowed to subscribers on all sums paid on or before July 24, 1925.

"In accordance with this plan there will be mailed to each common stockholder of record on July 8, 1925, one or more subscription warrants specifying the number of shares of common stock to which the stockholder is entitled to subscribe. Subscription warrants will be issued only for full shares, but where a stockholder holds an odd number of shares, a fractional warrant will be issued. Fractional warrants aggregating one or more full shares may be exchanged for a subscription warrant. As the Corporation will not sell or purchase fractional warrants, stockholders desiring to complete a full share or dispose of fractional warrants must do so in the open market.

"The principal office of Empire Trust Company, 120 Broadway, New York City, it is stated, will receive subscription warrants up to and including July 24, 1925, accompanied by payment in full of $88.62 per share, or by payment of a first instalment of $45 per share. In this case the second instalment will be $44.31 per share and must be paid at the above Trust Company's office on October 1, 1925.

"Arrangements have been made by Messrs. Kuhn, Leob & Co., for the underwriting of the offering to the stockholders by a syndicate formed by Messrs. Hallgarten & Co., and Messrs. E. F. Hutton & Co.

"Application will be made to list the common stock offered for subscription on the New York Stock Exchange."

The first balance sheet made public by the Fox Film Corporation and subsidiaries which recently declared a dividend of 235 per cent payable in Class A stock, shows a total assets of $24,509,470 of which one-third are cash assets and over one-half are current assets.

FERGUSON SUCCEEDS BONNS

Now Heads Metro-Goldwyn Exploitation

WILLIAM R. FERGUSON, associated as an exploitation expert with Goldwyn and Metro-Goldwyn for the past six years, has been appointed to head the exploitation department of Metro-Goldwyn, succeeding to the position recently made vacant by the resignation of Eddie Bonns.

Ferguson has toured the entire country doing exploitation work for these companies and with Eddie Bonns he is credited with originating and executing the "yellow supplements" introduced by Goldwyn and now continued by Metro-Goldwyn. Among the many exploitation stunts invented by Ferguson is the memorable "Brothers Under the Skin" society which was organized to boost the picture of that title.

Elliott Is I. M. P. P. D. A. Leader

Begins Duties as Manager and Organizer of Independent Producers and Distributors

FORMAL announcement of the appointment of Frederick H. Elliott as manager and organizer of the I. M. P. P. D. A. was made this week by Dr. W. E. Shallenberger, chairman of the executive committee. Mr. Elliott assumed his new duties last Monday.

As reported by MOTION PICTURE NEWS last week, the executive committee was empowered to negotiate with Mr. Elliott to take over the management of the organization at a meeting held in New York, June 10th.

In making the announcement of the appointment Dr. Shallenberger said: "Our campaign to preserve the freedom of the screen and to oppose the efforts at monopoly which have been steadily gaining headway will be more vigorously pressed now that our organization has completed a solid line-up of independent companies. We have now in our ranks 93% of the independent producers and distributors of the industry and since the open declaration of independence at Milwaukee, our cause has steadily gained ground. We are glad to be able to announce that Frederick H. Elliott will begin Monday to take over the active management of the affairs of our association.

"Mr. Elliott is a man of organization experience of many years standing and is what I may call a militant conservative. He will represent our body and speak for it on all important occasions and will generally direct the important activities in which we are engaged."

Mr. Elliott, after the Executive Committee meeting, was asked for a statement regarding the plans of the organization and he said:

"I have been in cordial sympathy with the plans and purposes of the Independent Motion Picture Producers and Distributors Association and was actively associated with it at its inception. In fact, I was instrumental in starting it.

"The organization is committed to a program which, in our opinion, is fair to all elements of the industry. We want to keep the door open so that independent brains and independent capital can join in the making of motion pictures at any time without hindrance and without being barred out of theatres. The motion picture business had a taste of monopoly back in the days of the General Film Company.

"We propose to carry on our activities openly, taking the American people into our confidence because we believe they are interested in the progress and activities of their own best patronized amusement. We want to deal with facts, presenting them fairly and without prejudice to anyone. We have a definite objective and we now have the funds to pay the expense incidental to our campaign."

Dwore Albany Zone Secretary

Meeting Held This Week Also Endorses Greater Movie Campaign

AT a meeting of motion picture exhibitors of the Albany zone, held at the Mark Strand building in Albany on Tuesday afternoon, June 16, George Dwore, who is associated with his father in handling the Cameo and the Capitol theatres in Schenectady was elected secretary of the Albany Zone.

Tuesday's meeting lasted for upwards of three hours, a portion of which was given over to E. J. Farrell, who had come on from Boston in order to outline the Greater Movie Season proposition. After considerable discussion it was decided to endorse the proposition. Tony Veiller, manager of the Lincoln theatre, in Troy, was selected to handle all the details of the campaign.

There was also considerable discussion at Tuesday's meeting on the present status of the New York State M. P. T. O., following the attitude taken by the New York City Zone in leaving the other two Zones severely alone, and not participating in the recent election of President Dillon. Louis Buettner, who presided Tuesday, said that the charter of the state association was in Albany, and this fact together with the voting strength of the Albany and the Buffalo Zones, left no doubt in his mind but that Mr. Dillon would be recognized as having been legally elected to head of the state association.

Exhibitors Hold Meeting in Spokane

A large number of motion picture film and theatre men from Eastern Washington, Idaho and Montana were present recently at the Davenport Hotel in Spokane, on the occasion of an Eastern Washington meeting of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Washington. The gathering was called to discuss affairs and business of the M. P. T. O. A., as brought up at the Milwaukee Convention a number of weeks ago.

The affair was staged by Manager Ray Grombacher of the Liberty and Casino Theatres, a trustee of the M. P. T. O. W. Among the prominent guests at the gathering was John Hamrick, general manager of the Blue Mouse circuit of theatres, and president of the M. P. T. O. W.; and J. M. Hone, executive-secretary of the organization, with offices in Seattle.

American Pictures Lead in Denmark

According to a report submitted by the Commercial Attache in Copenhagen to the Department of Commerce, American pictures dominate the Danish market. Of the 668 films passed by the Danish censor from April 1, 1924, to February 1, 1925, 466 were American, 131 Danish, 27 Swedish, 20 German, 15 French, 7 English and 2 Russian.

The report says there are about 350 theatres in Denmark, of which about 250 give daily performances at least part of the year. Of this number 38 are in Copenhagen and have a seating capacity of about 20,000.

Ohio Court Affirms Ban on "Birth of Nation"

The Supreme Court in Ohio has affirmed an order of Vernon M. Riegel, State Director of Education, banning the showing of "The Birth of a Nation" in Ohio. The picture is barred on the grounds that it is "not true to history, portrays scenes of crimes and appeals to race prejudices."

Albany May Ship All Film by Express

THERE is a move on foot in Albany, N. Y., which may ultimately result in all film shipments out of that city being made by express except to such places as there is no express office. For some time past there have been many complaints due to delays on the part of parcel post. A meeting of the bookers in the twelve or thirteen exchanges in Albany, was held last Friday morning at the Film Board of Trade offices in the Mark Strand building. Three representatives of the Express company were present at the meeting and promised all possible cooperation. It is figured that shipments out of Albany can be made by express in one day to all places served by the exchanges in that city.

At the present time about one-quarter of the film shipped out of Albany by the exchanges goes by parcel post, and while this may be cheaper, it is said that it is less speedy and that considerable trouble has been caused in the past in delayed return shipments.

"U" Houses For Minneapolis & Omaha

Have Plans to Build—Farley Gains Control of Farash Chain in New York—Many Theatres Building

UNIVERSAL will build theatres in Minneapolis and Omaha, plans for the erection of first run houses for those cities having been completed recently. The Minneapolis theatre will seat 3,000 and is to be erected at a cost of about $1,000,000. Negotiations to obtain a site at Hennepin near 10th St. are under way.

No location for the Omaha house has been selected as yet, though Universal is understood to be negotiating for a site on Farnam St.

Universal officials declared that the move to build in these cities is necessary in order to get first run representation for their pictures. Ned Marin of the Universal offices in Minneapolis is quoted as stating that Universal has been discriminated against by first run houses in that city, and predicting that other distributing companies would be forced to enter the theatre field there or let their pictures go without first run presentation.

The move means that Universal will go into opposition to Finkelstein and Ruben, in Minneapolis, and with the A. H. Blank houses in Omaha.

Farley Heads Farash Chain

In one of the most important picture theatre transactions in the up-state district of New York of recent times W. W. Farley, of Albany, acquired the complete stock in the Farash Theatres, Inc., of Schenectady, taking over the holdings of William Shirley, of Schenectady, and William Rafferty, of Syracuse. The deal, said to involve $300,000, gives Farley control of the theatre situation in Schenectady, as the Farash chain operates the State there, as well as in Albany, where the Strand and Barcli, Farash houses, are located. The Barcli has been closed for some months, but Farley plans to reopen it early in the fall.

Farley made his entrance into the motion picture theatre field about five years ago, when he acquired several theatres in Yonkers and eventually became president of the Terrace Amusement company. At the present time this company has the Strand, Hamilton and Warburton theatres in that city with a combined seating capacity of close to 3,600.

He recently took over the Community theatre in Catskill, which is one of the largest houses in that region. The same transaction brought with it another theatre in Catskill, known as Smalley's, and which had been operated by William Smalley, of Cooperstown.

There was a report current to the effect that Famous Players was negotiating with Mr. Farley as a partner in the acquisition of Mr. Rafferty's and Mr. Shirley's holdings. When asked as to the truth of this rumor, Mr. Farley replied that while he had been approached by certain combinations, that he alone was the purchaser of the Rafferty-Shirley interests, and that he proposed to run the theatres himself. In a little more than a year the present lease which the Proctor interests have of a theatre in the Wedgeway building in Schenectady, will have expired, and this will give Farley another house for the Proctor people are building one of their own at the present time. James Roach, of Schenectady, will handle the Schenectady houses for the time being and may be appointed permanently to the position.

Schines Add Three Houses

The Schine brothers added more theatres to their chain during the past week, taking over the Gateway in Little Falls, the Liberty in Herkimer, as well as the theatre in Philmont. The two first named theatres are large modern houses in the Mohawk valley, the Gateway having been run by Robert Wagner, an old time showman, while the Liberty has been equally successful under the management of C. H. Moyer. It is understood that the leases of the Richmond, in Herkimer, and the Hippodrome in Little Falls, are also included in the deal. The theatres have been owned by a company headed by Ralph Earl, of Herkimer. The Philmont house is a comparatively small one, seating about 600 and has been run by Hoctor and Herbes. The Schine circuit now includes about 65 motion picture theatres, extending across the state, with headquarters in Gloversville.

New Houses for Milwaukee

Milwaukee is to have another new movie house at a cost of three hundred thousand dollars, it was learned last week. The new structure is to be erected on the site of the present Colonial theatre and on adjoining property at Vliet and 15th Streets. Plans have been completed and work is to start this summer. The present structure is to be the nucleus for the new building which is to have a seating capacity of 1850. The present theatre seats 860. The new theatre is to be built by the Colonial Amusement Co. of which W. F. Maertz is president, Ed. Langemack, vice pres. and Ernest Langemack, sec. and treas. The new building will be of Colonial architecture throughout and will have a twenty-five thousand dollar organ.

The first steps in the construction of a new half million dollar theatre building started last week with the breaking of ground at 27th and Wells St., Milwaukee. It is understood that George Fischer, now operating the Milwaukee and Capitol theatres will also operate this house.

Butterfield Plans House

W. S. Butterfield has announced through his Bijou Theatrical enterprises that he will shortly erect a new theatre in Owosso, Mich., one of the important smaller communiities of the state. Both pictures and vaudeville will be shown in the house which will have a seating capacity of 1,300 persons. It is planned to open the house next January.

Five Florida Theatres

According to a report from Miami, Fla., the Florida Amusement Co., of that city will commence work soon on five motion picture theatres, one to be erected in each of the following towns, Miami, Hollywood, Little River, Coral Gables, and Miami Beach.

The report states that options on the properties on which the theatres are to be built have been obtained by the company and that all plans for the houses have been completed. The buildings are to be five stories high, the upper floors being devoted to office space. Each theatre will have a seating capacity of 1500.

Albany Zone Suffers Losses by Heat

THE recent hot wave that swept over eastern United States cost the 400-odd motion picture theatres in the Albany Zone about $45,000 in lost patronage, according to an estimate made by Louis Buettner, of Cohoes, chairman of the Zone. Some of the houses that ordinarily do between $135 and $150 a day, dropped to as low as $25, while in Schenectady alone, it is said that the hot weather was responsible for a slump that amounted to close to $2,000 for the week. One house in Schenectady, which has a large seating capacity is said to have had 67 persons at one of the evening shows.

In placing his estimate at $45,000 for the week, Mr. Buettner takes into consideration the fact that in some of the smaller places the loss through heat, probably did not run over $10 or $15 a day, while in other places, the loss for the week was small owing to the fact that theatres are running only one or two days a week. The principal loss, of course, is sustained in the larger cities, places like Albany, Troy, Schenectady and Utica, reporting business on some days as being virtually at a standstill, the mercury meanwhile remaining in the nineties.

Million Dollar House, With 3,000 Seats, for Gary, Ind.

The Gary Theatre Co. is building a new theatre at Gary, Ind., to be named the Palace. The Palace will have a seating capacity of 3,000 and will be a million dollar project. The plans as laid now are for the formal opening to fall on Thanksgiving Day. J. Elberson, Chicago, is the architect.

Plan to Build New House in Los Angeles

The Hollywood Holding Co., of Los Angeles, has completed plans for a theatre and ice skating rink to be erected on Vine street, at Sunset Boulevard. The theatre will have a seating capacity of 900 and will cost $500,000 to build.

Indianapolis to Have $150,000 Theatre Building

The Rialto Theatre Co., Indianapolis, is building a theatre at 42nd street and College avenue that will cost in the neighborhood of $150,000.

Southern Enterprises Inc. to Build in Kentucky

The Southern Theatres Enterprises, Atlanta, Ga., announce that they will build a $150,000 house in Paducah, Kentucky.

LEO BRECHER APPOINTED
To be Universal Theatre Director

CARL LAEMMLE, president of Universal as managing director of Universal's chain of Pictures Corporation has signed Leo Brecher theatres, which now number about 100. Brecher is managing director of one of New York City's most important theatre chains and will continue to serve in that capacity, as well as to direct Universal's theatre interests. There is no connection however, with the Brecher chain and the Universal houses.

The Universal chain, mostly located in key towns, where Universal is now getting an outlet for its product, includes the Schine theatres in upper New York state, the Hosttetler circuit in Nebraska and Iowa, the Sparkes circuit in Florida, and Univeral's previously acquired houses in such cities as Los Angeles, San Francisco, Seattle, Portland, Kansas City, St. Louis, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Detroit, Chicago, Washington, Milwaukee and elsewhere.

Brecher has been in the picture business since 1997 when he entered the exhibition game as a factor in a company which opened the Orpheum Theater in Yonkers. At the present time the Brecher circuit includes eight theatres operating and two under construction, all but one of which, the recreated Orpheum of Yonkers, are in New York City.

The houses in the local chain are Plaza, Olympia, Harlem, Douglas, Roosevelt, Odeon and Lafayette. The Verona and another house are under construction.

Fire Proves Worth of Drills

Little Damage Results From Serious Blaze at Famous Exchange in Frisco

THE splendid results of a little-known activity of the Motion Picture Producers & Distributors of America, the Will H. Hays organization, were apparent in San Francisco on Thursday, June 11, when a serious fire broke out in one of the film vaults of the Famous Players exchange at 201 Golden Gate Avenue.

Since the Hays organization came into existence, it has had representatives on the road cooperating with the local Film Boards of Trade in combatting fire hazards and installing fire drills in all the 800 film exchanges throughout the country, whether these exchanges were owned by members or non-members of the Hays association.

When this fire was discovered, each employee of the exchange went to a familiar, appointed place; all film in the open was placed in vaults; all money, valuable documents and record books were taken in hand and the entire exchange group walked quietly to the street. Not for several minutes, until they heard fire engines approaching, did most of the employees know that there actually was a fire. They thought they were going through one of their customary drills.

The blaze was severe but the automatic sprinklers, vault doors and other mechanical contrivances worked perfectly; the employees, thanks to the precautions taught by the Hays organization, did their duty splendidly and the fire was confined to one vault, with no casualties or serious injuries and a loss only of stored film.

Warners May Build in Europe

Albert Warner Going Abroad To Found New Exchanges – May Acquire Theatres

A FURTHER extension of the company's European activities has been planned by Warner Brothers, who announce that their foreign exchange system will be broadened to cover all countries where motion pictures are shown.

Albert Warner will sail for Europe on the Leviathan, Saturday, June 13th, to make a thorough survey of the foreign theatre field and upon his decision the future action of the organization regarding the possibility of entering the theatre business there will rest.

The Warners, through the purchase of the Vitagraph interests, have several exchanges in Europe at present. There are 10 in England, 7 in France, 1 in Belgium, 1 in Switzerland and 1 in Africa. New exchanges will be founded in those and other foreign countries.

In discussing his trip, on which he will be accompanied by Mrs. Warner, Gus Schlesinger, manager of foreign distribution for the company, Mr. Warner said that he intended to visit every big city in Europe. Concerning the theatre situation, he said he did not care at this time to go into details concerning that phase of his investigations and activities abroad.

"It never has been our habit," he added, "to say we are absolutely going to do a thing until we are sure. However, upon my return, I rather imagine I will have something to say regarding the foreign theatre situation which will be of considerable interest to Warner Bros. at least."

Comerford, of Scranton, head of the Comerford Amusement Company, with which the new theatre is understood to be affiliated; and M. B. Comerford, of Scranton, general manager of the latter corporation. A special feature was the showing of motion pictures of prominent local persons and scenes. The theatre has seats for 2,200. Following the exercises in the theatre the visiting guests were entertained at a supper in the Shawnee club.

Theatre Project in Steubenville, O., to Cost $500,000

A new theatre and office and store building is now well under way at Steubenville, Ohio, which will cost in the neighborhood of $500,000. This structure will occupy a space of 150 by 180 feet and will be the largest building in that city from a point of ground space. It will be modern in every respect according to the builders, the Tri-State Amusement company.

The new theatre will be one of the largest and most modern in the tri-state district. It will have a seating capacity of 2000. In the building will be 13 store rooms and spacious second floor business rooms and spacious second floor business rooms and dancing academy.

Berman, F.B.O. Sales Manager, Dead

Deceased Has Been Important Figure in Industry for Many Years; in Poor Health for Several Months.

HARRY M. BERMAN, General Manager of Exchanges for Film Booking Offices of America, Inc., died at 8 o'clock Thursday morning at his home 215 West 90th street, New York City, after an illness of several weeks.

Harry Berman was one of the best known figures of the motion picture business, having been for more than eight years an important executive in national distribution.

Mr. Berman's health had not been good for more than a year. In March of 1924 he underwent a very serious operation, and although he regained his strength and resumed business, he suffered several attacks of his minor illness during the last year.

Four weeks ago he decided to take a leave of absence for three months, and his associates and family felt confident that a long rest would restore him to his old-time vigor. He intended to go to the mountains, but the specialists watching his case, suggested that he remain in New York under observation for a few weeks. Up to two weeks ago he was able to be up and around but for the last two weeks he grew rapidly weaker. His physicians and family, however, did not realize how grave his condition was, and his death was a serious shock, even to those most close to him.

Harry Berman was born in Poland, 51 years ago, and came to the United States as a boy where his people settled in Pittsburgh, Pa. He was engaged for a number of years in the real estate business in Pittsburgh and later in New Castle, Pa. In 1904 he was married to Miss Julie Epstein at her home in Uniontown, Pa., who, with two sons, Pandro and Henry Berman, Jr., survive.

Joe Schnitzer, Vice-president and General Manager of the Film Booking Offices, and Manny Goldstein, Treasurer of the Universal Film Company, were nephews.

Mr. Berman entered the motion picture business in Kansas City as manager for the Metro Company. He transferred from Kansas City to Cincinnati as manager of the Universal Exchange and later became manager of the Paramount Exchange, Cincinnati.

Universal Film Company brought him to New York as a sales manager of their special production department, and after a successful career in that capacity, promoted him to the position of general sales manager of the company.

He joined the Film Booking Offices of America, as general manager of exchanges in 1922, and the success which he attained building up the film booking offices' sales organization, was one of the outstanding achievements in the distribution field of the Motion Picture industry.

A man of rare personality, Harry Berman made warm friends from coast to coast. He had the confidence and friendship of hundreds of theatre owners. His methods of administration were typical of his personality, and the men who served under him in the field, looked upon him as a friend instead of a boss. He was a real leader of men, inspiring a feeling of loyalty and devotion among his organization which always made for the success of every organization which he headed.

Funeral service will be held from his residence, 215 West 90th Street, at 2 o'clock today. Dr. Sidney Goldstein of the Free Synogogue officiating. Burial will be in Cypress Hills cemetery.

Hoffman and William Shapiro purchase jointly for the Renown Exchanges and the Franklin Film Corporation.

The Franklin company, previous to the merger with the Hoffman organization were the exclusive distributors of Warner Brothers product throughout the New England territory.

Vitagraph Back in Hays Organization

Official Announcement of Restoration of Membership Made by Harry M. Warner

VITAGRAPH, INC., now controlled by Warner Brothers, has gone back into the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc.—the Hays organization—it was announced this week by Harry M. Warner.

It will be recalled that Vitagraph some months ago withdrew from the Hays body. Then followed the taking over of the company by the Warners. Vitagraph still exists as a corporation, the understanding in the trade being that it now constitutes the distribution end of the Warner enterprises.

In his statement announcing the re-entry of Vitagraph into the Hays organization, Mr. Warner declared that one of the first steps taken by his company after securing control of the pioneer concern was to make application for the resumption of membership by Vitagraph. The statement by Mr. Warner follows:

"Vitagraph, Inc., takes pleasure in announcing its election to membership in the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc.

The election today resumes the close affiliation Vitagraph has had with the association headed by Mr. Hays' Vitagraph having been an original member and ardent supporter of the association's work. We very much regret Vitagraph's short withdrawal from the association, and when Warner Brothers secured control of Vitagraph one of our first acts was to make application for membership. This, we are happy to say, was favorably acted upon at to-day's meeting of the association.

"The publicity attendant upon Vitagraph's withdrawal was most unnecessary and unfortunate, and resulted in no good to Vitagraph. We trust Vitagraph's announcement of election to membership in the Hays organization, which is a truly constructive move for Vitagraph, will receive at least equal prominence. We would therefore be glad if those who have heard of Vitagraph's withdrawal should now learn that Vitagraph is again a member of the association that has done so much for the common good of all engaged in the motion picture industry."

Lyon field representative in Canada. He assumed his new duties this week. Lyon was for two and one-half years with United Artists in the Canadian territory and is well known in that field.

The southern theatres recently purchased by Warners include the Pastime, Concord, N. C., the Lexington, N. C., the Broadway, Charlotte, N. C., and the Ideal, Columbia, S. C. The concern also obtained a management option on the Lincoln, a Craver theatre, at Winston-Salem, N. C.

Amendment to the Canadian Copyright Act Killed

There is now little or no possibility that the Canadian Parliament will consider the amendment proposed by E. R. E. Chevrier, M. P., for Ottawa East, to provide for changes in the Canadian Copyright Act whereby Canadian moving picture theatres would be required to pay royalty fees on copyrighted music.

In answer to a question on June 11 by L. J. Ladner of Vancouver on the floor of the House of Commons at Ottawa, Prime Minister King declared that it was the intention to proceed with government measures almost exclusively from now on and that it was to be decided what would happen with regard to private measures of this nature.

Finkelstein and Ruben Buy Eveleth House

Finkelstein & Ruben of Minneapolis now control the theatre situation in Eveleth, Minn. This month a deal was closed for the purchase of the Regent theatre, formerly owned and operated for many years by Frank Rabwin, or Rabinowitz, before the name was changed two years ago by the legislature.

The Rabwin family have located at Los Angeles, Calif., where they will make their home for the future. F. and R. purchased the opposition house, the Strand, several weeks ago and are running it two days a week. The Regent runs seven days and is one of the most attractive houses on the iron range.

Rivoli Cooling System Opens Doors in A. M.

MID-SEASON prosperity, due to the new refrigerating plant recently installed at the Rivoli, has demanded a new summer policy in that theatre and one that will permit the entertainment of more people. Hugo Riesenfeld's solution of this new hot-weather problem is to open the theatre every weekday morning, a plan sure to meet with the approval of the heat-jaded crowds along Broadway.

The Rivoli occupies a unique position this year for, instead of curtailing activities to meet a summer "slump," or closing up entirely as many theatres do, it is reported enjoying peak patronage.

Seider Discusses Arbitration Rules

Would Give Exhibitor Right of Challenge and Permit Him in Fact to Appoint Exhibitor Members

JOSEPH M. SEIDER, President of the M. P. T. O., of New Jersey, and chairman of the M. P. T. O. A. Standard Contract and Arbitration Committee, this week made public a letter he had written to Harrison's Reports, clearing up certain phases of arbitration practices and suggesting further changes.

Mr. Seider points out, among other things, that the exhibitor, at present, has no right of challenge; nor can persons other than those in the industry be selected by the exhibitor as arbitrators.

He explains that changes in the arbitration rules are now being negotiated. The letter of Mr. Seider follows:

"Dear Mr. Harrison:—

"May I call to your attention what are, in my opinion, errors in the article appearing on the front page of your report, under date of June 13, 1925, on the subject of 'Arbitration—What It Is and How It Works.'

"I am not quite in accord with your contention that the exhibitor defendant has the right of challenge, especially the right of challenge of all of the exhibitor members of the Arbitration Board, such as is apparently your opinion.

"I have examined with some degree of care, the uniform contract, together with the rules and regulations relating to arbitration, under which the Board of Arbitration was constituted, and fail to find therein any provision whatsoever, regarding any right of challenge at all.

"Of course, an arbitrator may be disqualified for interest or illness, or by his own refusal to serve, but nowhere else in the contract or in the rules and regulations is there contained any other provision relative to substitution of arbitrators. I would certainly be in favor of an amendment to the present contract and rules and regulations, so as to provide that the exhibitor may in fact appoint the exhibitor members and have the right to challenge a limited number of members of the Arbitration Board, under provisions similar to those employed in challenging of juries, this to apply not only to members of the exhibitors' own side, but to the members representing the distribution side, and vice versa.

"I must again disagree with your statement that the exhibitor may select persons other than exhibitors as members of the Board of Arbitration, and may use bankers, lawyers, etc., as it appears from the first paragraph of the rules and regulations, that the Board of Arbitration shall consist of three members of the Film Board of Trade, and three proprietors or managers of theatres in the zone where the Film Board of Trade is located, with a certain exception which is not relevant here.

"It would thus seem, under the present form of contract, that both parties are bound to the selection of persons in the industry.

"The Committee on Arbitration are, as you know, at the present time, diligently endeavoring to introduce new suggestions and changes into the present uniform contract and amend the rules and regulations setting up the Board of Arbitration, and it is hoped that within a short time, some substantial result will be effected."

Loew's Borrows $2,400,000 on Theatre Properties

Loew's, Inc., has secured a loan on theatre properties amounting to $2,400,000 from P. W. Chapman and Company. The loan is a first mortgage on the Loew Theatre at the northeast corner of Broadway and Eighty-third street; also a first mortgage on the Loew Theatre in Newark, N. J., on the corner of Broad and New streets.

Fox Publicity Is Reorganized

Already Strong Department Staff is Augmented by Appointment of Ned Holmes

FOX has completed the reorganization and enlargement of the publicity and advertising department under the supervision of Vivian M. Moses and is all set to start the campaign on the new season's product. The department now looms up as one of the strongest in the entire industry and should be of invaluable assistance to the exhibitor.

James R. Grainger, general sales manager made his final appointment to the enlarged staff when he named Ned Holmes as exploitation manager. Vivian Moses is director of advertising and publicity and has as his department heads in addition to Holmes, G. K. Dudulph, publicity manager; and Donn McElwaine as manager of the accessory division. The staffs of all departments have been materially increased.

It is already established that Fox attractions will be played in many of the largest first run houses and Holmes will begin at once the organization of a large and capable staff of exploitation men who will cover presentations of "The Iron Horse," "Lightnin'," "The Fool," "The First Year," "Lazy Bones" and such attractions.

Holmes has had wide experience in the exploitation field both for legitimate stage and picture attractions. Among other things he organized the exploitation department for First National. His first association in the show business was with Buffalo Bill. He later became general manager for Jules Murray who was covering the country with such attractions as Modjeska, Rose Coghlan, Kathryn Kidder, Creston Clarke and others.

In the exploitation of pictures Holmes started early, handling one of the first big attractions, the Paul J. Rainey African Hunt Pictures. Since that time he has had the handling of many of the leading film attractions.

Jersey Plans Big Convention

Coming Three Day Session at Asbury Park Will Be Replete With Action

THE program of events is all completed and everything seems set for the sixth annual convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New Jersey to be held at Asbury Park June 29th and 30th and July 1st. It's rather an ambitious program and one that should combine a lot of business with as much pleasure.

The business end of the sessions will be interspersed with a carnival of water sports, dances, revues, stage presentations, boat rides, boardwalk events, fireworks, a midsummer fashion show and the appearence of many celebrated motion picture stars.

Dignitaries from many parts of the country have been invited to attend, among them being President and Mrs. Coolidge, United States Senators Edge and Edwards, Governor Silzer of New Jersey, Mayor Hettrick of Asbury Park, Mayor Hague of Jersey City, Mayor Raymond of Newark and James J. Walker, State Senator of New York.

Business sessions will be held each of the three days of the session, with the banquet set for Wednesday evening, July 1st. Robert E. Welsh will act as toastmaster at the banquet, while at the speakers' table will be Governor Silzer, Mayor Hettrick, Ray Lewis, Sydney S. Cohen, R. F. Woodhull, president of the M. P. T. O. A., and Joseph M. Seider, President of the New Jersey State organization.

Water sports promise to be among the leading features of the program. Entries have already been received from Big U, Tiffany Productions and other film companies. Camera experts will be on hand from all of the news reel producers. A special saxophone orchestra of twenty pieces has been engaged to serve the dance music.

An event for Wednesday evening will be the personal appearance of little Miss Anne Dale, the crippled child of the Fox screen version of "The Fool," who will reenact her role on a specially built stage.

The committee in charge of arrangements announces no special invitations will be required by any person in or out of the industry. All are welcome to the carnival events.

Reports American Films Lead in Uruguay

Nearly 98 per cent of the motion pictures shown in Uruguay are of American origin, according to a report to the Department of Commerce from Consul O. Gaylord March at Montevideo. Though repeated efforts to popularize pictures from other nations have been attempted, the American films continue to be the popular choice of the people of that country, the report states.

Three feature films usually constitute a performance, but tickets may be purchased for a single film, two films or the whole performance. Programs change nearly every day.

Luxurious society dramas and farce comedies are the best drawing cards with the ordinary movie fan. These are censored by a commission in Montevideo, which rules out all those of an immoral character and furthermore forbids the admission of children to films having scenes of a questionable tendency.

Mexican Theatres Showing Good Receipts

Total receipts of the 48 motion picture theatres of the Federal District of Mexico during the last six months of 1924, says a recent statement of the Department of Commerce, amounted to 2,419,585.40 pesos ($1,209,792.70), according to a report of the Mexican National Bureau of Statistics. Of this amount ten per cent, or 241,958.54 pesos, was paid to municipal and federal authorities as taxes.

Receipts of the largest single theatre in Mexico City during the six-month period were 172,403.40 pesos ($86,201.70). Five other theatres reported receipts for the period of more than 100,000 pesos ($50,000).

Australia Picturizing Home Industries

Moving pictures of Victorian manufacturing industries have been given in fifteen Victorian towns, under the auspices of the Made-in-Australia Council of the Victorian Chamber of Manufactures, states E. G. Babbitt, American Trade Commissioner in Melbourne, in a report to the Department of Commerce.

The promoters declare that this film propaganda will awaken a consciousness in the minds of the people that goods are being made in Australia, which, it is claimed, compare in many instances with any that can be imported. Among the industries which have been filmed are the iron and steel industry and the furniture industry.

Police Fail in Hunt for St. Louis Yeggs

The St. Louis police have failed to apprehend the three young men who attempted to rob Miss Elsie Glocker, cashier for the Aubert theatre, Eastern avenue at Aubert avenue, St. Louis, Mo., on Sunday evening, June 7.

Miss Glocker noticed that all of the exposed chambers of the revolver held by the leader of the would-be hold-up men were empty and concluded that the entire weapon was unloaded. So she defied the trio and refused to turn over her receipts.

On the same night burglars broke into the Woodland theatre, 5015 Gravois avenue, and took $30 from the safe. They knocked the combination off the strong box.

Bandits Get $5,000 From Chicago Rialto

Four young bandits Sunday night, held up and robbed the office of Jones, Linick & Schaefer's Rialto Theatre, 336 S. State Street, Chicago, and are reported to have obtained $5,000 in cash before they escaped. The usual State Street throngs were passing the theatre at the time of the hold-up, but the youths got away unnoticed.

Safes in two theatres were carried away early this week by bandits. The Oakman theatre, 12,000 Oakman boulevard, and the Strand theatre, operated by John H. Kunsky and located at Grand River and Fourteenth avenues, were the houses visited. Several thousand dollars were taken from the safes.

Richey Joins M. P. T. O. A. on July First

LEAVE of absence has been granted to Henderson M. Richey, General Manager of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Michigan to allow him to become General Manager of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, with headquarters in New York. He will assume his new duties July 1.

Mr. Richey attempted to resign his office as manager of the Michigan organization, but it was refused. Officials prevailed upon him to accept a year's leave of absence instead. Much of the success of the Michigan organization has been due to Mr. Richey since his arrival in Detroit four years ago from Auburn, Indiana, where he was a prominent newspaperman and later City Treasurer. The Michigan M. P. T. O., it is stated has grown to a membership of nearly 500.

Meighan to Make One Picture for Schenck—Not Leaving Famous

JOSEPH M. SCHENCK this week denied a story printed in The New York World to the effect that Thomas Meighan would leave Famous Players at the expiration of his present contract and become a star under Mr. Schenck's management.

Mr. Schenck informed Motion Picture News that Mr. Meighan would make one picture as co-star with Norma Talmadge, and that this arrangement had been made between Mr. Schenck and Adolph Zukor, president of Famous Players-Lasky.

He made it very clear that this meant simply that Famous Players was loaning Mr. Meighan to the Schenck forces for a single picture. "As far as I know he will then return to Famous," said Mr. Schenck.

The statement in the World that Mr. Meighan would receive $10,000 a week aroused Mr. Schenck's ire, as did the rest of the story.

"How do such reports get into print?" Mr. Schenck demanded. "Meighan will not receive any such salary, or any salary at all, as a matter of fact. He will have an interest in the picture."

The Meighan-Talmadge picture will be an adaptation of the stage play, "My Woman."

Cook Makes Report on Tour

Kansas-Missouri Business Manager Finds Opposition in Free Pictures

AS a result of the tour of the territory by C. E. Cook, business manager of the M. P. T. O. Kansas-Missouri, various phases of outlying trade conditions have been brought to light, which will result in some definite action by the organization. Forty towns were visited by Cook, who covered 1,300 miles and brought back $963 in membership fees. But his trip was not confined to soliciting new members only.

"In Joplin, Mo., I found an audience of more than 2,000 persons witnessing a free picture show running in an amusement park in opposition to five motion picture theatres," Cook said. "The film was being furnished by more than one national distributor. A resolution calling for the refusal to arbitrate cases of such e changes before the joint arbitration board was passed at the last M. P. T. O. K.-M. convention. You can rest assured there will be some action taken. I don't know whether or not the home offices of the companies, whose names I will withhold, know of this practice, but they are going to be informed right away.

"I found that the greatest opposition to the small town theatre owner in the summer is tent shows and skating rinks. The low license fees of the latter undoubtedly constitutes unfair competition. If exhibitors only knew it they could bring pressure to bear upon their city councils regarding such matters. In one town a city alderman told me he was opposed to even granting a license to a carnival which was billed there. It wouldn't take long for an exhibitor in good standing in his town to convince his city council that his theatre was much more of a stabilized business than a passing tent show and entitled to an even break, any way.

"Across the Kansas boundary line from Coffeyville, Kans., in Oklahoma I found a small town being built around the new Tackett theatre, which was constructed on a bleak prarie to avoid Sunday closing laws. The theatre, running only on Sundays, stands as conclusive proof that the people of that community want Sunday shows, yet are governed by a straight-laced minority. It draws from a radius of thirty miles, has a 10-piece orchestra and rapidly is becoming the center of an impromptu community.

"U" Building Program Started

Start Construction Work on Plans to Enlarge Studio Production Facilities

THE million-dollar building program announced the first of the year by Universal under which the studio facilities at Universal City will be greatly increased, has just been put into effect, construction of new permanent buildings, to house stages, projection rooms, and dressing rooms, now being well under way.

In addition to the buildings which are to be erected, there are plans to reclaim ten acres of land through the building of a steel and cement culvert along the bottom of the creek that crosses the Universal property and empties into the Los Angeles River. The culvert will be constructed to support a weight of ten feet of earth and serve as a foundation for buildings which are to be erected later.

Buildings now under course of construction include the following:

One new main stage, 90 by 150 feet in dimension and fifty feet in height.

One new semi-exterior iron stage of the same dimensions.

Three new projection-room buildings.

New office building, containing offices for production managers and technical heads.

The work was placed by Carl Laemmle under the supervision of Norman Sprowl, business manager, and Arthur E. Shadur, city engineer of Universal City.

Ziegfeld Signs With Famous

Will Glorify the American Girl on Screen Under His Five Year Contract

FAMOUS Players-Lasky Corporation has signed Florenz Ziegfeld to a five year contract to produce a series of Paramount pictures made along the same lines as the Ziegfeld stage productions. The pictures will be made at the Paramount studios and will be under the personal supervision of Ziegfeld.

The first production will be known as Florenz Ziegfeld's "Glorifying the American Girl" and will be directed by Allan Dwan, producer of many notable screen successes. Many of the artists who have been identified with the Ziegfeld productions and most of the beauties from his shows will appear in "Glorifying the American Girl" and other Ziegfeld-Paramount pictures. The first production is being written under Ziegfeld's direction and it is expected that actual work on the picture will start August 31st.

In discussing the new contrast Jesse Lasky said:

"The acquisition of Mr. Ziegfeld is a distinct triumph for the motion picture and tells better than anything else the tremendous strides that have been made toward technical perfection in films. His phenomenal success as a producer of the world's most beautiful stage spectacles naturally attracted the interest of motion picure producers long ago, but he always resisted their efforts to win him to pictures because he was not convinced that the color and beauty of stage effects could be transferred to the screen.

"Recent developments in picture production, however, make it possible to put on the screen all of the glitter, the beauty and enchanting stage effects that the public has come to expect in production such as the 'Follies,' 'Sally,' 'Louie the 14th,' 'Kid Boots,' 'Annie Dear' and similar smart reviews."

Editors to Compete For Prize

Carl Laemmle Offers $5,000 Award for Scenario to Be Written by Newspapermen

UNDER terms of a contract presented by Carl Laemmle of Universal to the National Editorial Association at their convention in Richmond, Va., last week, editors of country newspapers will be eligible to compete for the cash awards to be made for a scenario which Universal will produce in serial form.

The completed serial will be the work of ten authors, each episode being the work of a different writer. The winning authors will each receive a prize of $500.

The first step in the writing of the story will be preparation of a brief synopsis, of not more than 500 words, outlining the plot. The synopsis will be examined by the members of Universal's scenario staff. The ten best will be selected, and the writers will be chosen to delineate the episodes of the story from the plot laid out in the prize synopsis.

There are no rules or regulations of the contest, except that those entered must be members of the National Editorial Association.

Six months or more will be given the editors to prepare the stories, and the picture will be produced at Universal City.

"Viennese Medley" Cast is Completed

First National has completed the cast for its picturization of the Edith O'Shaughnessy novel of Vienna, "The Viennese Medley," and will start work on the production in the immediate future. The picture will be directed by Kurt Rehfeld under the supervision of June Mathis, who prepared the continuity.

The cast includes Conway Tearle, Anna Q. Nilsson, May Allison, Ian Keith, Phyllis Haver, Nigel De Brullier, John Sainpolis, Jean Hersholt and Edward Earle.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Sign Douglas Gilmore

Douglas Gilmore, leading man in several recent stage productions, has signed a long-term contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and will desert the footlights for the studios.

Gilmore has appeared in two screen productions, "Faith" and "Lovers Island." He began his stage career as the reporter in "Lightnin'," and later played with Elsie Ferguson in "The Unvarying Shore." His most recent work was in a principal role in "White Cargo."

Richard Talmadge to Make "Isle of Hope"

The next Richard Talmadge production for F. B. O. release will be "The Isle of Hope." Casting is now under way and shooting is scheduled to start this week. The story is of treasure hunting in the South Seas. The script which has just been completed is the work of James Bell Smith.

Lewis Stone and Alice Terry in "Confessions of a Queen," Metro-Goldwyn.

Cooperative Plan for Prod. Dist. Corp.

Following a series of sales conventions that took him to the coast, John C. Flinn, vice-president and general manager of Producers Distributing Corporation is back in New York and enthusiastic over prospects for the coming season. F. P.-L. Makes Change in South

J. J. Franklin Made District Supervisor Waugh Succeeds Kingsmore at Howard

A NUMBER of changes have taken place in the personnel of the Southern Enterprises organization in the Southern territory. J. J. Franklin, brother of Harold B. Franklin, director of theatres for Famous Players-Lasky, is in Atlanta to occupy the position of district supervisor, held until last week by Frank Dowler, Jr., who has returned to Chattanooga and the Tennessee territory in a similar capacity. Howard Waugh, who has been manager of the Palace theatre, Memphis, Tennessee, for the past two years, has taken over the management of the Howard theatre, while Howard Price Kingsmore, former manager of the Howard, went to New York this week. No assignment in the ranks of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation has been announced for him, up to this writing.

When Mr. Franklin went to Atlanta as district supervisor for the Georgia territory, Birmingham, Montgomery, and Gadsden, Alabama, and Mr. Dowler took over the western Tennessee houses and the other half of Alabama, it divided the Alabama territory between the two of them. Alabama was formerly managed by Emmett R. Rogers, but when this change in districts occurred, Mr. Rogers was transferred to the Tivoli theatre in Chattanooga to become manager of the Tivoli Theatre, which house he had opened under his management several years ago. This necessitated another shift, for C. B. Stiff, up until last week manager of the Tivoli theatre, has been transferred to take over the management of the Imperial theatre, in Columbia, South Carolina.

The change which brings Howard Waugh to the Howard theatre insures a new era for that house. He is regarded as one of the most able and popular showmen in the Atlanta territory. His place at the Palace in Memphis will be filled by George Brown, formerly manager of the Imperial at Charlotte.

New Paramount House Abroad

John Cecil Graham Gives Reason for Extending Activities on the Continent

THAT Famous Players-Lasky intend to extend their theatre activities on the Continent in cities where adequate houses are not now in operation, is the statement of John Cecil Graham, managing director of Famous-Lasky Film Service, Ltd., with headquarters in London. Graham discussed the subject at length in an interview in "The Film Renter," in London.

In part he said:

"We have no intention of building theatres in this country—it is not necessary. We are extending our theaters on the Continent by building in places that are barren. Where any big city has good theatres it is no part of our business to enter into competition, but where a city with a large population has not a theatre worthy of the name, and where there are no signs of it being erected, then we consider we are helping the industry by building a theatre.

"The situation does not apply in this country because there are splendid edifices in all the big towns and new theatres are being erected every day, and if ever we did take a theatre in one of the populated cities it would merely be for the purpose of having a show place similar to the Paramount theatre, which is in the course of erection in the Haymarket, so that you can discount any talk of Paramount invading the theatre field in this country.

"In America the situation is different. It is intolerable that a group of men can get together and offer a ridiculous price for product which has cost millions to make, and if the price is not accepted, keep it out of the city. That condition cannot be allowed to remain and that is why Famous-Lasky have had to build and take over theatres to break down that monopoly."

Prod. Dist. Corp. Adopts Plan

Will Speed Contracts by Authorizing Division Managers to Close Them

BY an arrangement which places the matter of accepting or rejecting contracts in the hands of division managers, Producers Distributing Corporation hopes to speed up service to exhibitors and to establish a more equitable trading basis. The plan is John C. Flinn's and is being worked out by W. J. Morgan, sales manager of the company.

The system now in vogue in all distributing organizations calls for submission of all contracts to the home office for final approval. This necessitates delays according to the distance the contract must be sent and in cases where the price or conditions of the contract do not meet with the approval of the home office it may be a matter of four weeks before a satisfactory agreement is reached. The new system inaugurated by Producers makes the acceptance or rejection of a contract only a matter of one or two days regardless of where the exhibitor is loated.

Hereafter division managers of Producers Distributing Corporation will have full authority on all deals between exhibitors and the company. To still further reduce delays the company will re-divide the country and instead of having four divisions as at present, there will be eight in the future, each with a division manager who is thoroughly conversant with actual and current conditions in every part of his territory.

In speaking of the new plan Sales Manager Morgan said:

"In delegating this responsibility we do not intend to lose sight of conditions. We will keep as closely informed in the home office as heretofore, and the district managers, while having full authority in their respective territories, will be held responsible to the company's executives for all their actions and decisions."

Bigger Campaigns for Better Short Subjects

By E. W. HAMMONS

President, Educational Film Exchanges, Inc.

LOOKING back seven or eight years one recalls the lack of esteem in which the Short Subject was held. It was known —and perhaps justifiably so—as a "filler."

From that situation to the condition existing today is a far cry. For while the Short Subject has not by any means reached the limits of its possibilities, but has rather just gotten a good start, still it is playing in 1925 the biggest part it has ever played in Motion Picture Showmanship.

We would not, of course, think of claiming all the credit for such a great advancement in such a great factor in the picture industry, but this development of the one and two-reel pictures has been parallel with the growth of Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., and we take considerable pride in the knowledge that we have contributed much to this advancement in showmanship—for there is no real showmanship in motion pictures without well balanced programs that appeal to the masses by their diversity in much the same way that vaudeville does.

The development in the quality of Short Subjects and in their entertainment appeal to the public, however, has been far greater than the development of the average exhibitor's advertising and exploitation work. Any exhibitor who has the least ability to gauge the appeal a picture is making to his patrons knows that his comedy and other Short Subjects entertain them quite as much as the feature, and, in fact, that the comedy often saves his show from utter failure when the feature is weak. It is hard to understand why the man who realizes that his patrons are entertained by the one and two-reel pictures cannot see that they would be attracted to his box-office by proper advertising of these subjects.

Let any exhibitor ask himself what would happen to his business if all Short Subjects suddenly went off the market. The only thing in doubt is just how much longer he could remain in business, not whether he could continue or not. Every exhibitor knows this. Every exhibitor knows that his public wants, that it insists on, comedies, novelties, news reels, etc., as well as feature pictures. This being true, this same public will be attracted to the box-office by these Short Subjects if told about them.

The exhibitor who books a program feature, and with it books a two-reel comedy starring one of the well known and popular comedians such as Bobby Vernon or Walter Hiers, has in his comedy a box-office attraction of greater pulling power than the feature. Why not use it?

Educational's 1925–26 Line-up

6 Two-reel Lupino Lane Comedies
6 Two-reel Bobby Vernon Comedies
6 Two-reel Walter Hiers Comedies
6 Two-reel Jimmie Adams Comedies
18 Two-reel Mermaid Comedies
10 Two-reel Christie Comedies
6 Two-reel Tuxedo Comedies
6 Two-reel Juvenile Comedies
24 One-reel Cameo Comedies
12 One-reel Lyman H. Howe's Hodge-Podge
26 Short reel "Felix the Cat" Cartoons, Kinograms, Newsreel, issued twice a week

The exhibitor who books an excellent feature and a good two-reel comedy, still will have among his possible patrons many who will not be interested in the feature enough to pay their money at the box-office to see it. But, if they were told about the two-reel comedy, and the title or the star's name appealed to them, many would thus be attracted who would not come in otherwise. In this case possibly the added patronage might not run over ten per cent. What merchant would deliberately pass up a chance for ten per cent ADDED BUSINESS? This would represent the difference between profit and loss in many a store—and it represents the difference between profit and loss in many a motion picture theatre.

When will the exhibitors of America learn to use the Short Subjects which they have booked and paid their own good money for to make added dollars for them?

Seven Units Producing at New Educational Studio

With the acquisition of the Principal Studio, now renamed "Educational Studio," located at 7250 Santa Monica Blvd., Los Angeles, the Mermaid, Tuxedo, Juvenile, Lupino Lane and Cameo Comedy units producing comedies for the Educational program find themselves housed in one of the most complete studios in the world devoted exclusively to comedy production.

The studio was lately acquired at a price of $350,000, and already nearly $100,000 has been expended on improvements and enlargements necessary to accommodate the companies working on the huge lot. Two new enclosed stage buildings are in process of completion and companies are already at work making pictures on the new stages and on the stages already erected.

In addition to the studio buildings a property room has been erected large enough to house all the props used in the production of the comedies. A cutting room and projection rooms for six units are in process of completion, as well as blacksmith shops, wardrobe building, and a new block of dressing rooms.

The electrical equipment of the studio has been enlarged by the addition of a complete 300 K. W. motor generator plant, complete with switchboard and a complement of the most modern lighting equipment.

Educational Announces Huge 1925-26 Program

WITH two or more series of two-reel subjects likely to be announced later in addition to the line-up now being offered by Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., E. W. Hammons' Short Subjects organization is getting ready to distribute the biggest and, according to the firm belief of every Educational executive, the strongest program in its history.

While the advance in the exhibitors' buying season made it advisable to announce the Educational Pictures program as it now stands without waiting for the completion of details on several groups of pictures being planned, the Educational Pictures schedule now contains almost all the well known groups of the last season, and two additional series of star comedies. Lupino Lane, master of pantomime whose work on the stage and screen in America has even exceeded his great successes in Europe, has been added to the list of Educational Pictures stars, and Jimmie Adams, who has been seen in leading roles in many of Educational's outstanding comedy successes for several years, has been taken out of Christie Comedies and signed up for a series of six Jimmie Adams Comedies.

Educational's present line-up will embrace 126 screen subjects, in addition to the weekly issue of Kinograms news reels. In the line-up are 64 two-reel comedies and 62 one-reel comedies, cartoons and novelties.

Jack White, producer for the Educational program.

First releases in the new season's series will be late in August.

"The addition of Lupino Lane and Jimmie Adams Comedies and Felix the Cat Cartoons to the list of Short Subjects successes which we continue from last season, makes our new program the strongest line-up of one and two-reel pictures both as entertainment units and added box-office attractions that we have ever been privileged to handle," said Mr. E. W. Hammons, president of Educational. "The two or more additional series of pictures which we expect to announce to exhibitors in the near future, as soon as production details are worked out, will make the Educational Pictures schedule for the coming season the biggest in our history.

"The number of pictures is secondary to quality. Quality with us is always considered before quantity. Still further building up our already strong line-up by the addition of stars and pictures of acknowledged box-office value, was our first undertaking in preparing this new group of releases. But because of the great strides which the Short Subject has been making and is continuing to make in the presentation of Motion Picture Entertainment, it is our aim also to provide for Educational's exhibitor friends an additional number of pictures.

"With the new subjects to be announced later added to our present line-up, we feel that Educational is offering exhibitors a program of Short Subjects that will go a long way toward helping them to be independent of entire reliance on the feature through the building up and advertising of diversified entertainment week in and week out."

Four Christie Units Contribute To Program

THE various comedy units producing pictures at the Christie Studios for release on Educational's 1925-1926 program are now engaged in the most intensive period of production which has yet been undertaken at that famous comedy plant.

There will be four series of two-reel comedies produced at this studio. Perhaps one of the most interesting moves is that Educational will release a special series of Jimmie Adams Comedies. Adams has already started on the first of this series of comedies and it will be one of the early releases on the Educational program. Molly Malone will be seen as Jimmie's leading lady in his first starring vehicle.

The Bobby Vernon Comedies, which established themselves so firmly last season, will start operations with Bobby supported by a new leading lady, Frances Lee, who is coming into pictures after gaining popularity and fame on the vaudeville stage, where she appeared on the Orpheum Circuit.

The Walter Hiers Comedies unit is the third to start work on new pictures. Hiers has been increasng his popularity by using his vacation period to make personal appearances through the East and Middle West. The prestige of the Hiers two-reelers is gaining by leaps and bounds in response to his excellent work in his recent comedies "Good Spirits," "A Rarin' Romeo," "Tender Feet" and "Oh, Bridget." Duane Thompson and Clara Horton have been signed and will appear opposite Hiers in his new series of Comedies.

Fourth but not least important of the units assembling is that making the popular brand known as Christie Comedies. The Christie series will introduce a new find of Al Christie's in the person of Billy Dooley, who has been amusing vaudeville audiences for many seasons on the Orpheum Circuit. Dooley is an eccentric comedian who will make high class slapstick for the screen and carry out Al Christie's motto of "hilarious hokum with a reason." Neal Burns will also be featured in a number of releases of Christie Comedies. Burns is a long time favorite in the Christie Comedies and his face is known the world over. Also prominent in the Christie series will be Jack Duffy, who has scored heavily in the past with his odd "Grandpa" characters.

Christie is assembling a squad of new beauties to support the comedians in the new series of Christie Comedies. The first to sign on the dotted line were Doris Wynn and Jean Lorraine, striking looking youngsters with pep and dash. Vera Steadman, a Christie Comedies favorite for several years, will be in some of the comedies, and also Natalie Joyce, one of the popular "Baby Stars." Other comedians are Bill Blaisdell, Eddie Baker, Bill Irving, Lincoln Plumer and others yet to be signed.

Principal players in Educational comedies. Bill Balisdell, Bill Irving, Lincoln Plumer, Eddie Baker, Jack Lloyd, Jack Duffy.

Famous Comedians To Star For Educational

ONE of the most important announcements in connection with Educational's 1925-26 program is that of the acquisition of Lupino Lane to star in a series of two-reel comedies to be called "Lupino Lane Comedies."

Lane, who played the role of Koko, the executioner, in the recent revival of the famous Gilbert & Sullivan Opera, "The Mikado," at the Forty-fourth Street Theatre, New York, has recently completed a successful season in vaudeville in and around New York City.

Previous to his American debut in the huge stage production, "Afgar," Lane was a featured player at the London Hippodrome. At the end of the run of this play he was immediately signed by Fox and was starred in three two-reel comedies, "The Reporter," "The Pirate" and "My Hero."

Bobby Vernon Series

Bobby Vernon, one of the most popular stars appearing in Short Subjects, will make another series of six Bobby Vernon Comedies for Educational.

It was decided last year to star Vernon in a series of comedies bearing his name in order that exhibitors could more easily realize on the great drawing power of this star.

Vernon is one of the most consistent performers on the comedy screen. He is very versatile, has a winning screen personality and injects into his comedies the speed and action so necessary to Short Subjects.

Walter Hiers Series

The announcement that Walter Hiers has been signed for another series of six two-reel comedies to be released through Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., does not come as any surprise to those who have followed the big comedian's work in two-reelers.

Hiers is more than "just another fat man." He is an excellent comedian, thoroughly seasoned in comedy work by his years of appearance in feature length productions with Paramount and other big organizations.

During the season just closed, Hiers produced six two-reel comedies for Educational. These were, in the order of their release, "Short Change," "A Fat Chance," "Good Spirits," "A Rarin' Romeo," "Tender Feet" and "Oh Bridget," the last of which will be released on Educational's July schedule.

Al. Christie, producer for the Educational program.

Jimmy Adams Series

As a reward for his excellent work during the last two series of Christie Comedies, Jimmie Adams will be given the starring roles in a series of comedies to be named after himself the Jimmie Adams Comedies six of which will be released by Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., during the coming season.

Adams has been appearing on the Educational program for over three years. He was featured in a series of twenty-four Educational-Cameo Comedies and played featured parts in a number of Educational-Mermaid Comedies.

Burns and Dooley

Neal Burns and Billy Dooley will share honors in Educational-Christie Comedies in the series of ten two-reelers which will be released in the coming year by Educational Film Exchanges, Inc.

Burns is rounding out his ninth year with the Christie Comedies, during which time he has appeared in nearly one hundred and fifty pictures. Burns will be seen in five of the ten Christie Comedies to be released by Educational.

Billy Dooley is declared by Christie to be a real "find." He has been appearing in vaudeville, and it was in his sketch "The Misfit Sailor" that Al Christie saw him and decided that Dooley "had something." A contract with Christie followed.

Conley and St. John

Educational will release eighteen Mermaid Comedies during the 1925-26 season, starring two very popular comedians, Lige Conley and Al St. John.

Conley, who has appeared in these popular comedies three years has been resigned for the 1925-26 season and will be featured in a considerable number of these fast action comedies.

Al St. John, who will alternate with Conley in the featured roles of these Mermaid Comedies was seen in the Mermaid Comedies "Red Pepper" and "Fares, Please!" made near the end of the 1924-25 season.

Johnny Arthur

Of considerable interest to exhibitors is the announcement that Johnny Arthur has been signed by Educational-Tuxedo Comedies to star in a series of these popular two-reelers.

This is Arthur's first advent into the two-reel comedy field, but he has a considerable following due to his work in feature attractions. Previous to his entry into pictures he was a well known leading man in many stage productions.

Cliff Bowes

Cliff Bowes will be one of the featured comedians in Educational-Cameo Comedies, for which a new contract for twenty-four has been closed by Educational. These popular single-reeler comedies will be released at the customary rate during the coming twelve months.

Bowes has appeared in the majority of the Cameo Comedies released during the last three years.

Juvenile Stars

For the third year in succession, Juvenile Comedies will occupy a prominent place on Educational's program.

The third series will present a bevy of widely known young stars, probably including Jack McHugh, Bobby Gordon and Bubbles Barry. During the past year Jack McHugh and Mickey Bennett have been featured in these comedies and the casts have always contained the best juvenile talent available.

Stars and featured players in Educational comedies, Johnny Arthur, Al St. John, Lige Conley, Bill Dooley, Cliff Bowes, Neal Burns.

Extensive Advertising Campaigns Planned

THE advertising and publicity plans for Educational Pictures during the 1925-1926 season are designed to constitute the biggest campaign of exploitation ever provided on a group of Short Subjects for the benefit of exhibitors.

First of all, there is the national magazine advertising which includes a consistent campaign in the Saturday Evening Post. This advertising in the Post, which has been conducted without a break by Educational for several years, not only serves to keep the movie going public thoroughly familiar with the Educational trade mark and the names of various brands of pictures released through Educational, but also to inform the fans of outstanding new comedies by name. This advertising is credited generally with having played a big part in raising the prestige, not only of Educational Pictures, but of Short Subjects as a whole. In August and September Educational will announce its new program of one and two-reel pictures to the public through the columns of the Saturday Evening Post.

In order still better to take advantage of every opportunity for magazine and newspaper publicity throughout the country, the activities of the Advertising and Publicity Department of Educational Film Exchanges, Inc. are being considerably increased with the addition of a West Coast Bureau under the direction of Ray L. Hoadley who, for more than two years, has been a member of the Advertising and Publicity Department in the Home Office.

Press sheets will be issued on all two-reel comedies and all special subjects during the year. While these press sheets are concise arrangements of exhibitor helps, they offer a complete supply of newspaper ads, publicity stories, cuts and exploitation suggestions, so that the exhibitor can get from them a well rounded publicity campaign on his two-reel pictures. Mats for all advertising and publicity layouts are furnished free to exhibitors.

Educational has always made it a practice to supply a complete line of accessories on its Short Subject releases. These include, for example, on two-reel comedy subjects, one-sheet and three-sheet posters in four colors, 11x14 duotone lobby display cards, 8x10 black and white photographs and hand colored slides.

To these accessories are now added trailers on all two-reel star comedies. These trailers are available to all exhibitors through the National Screen Service.

Leading Comedy Directors in Charge of Units

DIRECTORIAL supervision of the two-reel comedies in Educational's 1925-1926 program will be in the hands of two of the greatest comedy geniuses that motion pictures have developed.

At the Christie Studio the guiding mind will be that of Al Christie who will be responsible not only for the ten two-reel Christie Comedies but also for six Bobby Vernon Comedies, six Walter Hiers Comedies and six Jimmie Adams Comedies.

At the Christie Studio, Scott Sidney will direct the new series of Jimmie Adams Comedies, Archie Mayo will direct Walter Hiers in his second series of Walter Hiers Comedies and Harold Beaudine will continue to direct Bobby Vernon. Billy Watson and Walter Graham will direct Neal Burns and Billy Dooley in the ten Christie Comedies.

Jack White will have the chief responsibility at the Educational Studio—the plant recently taken over from Principal Pictures and improved for the production of eighteen Mermaid Comedies, six Juvenile Comedies and six Tuxedo Comedies, as well as the entire series of twenty-four one-reel Cameo Comedies.

At the new Educational Studio the directorial staff will consist of Norman Taurog, Albert Ray, Stephen Roberts and William Goodrich, in addition to Jack White, who will personally direct a number of comedies during the coming season.

News Reels and Novelties Feature Program

KINOGRAMS, "the news-reel built like a newspaper," will again be distributed by Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., on a twice a week basis.

This popular news reel is entering its seventh year of existence, bigger and better than ever and showing a surprising increase in circulation with every new year. The producers of Kinograms lay this remarkable growth to the practical idea back of this news reel—the idea that a news reel should resemble, in all important points, the big newspapers of the day.

Today Kinograms enjoys one of the top places in the news reel field and its representation numbers the largest and finest houses in the country.

Lyman H. Howe's Hodge-Podge, acknowledged by many to be one of the most popular magazine reels on the screen, will again be distributed by Educational Film Exchanges, Inc. A contract for the distribution of those highly diversified and entertaining reels has been signed.

Produced by the famous organization started by the late Lyman H Howe, the pioneer road showman of the industry, these reels present widely diversified topics.

One of the outstanding announcements of Educational's 1925-26 program is the news that this great Short Subjects organization will distribute during the coming year the popular "Felix The Cat" subjects.

Contracts have already been closed with Pat Sullivan, creator of "Felix," for a series of twenty-six of these animated cartoon comedies, assuring one release every two weeks during the coming year.

Weekly Edition of Exhibitors' Box Office Reports

Productions listed are new pictures on which reports were not available previously.

For ratings on current and older releases see MOTION PICTURE NEWS—first issue of each month.

KEY—The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage rating of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

Shopping Column Tie-up on "Dressmaker From Paris"

Manager Leonard Bishop of the Regent theatre, Ottawa, pulled off a neat bit of newspaper advertising for the presentation of "The Dressmaker from Paris," during the Easter Shopping week when he made use of paid reader space in the women's shopping section of The Ottawa Journal, this department being conducted by a fashion writer under the nom de plume of "Polly Pobble."

This reader appeared in several issues along with various other snappy readers for ladies' wear stores, milliners, shoe stores and other places of business. All readers are written in conversational style with small half-column half-tones inserted.

Here are just a few lines to indicate the tenor of the newspaper story:—

The fashions won't be all found in the shops during Easter Shopping Week," says Polly Pobble, "for there is the most gorgeous fashion revue imaginable at the Regent. Did you know that Leatrice Joy has gone back to the movies and is appearing in a wonderful new Paramount picture, 'The Dressmaker from Paris.' I wouldn't miss it for anything. There's a very interesting love story, of course" and so on.

A direct appeal for attendance at the theatre comes in the final paragraph which reads:—"Did you say that you'd like to see it too? Righto, we'll meet you in time for the late show tonight—but we'd better not take chances on being early; when there's an opportunity to see a really gorgeous fashion show, you may be sure that everyone in town will be going."

Carroll Builds Effective "Excuse Me" Display

During the recent showing of "Excuse Me," the lobby of the Victory, Tampa, was converted into a railway station by Manager John B. Carroll. For the purpose, a railroad setting was built on the back wall of the lobby with the theatre ticket office encased in beaverboard painted to represent a country railway station with a train schedule board.

Window display of original gown worn in "Madame Sans Gene" (Paramount), arranged by Manager Harry Van Demark of the Queen theatre, Houston.

To the left of the station was the rear of a Pullman car decorated with ribbons, old shoes, etc., carrying a large illuminated disc worded "Excuse Me" Special. The entrance door to the theatre was also covered with beaverboard depicting the rear of a Pullman.

The display, made by the staff artist, was an excellent visualization of the title.

A feature of the program was the novel overture entitled "All Aboard." This was specially arranged for the picture by Director Carter and included various train effects executed by the drummer. This musical number received a hearty reception at every performance.

Manager Carroll started his standard campaign a week in advance with special screen announcements and catchline slides, billing, lithographing, etc. The newspaper campaign was started four days before showing with a series of teaser ads

Bills Folded in "K" Shape Exploit "K—Unknown"

"K—The Unknown" has been exploited pretty thoroughly in its journey about the country, but George Schade of the Schade theatre, Sandusky, Ohio, used a couple of tricks we haven't heard of before.

His house manager, O. E. Skidmore, found a way to fold a dollar bill so that it made a perfect "K." One thousand brand new bills folded in this way were inserted in transparent envelopes, and starting eight days before the showing were given out as change at the theatre and used in paying all theatre bills. Before "K" reached the Schade everyone in town was talking about it.

The second of Schade's ideas was to have 300 cardboard "K's," 11 by 7 inches, cut out and a string attached. On the three parts of the letter were printed: "Schade theatre, Sun., Mon., Tues., May 3-4-5" and "The Unknown." To 200 of these small potatoes were tied and then they were put up in the downtown section by the simple expedient of throwing the potatoes into the branches of a low tree, and over awning frames and telephone wires. The "K" dangled down at the end of its string, and on Saturday morning Main street was fairly dripping "K's." The other hundred were used as door hangers.

"Dressmaker From Paris" Boosted Despite Handicap

Despite the handicap of a late booking, which did not permit of Manager W. E. Drumbar's arranging a Fashion Review for "The Dressmaker From Paris," at the Riviera, in Knoxville, this photoplay was expertly advertised.

With the co-operation of every ladies' shop in Knoxville, exquisite window displays of the latest feminine fashions were arranged. This was climaxed by the merchants participating in a single and double page spread of display ads with illustrations of the newest in women's apparel. This netted the theatre three full pages of free advertisements.

"New Toys" (First National) was given a most attractive lobby display in Seattle when it was shown recently at the Coliseum theatre, stripes being used to good advantage to set off the display.

Aunts of Charleys Free to "Charley's Aunt" Run

Manager W. E. Drumbar's recent tie-up with the Knoxville News on "Charley's Aunt," proved an excellent publicity builder for that attraction's run at the Riviera theatre.

The day preceding opening, the Knoxville News carried a front page article headed—Ladies: Which of you is a "Charley's Aunt?" with an announcement that, if the ladies residing in the city having nephews named "Charley," would fill out the coupon printed below and present it in person at the News office, they would each receive a ticket good for a performance of "Charley's Aunt" on Thursday or Friday, but not Saturday. The coupon called for the nephew's full name, his age and place of residence, with aunt's name and address.

The comedy appeal of the photoplay was stressed, Manager Drumbar using a ballyhoo for the purpose. The appearance on the streets of a man dressed to represent "Charley's Aunt" caused considerable comment and laughter.

Attractive Displays Given "Tarnish" in Nashville

Some unusually attractive window displays and tie-ups were obtained on "Tarnish," by Manager Dewey Mousson, his assistant, Walter Harmon, and W. R. Arnold, the exploiteer, when shown at the Knickerbocker theatre in Nashville, Tenn.

Twelve days in advance Harmon prepared and set up several attractive poster cut-outs for both lobbies of the theatre. In addition to the poster cut-outs, there was a very attractive and original treatment given to a display of the title. Three or four days were spent on this alone. A long strip of beaverboard was taken and the title cut out in about three-foot letters, the strip being twelve feet long. White tissue paper was pasted over the back of each letter. A high-powered electric flashing globe was mounted in such a way that it gave a flash of light through the letters so that it resembled an electric flashing sign.

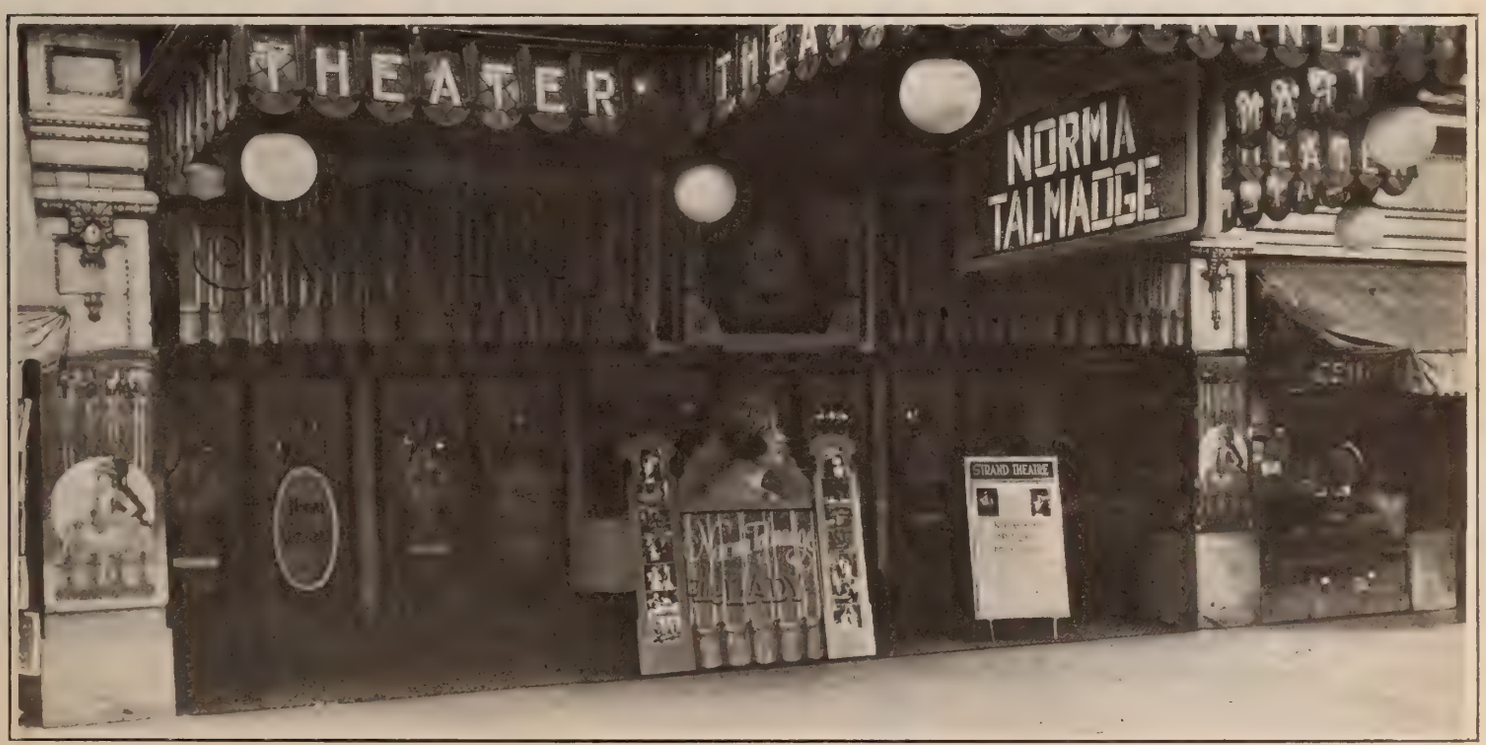
The stairways leading to the balcony bore posters and special signs were painted on the lobby mirrors by Harmon, who also painted an attractive design in a window of the vacant O. K. Houck building on one of Nashville's most prominent corners. Night value was obtained from this window display by placing two or three large Mazda globes behind the design.

Manager Mousson used a series of teaser ads in both Nashville newspapers in advance of his regular display copy. Round disks carrying the title of the picture were placed on about a hundred taxicabs, and traffic safety zones to the number of 175 were covered with quarter-sheet type posters. Quarter sheet cards were placed on 150 street cars.

Illuminated display, horseshoe shaped, built over the box-office of the Olympic theatre, Altoona, Pa., during the showing of "The Dixie Handicap" (Metro-Goldwyn).

Many 'Gold' Tie-ups Given Run of "The Golden Bed"

'Gold' was the keynote of Manager E. E. Collins' lobby on "The Golden Bed" at the Queen, Galveston. All of the one and three sheet backgrounds were made of gold paper resembling burlap. Even the cut-out sign over the box office had black lettering on gold. The entire display produced a striking effect.



The advance campaign started in the Galveston News a few months previous to opening date with the publication of the story in serial form was followed up with front page boxes, printed several times during the run of the serial, urging all to read the story and then go see the photoplay coming to the Queen.

A well-known furniture company had a window display of a beautiful brass bed which was tied-up with the photoplay by advertising it as "The Golden Bed" with a 'golden' opportunity to purchase it at a very low price.

"Madame Sans Gene" in Perfect Program Weeks

"Madame Sans Gene," playing the Arcade, Jacksonville, recently was the first offering on the "Four Perfect Program Weeks," inaugurated by Manager Guy O. Kenimer, and as such shared largely in the publicity given this event.

Excellent window displays were a prominent feature of the campaign, one with a well-known jewelry shop displaying exquisite ladies' hand-bags with a beautiful photo of Gloria Swanson mounted in a silver frame. The first tie-up with the Nunnally Candy Shop was effected on this attraction with two window displays of special boxes of candy with a huge photograph of the star in the center of each with a card worded "Sans Gene Parfait-Marvelous." The third window with a book store, had a splendid display of the book with an attractive cut-out from the three sheet, carrying three different pictures of Miss Swanson.

Those are some of the comments made by reviewers representing all classes of publications. When did you ever hear such a chorus of praise?

"Black Cyclone"

Special from Monitor Bureau

NEW YORK, May 18 — Capitol Theater, "Black Cyclone," a motion picture presented and directed by Hal Roach.

Here is one the screen's triumphs. "Black Cyclone" is the story, in flashing, poignant pictures, of a wild horse. It comes so breathlessly to the screen that all thought of cameras, crews, and other studio complications is forthright banished. And beside the quickening captions that carry the subtle breath of the tale to a further degree, that give to the film the necessary touch of humor, romance, philosophy, as the case may be. It is animal story telling of the finest, and the conjunction of the words and pictures is a technical accomplishment of remarkable nicety. From the early days, when as a rangy little colt Black Cyclone lost his mother and had to take up the trail by himself, to the final stare of his magnificence when he encounters "The Killer" for the last time and emerges victorious, the narrative runs its absorbing course with [illegible] elements of tragedy. Even the human elements of the story are adroitly welded to the

But the horses have it their own way, and it is certain that never before have such animal pictures been taken. It seems difficult to think of any way in which a push, and a lift and thrill that grips continually. The [illegible] encounters of Black Cyclone and the "Lady" are deliciously humorous, and their courtship is filmed with an understanding touch. Then there are the thrilling sequences when this glorious pair, after being trapped in a canyon by the wild-horse hunters, make their escape over seemingly impassable ledges. Black Cyclone meets with various vicissitudes, including the loss of his "Lady" at the hands of the "Killer," but all ends well, however, and the ever-faithful gray "Lady" is restored to her mate.

"Black Cyclone," Pathe's second interesting picture with Rex, the wonder horse, had a special invitation showing in the projection room of the Howard Theater Friday of last week, when a group of women from the P. T. A. division of the Better Films Committee, together with several newspaper men, formed the representative audiences present. Holding the thrill that it does when seen in the cold projection room, we predict that it will be a wonder with the added attraction of music. Every person present pronounced the picture as one of the most enthralling, fascinating out-door pictures of the season—one of the best productions of its kind that the screen has given us.

Hal Roach has woven his story well. The wild horse, Rex, roams the fields and the Western plains carefree and happy. He meets his mate, Lady, his enemy, the Killer, his man, Jim Lawson, who saves his life in Hell's Hole quicksand, and the horses and the humans mix and mingle in the story, with Rex always standing out as the hero. A pretty parallel is drawn between Rex and Lady and Jim Lawson, and his girl, Jane. Lady is persecuted by Pangle, a murdered and cruel outlaw. Rex saves his mate and Jim saves his sweetheart—and while the analogy is clear and always interesting apparent, it is never heavily sketched in sub-titles, never obtrusive. There is marvelous action, a fight between Rex and the Killer that is remarkable. There is humor and pathos and everything that goes to make a good story. But strongest of all is the lure of the outdoors—the call of the wild creatures. All of the honors cannot go to the animals and to the director, however. The man who plays Jim Lawson is a comer, if ever we saw one. He has personality, a splendid physique, and he is a far better actor than many of our already lauded Western stars. He should march to the front steadily. The unfortunate part is that his name is not mentioned anywhere throughout the picture.

Motion Pictures Today

One of the most dramatic and interesting films of the past week was "Black Cyclone," featuring a cast of clever equine actors. This picture really made a tremendous hit, and while it probably sounds foolish to relate the love story of Rex, the King of wild horses and the beautiful "Lady," the screen version was anything but foolish. It had the unanimous approval of the special critics. Of course, it may be that it is a relief to look at a few clever animal actors who really do display some intelligence after the reels and reels of dumb humans we poor fans have been forced to look at

ROACH SIGNS KATHERINE GRANT
Will Be With Pathe Five Years

AS THE result of her good work in the Hal Roach comedies released through Pathe, Katherine Grant has been signed to a five year contract by Roach. In making the announcement Roach said:

"Miss Grant's exceptional work before the camera has won her this long term contract. Not only has she proved herself a comedienne of the first rank with a keen appreciation of comedy values, but she possesses that subtle charm known as personality and it gets over most effectively on the screen. I am sure the theatre going public will be glad to learn we are assured of Miss Grant's appearance in our comedies for at least five years.

Miss Grant was born and educated at Los Angeles. Her stage debut was made in 1914 with Gus Edwards at the Orpheum Theatre in Brooklyn. She began her screen career in 1921 as an extra in one of the "Our Gang" comedies at the Roach studio. After playing in Fox and Universal pictures she returned to the Roach lot. For some time she has been appearing in the supporting casts of the various Roach production units making Pathe comedies.

Alberta Vaughn In New Series

F. B. O. Announces "Adventures of Maisie" Will Follow "The Pacemakers"

ALBERTA VAUGHN will be starred in a new series of two-reel comedies following the completion of her work in "The Pacemakers," the H. C. Witwer stories now being offered by F. B. O., it was announced by that company this week.

The new series will be called "The Adventures of Maisie" and will be based on the Nell Martin stories published under that title in a popular fiction magazine. It is probable that Larry Kent, juvenile actor, recently signed to a starring contract by F. B. O., will play opposite Miss Vaughn, and Albert Cooke and Kit Guard, familiar to screen fans through their character work in "The Fighting Blood," "The Go-Getters," "The Pacemakers" and other F. B. O. series, will head the supporting company.

"The Adventures of Maisie" center around Maisie St. Clair, the beautiful and supposedly dumb stenographer in the office of George Dorsey, a struggling young lawyer.

Maisie is desperately in love with George, but does not let him know it, while George is always firing Maisie on some pretext or other. But Maisie doesn't stay fired. She takes a case and brings it to George with the details all worked out, and succeeds in getting her position back. Everyone but George admires the plucky, fighting, gum-chewing little stenographer, but George sees neither her charm nor ability. It is Maisie's ambition to make a famous lawyer out of George, and she finally succeeds in doing it, but he doesn't realize until he nearly loses her that Maisie is a wonderful, clever girl.

Her activities lead her into many adventures. She is often in danger, but she always thinks: "It's for George's sake," and the thought gives her courage to fight and win.

Production on "The Adventures of Maisie" will start just as soon as a director is selected.

Pathe Offers Short Subjects

Well Balanced Program Scheduled for Exhibitors During Week of June 28th

AN "Our Gang" comedy, a Grantland Rice "Sportlight," a Patheserial chapter, Aesop's Film Fables, Topics of the Day, a Pathe Review and two issues of Pathe News make up the program of Pathe short subject releases for the week of June 28th.

The "Our Gang" comedy is titled "Official Officers" and was directed by Robert McGowan. The gang serves as a police squad to suppress a very tough rival gang. In the cast are Mickey Daniels, Jackie Condon, Joe Cobb, Johnny Downs, Mary Kornman and Farina.

"Animal Celebrities" is the Grantland Rice "Sportlight." It shows the animal stars of the screen in training, among the stars being Rex and Rin-Tin-Tin. J. L. Hawkinson produced this subject.

"The Shadow on the Stairs" is the title of the eighth chapter of "Sunken Silver" which is based upon Albert Payson Terhune's story "Black Caesar's Clan." Allene Ray continues her starring role.

Pathe Review No. 26 presents three subjects: "Short and to the Point," the story of a pin; "The Turrets of Amboise," Pathecolor views of a French town that has survived the inroads of time: and "Acrobaties a la Mode," another novelty produced by the Alvin V. Knechtel "process-camera."

"Office Help," an animated cartoon comedy of the "Aesop's Film Fables" series; "Topics of the Day," the reel of wit and humor; and Pathe News Nos. 54 and 55 complete the Pathe release program for the week of June 28th.

Meaning and Importance of Short Subjects

They Deserve More Attention in Theatre Advertising

By S. J. MAURICE,
Special Representative, Serial Dept., Universal

(Editor's Note.— This is the first of a series of articles by Mr. Maurice on the importance of the short subject. The next article will relate some experiences with exhibitors who did "play up" the short subject, with excellent results).

I HAVE just finished a swing around the circle. In other words, I have been in every exchange city in the United States and Canada, and my instructions from Mr. Laemmle were explicit: "Find out what is really thought of the short subjects! Get the real dope! Get an opinion from real newspaper men, managing editors, city editors as well as reporters. And not only from newspaper men, but from the man on the street, from the managers of theatres, from the managers of the different motion picture exchanges, from our competitors as well as our own representatives and last but not least from the salesmen who sell the stuff to the exhibitors who in turn must sell it to the public. What I want you to do is to be an 'inquiring reporter' and what I want is the honest inside stuff."

Mr. Laemmle said more to the same effect and that all I could think of all the time I was on the job. And believe me it was some job! After I had covered more than fourteen thousand miles in forty-three days and reported back to the Chief, all he said was: "Good, there is a typewriter, sit down and write your story for the MOTION PICTURE NEWS, so the world may know all that you have observed. Tell it just as you have told it to me."

And here it is.

Before going any farther, bear in mind that I have always been in favor of the short stuff. That is, whenever conditions permitted it, in handling theatres, I "played up" the short, gave it big advertising space and a place on the program I thought it deserved.

Philadelphia was my first stop. I hadn't an idea of just how I was to begin my job. All I could think of was the Boss's "get the dope." On my way from the Broad Street Station I said to myself: "Managing Editors are supposed to be hard-boiled. I'll try out the thing on one who is acknowledgedly so. Considine of The North American is a cold proposition. I'll start the ball rolling with him."

I got into Mr. Considine's sanctum sanctorum. The M. E. was sympathetic. He listened attentively. "The shorter pictures to me, are as important as the feature," he said finally.

"I go to the theatre knowing in advance that I will get some real entertainment from one of the shorter offerings, be it a news-reel, a comedy, a pictorial review or a serial. The latter to me are particularly interesting. This can be a red-blooded western or a mystery story. I remember 'The Great Radium Mystery,' as the first of the mystery stories that kept me guessing for weeks. Then came 'The Days of Buffalo Bill.' I watched and waited and longed for the weeks to fly by, so I could be in at the death. I never missed a single episode. The comedies, too, kept me going. Being a newspaper man I know that the news-reels are of tremendous interest."

Buffalo was my next stop. There I talked with two of the greatest men in the newspaper business. Marc A. Rose, managing editor of the Buffalo News was the first man I saw and talked with. The other was John D. Wells, the big boss of the Buffalo Times. Here was my opportunity. Rose, a hard-boiled business man and Wells, a poet at heart. Two men of high intelligence and with different viewpoints. I put the question to them "Of What Value is the Short Subject on a Motion Picture Theatre Program to You?" Rose didn't waste any time or words. "I wouldn't feel satisfied unless I saw the short stuff. To me a motion picture program is not complete unless it has a news-reel and a comedy or a something of the kind in addition to the feature. No reason, just wouldn't feel satisfied unless the program carried its quota of short stuff."

Leaving the News, I crossed Main Street to the Times office. Wells is a simple man and easy to approach; a man who makes you feel that you are never intruding.

"My opinion won't mean anything," he said, "but if I thought my favorite motion picture theatre didn't have plenty of short subjects on it's program, it wouldn't be my favorite theatre very long. I would pick out a house showing a news-reel, a comedy or a fascinating western or mystery short and make that my favorite theatre. I want action as well as comedy and romance. Sometimes the bigger pictures—what you fellows call the feature—doesn't always hold my interest, consequently I look forward to the showing of the other items on the bill. Very often I get a lot more satisfaction from the news-reel than from the feature; sometimes from the comedy; sometimes it is a short western that holds me. Just now I am more than ordinarily interested in a picture the story of which we are running serially in our paper. You have seen the advertising campaign we gave this story and speaking of advertising, why the managers of the theatres playing the short subjects don't make more of them in their advertising is beyond me. The short subject is an important part of the program to me and I don't hesitate saying so and saying so most emphatically."

Thus ended a most gratifying interview, one of the "intelligensia" of America, a man who knew! Unconsciously he asked the question that had been uppermost in my mind:

"WHY DON'T THE MANAGERS MAKE MORE OF THE SHORT SUBJECT IN THEIR ADVERTISING? Why? The theatre managers are all representative men. Good business men too. Maybe they are influenced by the big names the features carry and feel that the space at their command can be more profitably utilized on them than for the shorter product. Of course many of the ads. do carry the names of the short stuff, BUT IN ALL INSTANCES, these are in lower case lightface type! ! ! I read the ads. in the Buffalo papers and wondered where Charlie Chaplin, Reginald Denny, Tom Mix, Hoot Gibson, or Buster Keaton would be now, if all the managers throughout the United States treated the short stuff as do the Buffalo theatre managers.

Fox Starts New Comedy Unit

George Marshall Made Supervising Director; Will Make Two-Reel Films

A NEW comedy unit has been organized at the Fox studios to film a series of two-reel comedies. The company will continue the Van Bibber stories and also make the screen versions of the "Married Life of Helen and Warren" which Fox has acquired for production. A third company of this unit will picturize a series of O. Henry stories.

George E. Marshall, connected with the Fox company for several years as a director and supervisor of production, has been made Supervising Director of the new comedy unit.

A separate scenario department for the new unit, headed by Harold B. Lipsitz and Monty Brice has been created. A staff of six readers will thoroughly canvass the stories of O. Henry and Mrs. Urner for available material. Robert Kerr will continue to direct the Van Bibber series, starring Earle Foxe.

Four or five new directors will handle the megaphone on the remaining series. Casting and shooting on the new picturizations will commence in a few days and as soon as material, directors and actors can be secured.

The Fox Imperial comedies will continue under the direction of Lou Seiler, Ben Stolaff, Bryan Foy and others to be announced shortly.

Steele of the Royal Mounted

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THE title comes right out and declares itself in this melodrama. The Northwest Mounted pattern runs true to form allowing for a few variations. The central figure is not a member of the troop to start with, but joins it to crave excitement that he might forget his lady love who has played a cruel hoax on him. That's one variation. Another is the added emphasis placed upon the w. k. slogan—"get your man." The officer captures him once, but when he escapes he has to chase him all over the timber wastes of Canada before he puts the handcuffs on him the second time.

The Mounted story is always good for a screening if not filmed too often. You may know what is coming in the shape of plot and climax, but if the action is lively enough there needn't be any cause for complaint. The plot here doesn't hold up very well, but once the man-hunt begins it holds the interest. At least during these scenes it appears logical enough allowing for some lurid villany executed by the fugitive.

There is a society background to start it on its way. The characters are not clearly defined, though there is a suggestion that they belong to the elite. The heroine, becoming playful, introduces her father as her husband. When she tries to make amends the hero has flown to the upper reaches of Canada where he enlists in the Mounted. With his work cut out for him in capturing the villain, the girl starts a man-hunt of her own. She will find her man and beg forgiveness. Before the happy ending is reached a few thrills are injected. One features a saloon brawl in which the Mounted takes the shooting irons away from a "killer," and the best scene features the officer shooting the rapids and being rescued by his buddy before the canoe reaches the falls.

The story doesn't give the players much opportunity to appear natural. It isn't that kind of a plot. But Bert Lytell makes a good appearance as the officer and accomplishes all that the role requires. Stuart Holmes is the villain. The film is O. K. for any audience not fed up with the Mounted.

THEME. Melodrama of the Northwest Mounted with disillusioned lover enlisting in the troop and getting his man. Is reconciled to girl.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The scene when hero disarms bad man. The good performances by Bert Lytell and Stuart Holmes. The pursuit of villain. The sequence featuring the canoes shooting the rapids. The scenery.

DIRECTION. Gets good melodramatic effects from moth-eaten plot. Fair results from story and characterization. Enlivens it here and there with some snappy incident. Stages it against appropriate backgrounds.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up the title if your crowd is not fed up with this type of story. Play up scenic backgrounds and bill it as a James Oliver Curwood story of romance and adventure in the far North. Use male quartette attired as Mounties, etc.

DRAWING POWER. For average houses everywhere. Title may not prove alluring to patrons fed up with this type of story, but exploiting for its punch, etc., should get business.

SUMMRY. Nothing much above the ordinary. The old plot comes back with very few variations. Once it gets going it releases some good incident—and quite a little suspense. Also it is well played—and photographed against some picturesque exteriors.

THE CAST

SYNOPSIS. Wealthy youth of East has hoax played on him by girl he loves. She in order to tease him, introduces her father as her husband. This provokes the young man to run away from her. The White Outlaws

(Universal—4830 Feet)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

WE cannot remember when Jack Hoxie has had a better western than this one. It is a real horse opera since the plot revolves around a horse, called the "white outlaw." The sponsors have gotten away from cattle rustling this time—and feature the theft of horses instead. While the villain is familiar, being the ranch foreman, he doesn't provide as much trouble for the hero as the horse does in eluding capture. It is a departure among westerns—and patrons who have become tired of the same old plots should welcome it with open arms.

Hoxie is shown at the start eking out a livelihood in a shack situated on the property of the heroine's father. His only pal is his dog, for the horse has run away after brutal treatment from a ranch-hand. The hero had trained him to do a lot of circus tricks—and the incident featuring these certainly qualify the horse as an intelligent animal. He is a horse easy on the eyes—and the director has appreciated his color and sleekness by catching him in close-ups and medium shots as he poses against rocky ledges that bite into the fleecy clouds. But the horse refuses to obey his owner's call. Which extracts sympathy for the hero. The villain ejects him from the shack, the girl arriving too late to render any assistance.

The rustling episodes have been struck off with a degree of novelty. A large group of horses get out of the corral in some amazing way. The hero is accused of the crime but he is willing to prove his innocence by capturing the "white outlaw"—his explanation being the willingness of the mares to follow the horse. The latter is so tricky that he lifts the fences, thus granting liberty to his harem. He is lassoed after effecting the release of the mares—and the villain's case against the hero is destroyed.

There are some thrills—one showing a stampede of the horses, which nearly trample upon the girl before the hero rescues her, being particularly exciting. And it is well photographed.

THEME. Western melodrama of ranchman who, losing his trick horse, is determined to capture him. Hero is accused of horse rustling but proves himself innocent.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The intelligence of Scout, the talented horse. The shots of the animal registering contentment in his freedom. The trick scenes. The fight. The stampede and rescue of girl. The photography.

DIRECTION. Certainly makes it a real horse opera—and gets results from animals. Might have dispensed with bear episode as realism may invite censure. Stages it against fine backgrounds.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Feature as a real horse story—of a white horse who became an outlaw in his love of the wild. Ballyhoo with man in cowboy attire astride a white horse. Play up as a departure among westerns.

DRAWING POWER. For average houses or those catering to westerns. Will appeal to action lovers and those who admire horseflesh.

SUMMARY. Something different in westerns—in that the hero is a horse who involves his owner in a crime. Carries good action and first rate incident. The horse is a wonder and performs several tricks. Well photographed.

THE CAST

Jack Lupton.....Jack Hoxie
Mary Gale.....Marceline Day
Malcolm Gale.....William Welsh
James Hill.....Duke Lee
Negro Cook.....Floyd Shackelford
Sheriff.....Charles Bronley
Scout.....By Himself

By Isadore Bernstein. Directed by Cliff Smith. Photographed by Wm. Noble.

SYNOPSIS. Rancher is depressed over losing his horse, provoked into running away by one of the ranch-hands. The owner is subsequently evicted from isolated shack and takes to the open life. The foreman accuses rancher of stealing horses, but he proves that the wild horse has released the others. He captures him and saves his sweetheart from stampede. His honor is vindicated and love triumphs.

Paths to Paradise

(Clarence Badger Production-Paramount—6741 Feet)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

ANYONE who can't get a laugh out of this picture might just as well shuttle off this mortal coil, for life will never hold anything funnier for him or her than the rollicking fun offered in this highly diverting adaptation of Paul Armstrong's play, "The Heart of a Thief." From an action viewpoint this one is a gem. There isn't a moment that the players are not "up and at it." Clarence Badger, who directed this one, has outdone himself here.

Folks will not soon forget the novel entrance of Raymond Griffith as a supposed dude on a sightseeing tour of Chinatown, his reception in a ready-made "hop dive," where they try to make him believe he has killed a man, but for $500 he can get a man to take the blame, his turning around and posing as chief of detectives and with the aid of a pal, in turn takes away all the crook's money. After the two leave the crooks find a badge on which is inscribed "Gas Meter Inspector."

Then follows much merriment as well as suspense as Griffith, again posing as "the world's greatest detective," tries to beat Molly, the maid, also a crook to gain possession of a valuable diamond which a millionaire has imported as a wedding gift for his daughter. Griffith's antics as he plays "hide and seek" with a couple of burly cops and with the safe under his arm are a sure cure for the blues.

And then comes the climax which is going to be talked about. Raymond and Molly decide to "team up," after they get the gem. They jump into a big touring car and dash for Mexico. Then the loss is discovered and every city on the way from Frisco to the border is informed with the result that a dozen or so motorcycle cops join in the chase as the two dash through. And we recall few chases with the thrills of this one. Griffith drives that "boat," through, over, into, and under everything imaginable, but he makes the border ahead of the pursuing police. But, lo and behold, the two then decide to return the loot and an equally merry and thrilling chase starts all the way back to the Golden Gate. In a word it's a "wow!" All ends well, especially with the audience.

THEME. A comedy relating the experiences of a gentleman crook and his pal, Molly, who decide to go straight after heart-breaking efforts to get possession of a diamond worth a fortune.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The opening Chinatown scenes. The amusing episodes as Griffith and Miss Compson try to beat each other to the safe and the diamond. The great chase between the fleeing crooks and the motorcycle cops DIRETION. Has packed laughs into this comedy. He has turned out one of the best comedies of the season. He has made an action-fun picture plus.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Use the title in various dealer tieups. Auto agencies, especially Pierce-Arrow, should be rich field for exploitation aids as suggested by the wild chase. Stills of Betty with the diamond, good for jewelry store window displays.

DRAWING POWER. O. K. for the best houses in the land and should do business in all of them with a little exploitation.

SUMMARY. A picture that is entertainment all the way. Griffith is immense, Miss Compson is an attractive female Raffles and the supporting cast is excellent Thrills are interspersed liberally with the laughs

THE CAST

Molly	Betty Compson
Friend	Raymond Griffith

Adapted from Paul Armstrong's play, "The Heart of a Thief." Directed by Clarence Badger. Scenario by Keene Thompson. Photographed by McKinley Martin.

SYNOPSIS. Griffith posing as a dude visits Chinatown. He meets Molly, who is running a dive to rob slummers. Griffith is cleaned of his money, but then turns about, hails a pal, poses as a detective and gets away with the crook's money. Then Griffith is given a job as a detective to watch a valuable diamond. Molly gets a job as a maid in the same household. In spite of the strong guard placed, the two get the gem and flee to Mexico. They are chased by all the cops thereabouts. In Mexico they decide to go straight. They return the gem before the theft is discovered.

The Manicure Girl

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

IT'S the direction that counts in making this picture tolerably pleasing. Getting down to brass tacks it has a frail story that could easily have been ruined had the director not been sympathetic in his treatment. He has touched it up here and there with flashes of humor in the characterization—and the figures are guided to appear natural all the way. Even with everything in its proper place it has a tendency to drag because the plot lacks dash and color. When it gives evidence of evaporating for lack of interest along comes a pointed subtitle and it gains new strength.

It's all about a manicure girl who would like to step along with the other beauty specialists in the shop, accept money and gifts from gentlemen callers and yet be true to her poor but honest lover. She is a frank girl, for she takes the youth in her confidence. He frowns on her big city ideas—and so they plan to save enough to buy a bungalow which will house them after they are married.

This is all told with an economy of effort. There is no stressing of dramatics. The gentleman with the moustache, played adroitly by Hale Hamilton, tries to put over a proposition—and he nearly succeeds when the sweethearts have a quarrel. The youth had taken her to the theatre, but she had tired waiting for him to get a cab in the rain. So she accepted the older man's invitation to take her home in his car. This precipitated the quarrel—which isn't patched up until the young man, a radio dealer, surprising her in his rival's home, hears enough to convince him she's on the level. The girl had brought about a reconciliation between the wealthy man and his wife.

The scene of the rainstorm is done with a fine play of humor. And the incident featuring the quarrel—and the despair of the wife in outlining her unhappiness to the girl—these are also rich in human appeal. As mentioned above there isn't much to it, but its treatment and the clever acting by Bebe Daniels and Edmund Burns make it tolerably pleasing. If it becomes tiresome in places it is because of its length. A little editing would snap it up a great deal.

THEME. Romantic drama of manicure girl who craves the pleasures and gifts that come with wealth. Entertains sophisticated ideas with a married man, but remains loyal to poor youth.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The natural, convincing incident. The rainstorm episode. The quarrel. The easy manner of the other man who for once is a gentleman and not a scoundrel. The episode when wife confronts heroine. The sincere performances by entire cast.

DIRECTION. Extracts everything out of frail story and so humanizes it that it looks real. Gets over the gaps in great style, keeping it going when it has scarcely enough action to sustain it.

EXPLOITATION ANGLE. Title affords tie-up with beauty shops, etc. Play up Bebe Daniels in new role. Bill it as a human little story of a girl who craved luxuries and excitement.

DRAWING POWER. A good, hot weather picture in that it doesn't tax the mind. Suitable for first and second runs. Title and star should attract them.

SUMMARY. Rather frail of story and certainly obvious enough of plot but incident is well dovetailed and it reveals a lot of human touches. Players are convincing all the way. No melodramatic episodes, no villainy—but simply a story of everyday life in a big city. Balanced with humor. Sags a little.

THE CAST

Maria Maretti	Bebe Daniels
Antonio Luca	Edmund Burns
Flora	Dorothy Cumming

Mrs. Morgan	Charlotte Walker

Lost—A Wife

(Paramount—6420 Feet)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

THE principal interest in this feature is in the debut of the Norse beauty, Greta Nissen, who appeared as the princess in the pantomime of the stageplay, "The Beggar on Horseback." There is no refuting the statement that Greta is beautiful, yes, and shapely and her work in her first screen effort gives promise of better things to come. Greta rose to fame as a danseuse and is said to to have won much fame tripping the light fantastic in her native land. This training undoubtedly accounts for the grace in her every move before the camera. The men are going to like her, too, for she is very easy on the optic nerves.

As for the story, well, it is just so-so. Alfred Savoir, who gave us "Kiki," is also the author of "Banco," the play from which this film is made. It is a light, airy thing, in fact much ado about nothing. An American bachelor in Paris sees a beautiful girl from the states and having a mania for gambling, immediately bets a friend he will marry her that very night. He is a fast worker and wins the bet. But the craze for roulette takes him into a casino in Southern France. He goes in for ten minutes on permission of his wife, but remains for 75 hours. So does the wife. Then the latter departs for home and mother, etc. Of course, there is a reunion at the end.

Adolphe Menjou is the star and the picture is by no means worthy of his ability, although he tries hard to put it over. Miss Nissen wears some gorgeous gowns during the action of the piece which will aid you in selling the film to your fair patrons. Perhaps the most interesting sequence is that in which the husband refuses to stop gambling as long as his wife remains in the casino. They even bring a bed into the place for the wife, who sticks it out almost as long as the husband and then departs—with another man. The setting is quite attractive, although not elaborate. The supporting cast is fair.

THEME. A modern comedy drama dealing with domestic complications in a Parisian atmosphere. Couple separate over gambling, but are reconciled.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The appearance of Greta Nissen in her first screen role. Her gowns. The fast wooing of the heroine. The scene in which the hero carries the girl away and weds her. The seige at the Casino when the wife refuses to leave unless her husband accompanies her. The work of Adolphe Menjou.

DIRECTION. Has used too much footage to tell the tale which lacks suspense. Has been handicapped by a weak story. Has given the picture an attractive mounting EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Insert ads in "Lost and Found" columns. Play up the screen debut of the Norse beauty, Greta Nissen, and tell the women about her gowns. Use Adolphe Menjou's name big in all ads. Tieups with hosiery, lingerie, etc. stores by using stills of Miss Nissen.

DRAWING POWER. Popularity of Adolphe Menjou and interest in the new star, Greta Nissen, will help most houses attract business with this one, which needs exploitation.

SUMMARY. A rather slow moving comedy drama in which Adolphe Menjou's work is one of the redeeming factors and in which the real interest centers in a new face—Miss Nissen. The plot is laid against a Parisian background. There is an attractive mounting and the gowns worn by Greta will be taked about.

Don Q, Son of Zorro

(Douglas Fairbanks-United Artists—10,264 Feet)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

TAKING heed of the popular clamor to give the screen another dashing melodrama like the memorable "Mark of Zorro," Douglas Fairbanks has responded with the liveliest, most colorful (and what appears to us as his best audience picture) of his active career. It combines all the punch and thrills of "The Three Musketeers" and "Zorro," affording the star another picturesque role which stands out with as much cameo clearness as D'artagnan, Robin Hood and the Thief. Always ready to strike off something novel in characterization to keep out of the rut he reveals himself as an expert wielder of the whip. He does more with it—uses it to better advantage than he did the sword in "The Three Musketeers," and "The Mark of Zorro."

It is a fine story of stirring adventure. It bounds along at a merry pace—with every episode so perfectly timed that the suspense fairly grips you even though the motivation of the plot is as obvious as any swashbuckling tale of chivalry. Don Q is a fast worker. He wins the admiration of Spain's queen and her court with his manipulations of the whip. A Californian sent to the ancestral home in Spain to be educated he is so keen for romance and adventure that he makes love, proposes, and precipitates international complications through being accused of the assassination of the Austrian archduke—all within the space of forty-eight hours.

Fairbanks dominates every scene. His agility—the manner in which he abandons himself to all kinds of hazardous stunts, outwitting his opponents, playing pranks on jealous rivals—make him a fascinating figure. He is so dextrous with the whip that he cuts cigarettes out of the mouth and even lights one on occasion. He climbs with it and uses it to lasso a bull. The action is crowded with incident that flows along at breakneck speed—incident punctuated with thrills and humor. And back of it all is a most colorful atmosphere, the glamour of which makes it rich in romance. A finely spun story, this—a dashing melodrama, perfect in its technical details, flavored with courageous heroics—and wonderfully well acted. Too much praise cannot be given Warner Oland, Donald Crisp and Jean Hersholt for their clearly defined portraits. It carries out perfectly what it pretends to be—a quality melodrama that contains everything to appeal to the pulse and the eye.

THEME. Romantic melodrama of Spanish Don whose taste for romance and adventure gets him into all kinds of trouble before he wins the girl and saves his head.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The constant surprises showing hero outwitting his opponents. Fairbanks' dash—and talent with the whip. His study as the aged Zorro. The scene when Mastado is outwitted. The climax.

DIRECTION. Keeps it thoroughly atmospheric—and holds it to an even, progressive pace all the way. Keeps it colorful with melodramatic incident and surprises. Gets fine results from players.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Go the limit. Play up as sequel to "The Mark of Zorro," which has been called star's best picture. Use Spanish prologue — featuring whip artist if obtainable.

DRAWING POWER. Has everything to appeal to all types, young and old, children and adults. For all houses.

SUMMARY. Fairbanks' most stirring picture, — one zipping along at a merry pace releasing every kind of melodramatic element. Has rich characterization, colorful sets, beautiful photography—and is finely acted.

THE CAST

Dolores de Muro ..... Mary Astor
General de Muro ..... Jack McDonald
Don Sebastian ..... Donald Crisp
The Queen ..... Stella De Lanti
The Archduke ..... Warner Oland

Robledo ..... Charles Stevens
Zorro, his father / Don Cesar de Vega ..... DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS

By K. and Hesketh Prichard. Scenario by Jack Cunningham. Directed by Donald Crisp.

SYNOPSIS. Son of Zorro goes to Spain to be educated. Encounters jealousy and intrigue, but his gay abandon and his dexterity with the whip get him out of tight scrapes. Is accused of murder, but overwhelms his enemies and wins his freedom and the girl.

The Fighting Demon

(Richard Talmadge Production-F. B. O.—5470 Feet)

(Reviewed by William Campbell)

WHILE this stunt picture lacks some of the action seen in former Richard Talmadge releases, it has a goodly quota of typical Talmadge turns in which he has opportunity to offer the kind of entertainment his followers want and expect. The picture opens with the star trying his best to make a boat for South America whence he has been lured with a promising job but which in reality is just a plot of a band of crooks to get a man to aid them pull a big safe job.

Talmadge is supposed to be an expert on safe construction. He has a hard time getting to the boat but arrives in time to grab a rope hanging from a hoisting machine. Aboard boat he meets up with Dynamite Diaz, a prize fighter, whose enmity he wins by getting friendly with the former's wife. The star and the fighter then put on some merry chases all over the boat in which the former offers some new acrobatic tricks.

There is more thrills in the South American episodes when the hero, finding himself the victim of a gang of safe blowers, refuses to listen to their offers, so is robbed and left penniless. But he manages to round up the gang, and then, to get funds, accepts an offer to enter the prize ring, but to his consternation finds himself facing the bully whom he met aboard boat. But he has found the bully's weak spot and soon gives him the K. O. The fight is well staged and has its moments of comedy as well as suspense. There is romance in the picture, of course, but the least said about it the better. It is of the conventional cut and dried type.

The boat scenes are staged upon a real schooner, but the South American sets are artificial. However, these pictures are made for program houses and little things like sets are not observed by the Talmadge fans. All they want is to see their hero hop around, beat up gangs of a dozen or so, foil the villains and win the girl. All these things are done here so that is all that can be asked.

THEME. Comedy drama in which a young safe expert refuses to aid a band of South American crooks blow a big bank strongbox and, instead, helps in rounding up the crooks.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The scenes aboard boat in which the star leads a big bully all over the decks, rigging, hold, etc., in a thrilling chase. The sequence in which the hero locks the crooks in the bank safe. The prize fight. The capture of the ringleader.

DIRECTION. Fair. Succeeds in keeping the star on the move and again gives him opportunity to exploit his athletic prowess. Has given the picture a fair mounting.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up the name of the star as there are always a host of admirers waiting for his pictures. Put on an amateur boxing bout. Arrange a tie-up with hardware store on safe display using stills of Talmadge in the safe episodes.

DRAWING POWER. A good offering for the program houses catering to the Talmadge fans. Will also offer good entertainment in the smaller downtown theatres and the towns.

SUMMARY. Another stunt picture in which Talmadge exhibits once more his ability to outwit his opponents no matter what the odds against him. Filled with the kind of stunts the fans like and featuring a prize fight as a satisfying climax.

THE CAST

John Drake.....Richard Talmadge
Dolores D'Arcy.....Lorraine Eason
Dynamite Diaz.....Dick Sutherland
His wife.....Peggy Shaw
Jackson Pierce.....Herbert Prior
Senor D'Arcy.....Charles Hill Mailes
Isaac Belding.....Stanton Heck
Professor.....Jack Hill
Kid Price.....Dave Morris
Slippery Logan.....A. Cheron
Arnold Malvin.....Frank Elliott

By Charles Metz. Scenario by James Bell Smith. Directed by Art Rosson. Photographed by William Marshall and Jack Stevens.

SYNOPSIS. John Drake, safe expert, accepts what he believes to be a fine position with a South American firm, but arriving there he soons finds he was wanted only to act as a tool for a gang to rob the safe in a large bank. Devoid of funds he accepts an offer to enter the prize ring, after he has aided in foiling the safe robbery. Then he beats a bully in the ring and nabs the ringleader of the crooks. He wins Dolores, daughter of the banker.

The Peak of Fate

(F. B. Rogers M. P. Corp.—About Eight Reels)

THE appeal of this picture rests with its magnificent scenery—it presenting a simple romance framed against the awe-inspiring atmosphere of the Tyrolese Alps. There is nothing of the picture studio here and because it offers a departure from the usual feats of heroic courage in its efforts of mountain climbing one must give it a mark of excellence. The author and director are not credited—and the identity of the players is cloaked in secrecy. The author may not have been inspired here, seeing as how the plot evaporates into thin air. But Eugene Walter, the playwright, has been credited with the construction—which probably means he was called in to piece the scenes together with titles and to cut out extraneous footage.

It has many moments of appeal, particularly in the marvelous backgrounds. The peaks cut right into the sky—and the fleecy clouds which sail over them lend an enchantment, not easily forgotten. Then, too, not being interpreted by actors the portrayals are most life-like. The players fit right into the scheme of things. As an example of simple naturalness, pay attention to the mother's fine restraint when she wonders if her son will return to her—alive. She doesn't tear her hair, nor roll her eyes. No dramatics are expressed. She is overcome with mute helplessness.

There are thrills in watching these Alpine people climbing the towering peaks. The hero's father had lost his life trying to reach the summit of the Devil's Needle. It has defied these Swiss for generations. The entire plot hinges upon the successful scaling of this rocky perpendicular cliff. The youth promised his mother not to attempt it. But his sweetheart sets out alone and fails. He hears her cries of distress and, after scaling the mountain, rescues her.

These characters are often silhouetted against the mountains and sky—and the effect is very picturesque. There is constant suspense in the climbers' efforts to carry on. In all a scenic treat—one impressive in its beautiful and inspiring backgrounds.

THEME. Romantic drama involving the perils of mountain climbing with youth scaling the peak and rescuing sweetheart overcome with fatigue after making the ascent.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The marvelously beautiful backgrounds. The awe-inspiring grandeur of the mountains. The ascent of the Devil's Needle. The suspense when youth rescues girl. The natural acting by the players. The photography.

DIRECTION. Has emphasized the pictorial highlights as there isn't much plot. Moulds simple romance to bring out courage of youth in rescuing sweetheart. Builds suspense all the way. Some of the scenes are not well tied together. Has handled players to make them appear natural.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up as departure from usual romance in that it capitalizes heroic courage. Emphasize that it is a romance of the Tyrolese Alps. Point out the marvelous scenery, etc.

DRAWING POWER. Needs heavy exploitation to draw patronage. Cast is unknown. Will draw entirely upon its scenery. Suitable for average audiences in any house—in any town.

SUMMARY. There isn't so much to the plot—it being a simple romance fraught with tragic events. Its appeal rests with its beautiful backgrounds. It has suspense in the perilous ascent of the Alps, and its acting is very natural. But there are no bits of humor—no surprises to balance the romance. Subtitles too flowery.

THE CAST

Players not credited.

Construction by Eugene Walter. Direction not credited.

SYNOPSIS. Youth's father had lost his life in attempting to scale the Devil's Needle in the Tyrolese Alps. The peak had defied all attempts to reach the summit. The boy has promised his mother not to risk his life to reach the top. But when his sweetheart attempted to be the first to accomplish the feat she failed, overcome as she was with fatigue. The youth reaches the top and rescues her.

Opinions on Current Short Subjects

(Pathe Serial)

PATHE'S newest serial, "Play Ball," is big league stuff! It has only to maintain the standard set in the first three episodes to earn the right to be called Major League in performance as well as background for the acting, settings and photography are of real feature quality. Indeed, it is one of the most dressy of serial plays and from the production standpoint can hold its own on the programs with the big features at the big theatres.

The best traditions of the serial type of story have been preserved in a play which concerns the romance of a millionaire's daughter with a baseball player who is out to win the respect of his own wealthy parent. There are international complications, a count entering the plot as a schemer bent upon forcing the millionaire to arrange a loan to the opposition faction in the government which is to be financed by American funds. Furthermore, the ball player is the son of a Senator who has started an investigation of the business methods of the banker, so there is plenty of internal conflict in the romantic phase of the story.

But even better than the story, which by the way is credited to no less eminent a baseball magnate than John J. McGraw, is the excellent staging which the Pathe company has given the play. It is quite evident that Pathe is out to please the confirmed serial fan and also capture the interest of those who previously have not included episode thrillers in their list of enthusiasms.

The opening scenes are laid in Florida, where there is all manner of opportunity for colorful action and settings. The climax of the first chapter shows the heroine being carried overboard by a shark which attaches itself to her fishing line. There are some remarkable underwater scenes and the episode takes its place with the most thrilling events developed on the screen.

Alleen Ray is starred and Miss Ray is certain to widen her popularity by her work here. Walter Miller is the leading man, and others in an excellent cast are Harry Semels, J. Barney Sherry, Mary Milnor, Wally Oettel, Franklyn Hanna and Ed Maurelli.

Spencer Bennett, who has had a sound training in serial making under George B. Seitz and others, wins his spurs as a top-notch director with his effort. And wisdom was extended further when Horace Plimpton, one of the nerviest and most resourceful camera men, was engaged to photograph the work. Plimpton takes his camera smash up against locomotives or puts it directly under the pounding hoofs of runaway horses, and thereby gets effects which greatly enhance the melodramatic force of the action.

"Play Ball" was adapted to the screen by Frank Leon Smith, a seasoned scenarist, who has developed the story in expert and skillful fashion.

It seems to this reviewer that "Play Ball" is the most promising serial to date and we confidently expect it to register as a box office attraction as well as a big popular hit.—T. C. KENNEDY.

Thundering Landlords
(Pathe—Two Reels)

DOMESTIC comedy, with emphasis on the knock-about type of screen action, is presented in this two-reeler from the Hal Roach studios. The star of the proceedings is Glenn Tryon, who is seen as a family man driven to occupy with his wife and child an unfinished house he is building as his love nest.

The difficulties of moving hurriedly with a flivver touring car as the only means of transporting the furnishings and equipment is the first important episode. This is followed by the extraordinary occurrences which await the family upon entering their unfinished home. The contractor, insulted at the harsh words of the owner who complains about the delays in finishing the house, calls his men and says, "we have been criticized, everybody quit!" But if the carpenters quit, the actors in the affair go on and on, taking terrific punishment in the form of wallops on the head and caboose. It is strenuous action and may amuse the confirmed patrons of the slam-bang type of movie.

Tryon is supported by Fay Wray, Noah Young, Irene Allen, Marjorie Whiteis, "Hisky" Hanes, and James Finlayson. The acting honors, we think, go to the infant which appears in the film. It is the same baby who "stole" a recent comedy in which Glenn Tryon was seen as the author of books on babies and who is given the opportunity to practice his theories. James W. Horne directed "Thundering Landlords."—T. C. KENNEDY.

The Pronto Kid
(Universal—Two Reels)

MELODRAMATIC comedy of the west, with suspicion attaching to the hero, whom the heroine takes for the sluice robber but loves him nevertheless, and lots of hard "ridin' " are used again in the familiar formula which has served the "western" so faithfully. "The Pronto Kid" has its good points and must be rated a rather good two-reeler.

In the first place there is Edmund Cobb, who is a good type for the heroic role, and who can ride a hoss with the best of 'em. In "The Pronto Kid" he has a good supporting cast, fine photography, and a good pictorial atmosphere to aid him in his heroics.

The story is about a bandit who is being chased by the sheriff. He rides a white horse. Next we see Cobb riding into town on a white horse. He calls on the sheriff's daughter and it is a case of love at first sight. Somebody accuses him of being the sluice robber and there is another chase in which the girl roots for Cobb, who later is reavealed as the owner of the mine which the bandit is robbing instead of being the bandit, so there is a happy ending—T. C. KENNEDY

Nicely Rewarded
(Universal—One Reel)

CHARLES PUFFY is featured in this Bullseye Comedy, a single reeler dealing with the experiences of a fat cop who in spite of himself catches the robbers and earns the rewards accruing to a hero credited with a great service in the public interest.

The picture is amusing and should score a fair hit in any theatre. There is plenty of fast action and a few rather clever and effective gags to aid the leading comedian. Mildred June is seen as the leading lady, the sweetheart of the heroic policeman, and who aids him in rounding up the bandits.—T. C. KENNEDY

Official Officers
(Pathe—Two Reels)

IN this amusing contribution to the popular series of "Our Gang" comedies the youthful troopers become honorary policemen and lend their part to the creation of an ideal community of a roughneck district in the down town section of the city. The play is not without its sweet moral, that kindness will accomplish more than force. But the main point is that "Official Officers" moves along at a good clip and presents many highly diverting gags. It ought to succeed in keeping the picture fan's mind off the hot weather and supply sufficient amusement to make him glad he went to the show.

The play opens with scenes of a ball game being staged by the kids in one of the congested streets of the city. They evolve the idea of putting up "street closed" signs and thus for a while have their own playground. But a bully policeman takes them in. The kind-hearted inspector intervenes and the hard-boiled cop is fired. He is replaced by a big fellow who loves kids, and to aid him in his work he appoints the gang junior officers. They go in seriously for the work and things go swimmingly until they get into grips with a rival gang, when a hotly fought battle ensues. Robert McGowan directed with his customary skill and H. M. Walker's titles are in the best vein of this king of comedy title-writers.—T. C. KENNEDY.

In the Grease
(Pathe—One Reel)

JAMES FINLAYSON, a capital comedian is the star of this jumble of familiar gags. It is the story of a confident parent who is given the job of teaching class in the hard-boiled school attended by his prankish son.

The comedy is built on the usual stuff concerning the tricks youngsters play on their teachers. Every so often one of the cute little students shies a missive of some sort with deadly accuracy. The climax comes when a bee hive is slipped into the trouser seat of the volunteer teacher. It is rather forced comedy all the way through.—T. C. KENNEDY.

Office Help
(Pathe—One Reel)

IN this new "Aesop's Fable" Cartoonist Paul Terry is, as usual, amusing and fanciful The episode should give some valuable hints to efficiency experts. Here, for example, is the peer of all double-entry bookkeepers. It is a mouse, which weilds a pen with its tail as well as its paw and keeps two ledgers going at once. The office cat also is a fast worker. It captures a mouse and forces it to lick the envelopes and stamps, thus getting out the mail in record-breaking time. There are several laughs in the reel.—T. C. KENNEDY.

Animal Celebrities
(Pathe—One Reel)

LITTLE, intimate glimpses of the animal stars of the screen are combined in this Grantland Rice Sportlight film. The picture should be received with great interest by the bulk of the screen patrons. There are views of "Rex" the famous star of "Black Cyclone," of Rin-Tin-Tin, and pictures taken at a training school for canines. They all make interesting screen action and the reel can be highly recommended for any program.—T. C. KENNEDY.

Unwelcome
(Universal—One Reel)

THE adventures of two surveyors, charting the lands in the mountains where there are plenty of bad men and especially men who hate surveyors. Charles Puffy and Billy Engle are seen as the surveyors.

The reel gets away to a good start, with Puffy doing some amusing comedy as the surveyor's helper. It maintains a fair pace throughout and may be expected to satisfy the majority of screen fans.—T. C. KENNEDY

The Runaway Balloon
(Pathe—One Reel)

THAT "A Loud speaker is a sound investment" is the moral of this Aesop Film Fable produced by Cartoonist Paul Terry. The grotesque and droll figures now familiar to film fans enact the story of how a radio outfit almost saves Farmer Alfalfa from a terrible death in the arctic regions. It is an amusing "Aesop" film.—T. C. KENNEDY.

This is almost unprecedented for Harrisburg where usually, each summer, one or more theatres have closed to take advantage of the dull season.

Something new in the line of entertainment for children is being provided by the Spokane first run houses, in their Saturday Forenoon Matinees, being put over in conjunction with various film and civic bodies of that city. Newspaper Opinions on New Pictures

"Cyrano de Bergerac"—J. W. Keenan and E. T. Peter—St. James Theatre, Boston, Mass.

Boston Herald: "The immortal Cyrano has at last appeared on the screen. Without benefit of lines Pierre Magnier succeeded in putting over the robust, pulse-stirring attributes of the Gascoigne cadet whose life was at once a glorious triumph and a stark tragedy.

The Boston Telegram: "The play was advertised as 'an artistic screen triumph.' Those words amply describe it. Pierre Magnier, who played with Bernhardt, took the title role of Cyrano. The role called for extreme versatility, but Magnier carried it off with ease that was astonishing. In the role of Roxane, the beautiful cousin of Cyrano's, was Linda Moglia, romantic and lovely. From the comments as the St. James was being emptied of its guests, it is safe to say Cyrano de Bergerac was a popular and a wise choice."

Boston Globe: "'Cyrano de Bergerac,' noted French comedy by Edmond Rostand, has been given a movie version and to make the gloriously and shamelesly sentimental play thoroughly and more strangely fascinating it is in colored pictures. . . The large audience at times was moved to applaud."

Boston Traveler: "The production is a notable one in many ways . . . There is, moreover, plenty of action, plenty of humor, drama and human interest to offset the moth-ball feeling incidental to costumes."

Boston Post: "There are two outstanding high-lights—the playing of the title role by Pierre Magnier, a Continental actor, and the filming of the story entirely in colors. Because of the period of the Rostrand story, the 17th century, with its colorful costumes, the color idea proves especially effective."

"The Desert Flower"—First National—Strand, New York

New York Times: "Colleen Moore gives a vivacious performance as a sympathetic little hoyden. The narrative is amusing."

New York Morning Telegraph: "Rattling good entertainment. If there is any comedienne whose methods are surer or more productive of results (than Miss Moore) we shall have to be shown. Colleen never misses a point. She is as delightful as ever. A pleasant evening's doings, better than the average."

New York Mirror: "Colleen Moore injects an infectious buoyancy and humor into her role, suggestive of 'Sally' and 'Flaming Youth.'"

New York World: "Brings back the delightful little Miss Moore, giving her an opportunity to register vivacity."

New York Journal: "There is no doubt but that Colleen Moore is a splendid little actress. She is cute and amusing."

New York Evening World: "When Colleen Moore is properly cast there are few screen comediennes who are able to provide more delicious entertainment, and she is properly cast in 'The Desert Flower,' a fit successor to 'Sally.' There isn't a doubt but that 'The Desert Flower' will go far."

New York Telegram & Mail: "Ideal summer entertainment. It is brisk and joyous—the sort of thing that George M. Cohan might spoon out to an avid public. Immeasureably better than the play from which it was taken. A piece of spick and span entertainment. Much laudation goes to Miss Moore, for she has become one of our most skilful comediennes. The audience bubbled over her."

New York Evening Post: "Will delight Colleen Moore enthusiasts. Pleasant entertainment."

New York Sun: "There are few motion picture stars who can hold one's interest completely, but that is what Colleen Moore does in 'The Desert Flower.' Gives Miss Moore the chance to romp the gamut of emotions. If there is a better comedienne than Miss Moore we don't know her."

CONSTRUCTION & EQUIPMENT DEPARTMENT

Modern Equipment Reduces Operating Cost

Better Shows Resulting From Installation of New and Improved Apparatus; Patronage Increased

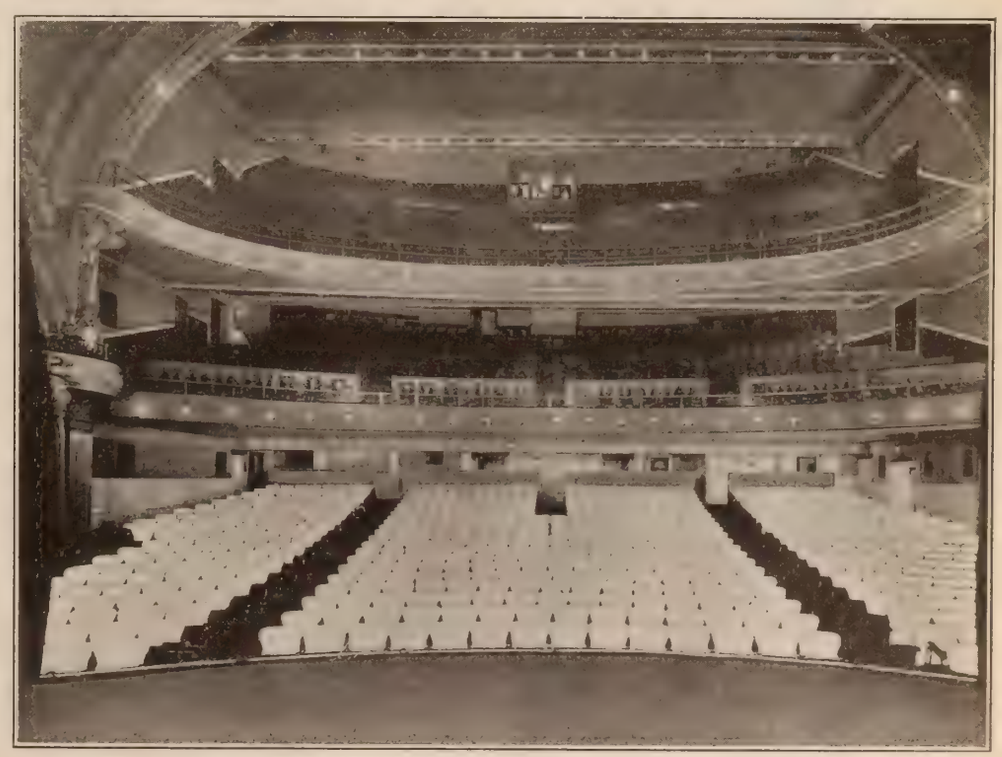
UNDOUBTEDLY most exhibitors have been impressed with the influx of new equipment, that has been placed on the market within the past year or two and likewise with the advancement in the design of older standard apparatus. However, it may have escaped the attention of many that this new equipment and better designed standard equipment has resulted to the very material advantage of exhibitors in making possible more perfectly presented shows, greatly reducing the cost of theatre operation and placing theatres in a position to make a stronger appeal for potential patrons.

Every exhibitor will find it to his advantage to keep fully informed on all types of theatre equipment. In some instances installation of a certain type of equipment means the saving of large sums each year otherwise spent in overhead or operation, or still another type improves the quality of the picture shown on the screen while, for instance, in the case of lighting the control apparatus further beautification of the theatre itself is accomplished. Modern methods now are even perfected to the extent of reversing the loss in summer due to decreased patronage to actual profits resulting from good attendance caused by patrons seeking out certain individual theatres as a refuge from excessive heat.

Thus the concentrated efforts of equipment and theatre design engineers have resulted in motion picture theatres taking their place among highly modernized industrial establishments—for strictly speaking motion picture theatres are industrial institutions. It therefore follows that the most efficiently equipped and scientifically operated theatres are to enjoy growing success while theatres which, for one reason or another, fail to adopt modern methods and equipment, will soon become obsolete and pass into the discard.

A resume of some of the new equipment and improved standard apparatus should be of interest especially at this season, when many exhibitors are planning remodelling and re-equipping their house during the summer months. The following equipment mentioned is far from a complete listing of apparatus that the progressive exhibitor should investigate:

One of the heavy overhead expenses borne by every theatre is excessive fire insurance rates, caused mainly as a result of the presence of a highly inflammable material, film. The degree of fire proofness of a theatre building and its equipment determines, in most instances, this rate. A new film safe, designed for the storage of film in the theatre, and which has been passed by the Board of Fire Underwriters Laboratories, has recently been put on the market. It is claimed that the insurance companies will allow a reduction in the premium rate on the installation of one of these safes; the reduction being of an amount that should make the purchase of this equipment an excellent investment.



Of equal importance with the reduction of overhead is lower operating costs. Two equipments that are more or less familiar to many exhibitors and which are proving successful in this function are incandescent lamp projection apparatus and reflector arc lamps. It is claimed for these two types of equipment that the projection results obtained are superior in many instances to those secured by older methods while at the same time a great economy of electrical power consumed is experienced. This saving in the cost of electrical power is one more avenue toward greater net profits for theatres.

Probably the most talked of successful theatre engineering accomplishments are the recent installations of special refrigeration and atmospheric conditioning apparatus in several theatres. This apparatus is making these houses popular places for people to go in their endeavor to escape excessive summer heat. In smaller houses efficient ventillating apparatus is also helping to dispel the seasonal depression.

It is in this particular field of engineering endeavor that the greatest advancements can be looked forward to in theatre equipment and the day anticipated when a majority of the better houses will be in a position to reverse the effect of hot weather and transvert it into a real asset.

In beautifying of theatres the modern theatre lighting systems have played a very important role. Remote control switch boards, located in many instances in the projection room under the supervision of the projectionist, have proved invaluable in the presentation of modern performances

And so the listing of advancements in theatre equipment could continue—illustrating how better theatres and shows are now made possible by modern engineering; and that these better theatres and shows are operated at less cost in proportion to those of a few years past. This short discussion of modernized equipment also proves the necessity for every exhibitor to keep fully posted in this phase of his business.

B. F. Keiths house, Indianapolis, dolled up for summer. The light colored chair covers brighten up the general appearance of the auditorium.

The Capitol theatre, Salisbury, N. C., which was recently opened by J. M. Davis, owner. This house has a seating capacity of 738 on the main floor and 200 in the balcony.

J. M. Davis, Salisbury, N. C., Opens Second Theatre of 1000 Seats

THE brilliant opening recently of the new Capitol theatre in Salisbury, N. C., marked the second theatrical venture of J. M. Davis, prominent banker of that city, and sole owner of the Iris theatre as well as the new Capitol house.

The new theatre is a beautiful building, inside and out, and is equipped with the most modern fittings. Facing on Innes street, it has an artistically designed Spanish front of two stories, made additionally attractive by a large ornamental glass marquise. On the top of the structure stands an immense, high-powered electric sign, visible to a large section of the business part of the city.

The main interior of the theatre which has a seating capacity on the lower floor of 738 with 200 seats in the balcony, is reached from Innes street, where there is an artistically designed Spanish front of two stories. At the opening of the long lobby arcade is the beautiful Stanley box office. The wall frames and attraction boards are Stanley Bluebirds. The lobby itself has a pleasing effect with Rockwood tile flooring.

Passing from the main lobby into the inner lobby, first on the left is the manager's office directly opposite of which is the handsome ladies' lounge. The fixtures and furnishings of this room were supplied by the R. W. Norman Co. of Salisbury. The men's retiring room opens off of the inner lobby as does also the house supply room.

The main auditorium is built at right angles of the inner lobby causing the large foyer to become a continuation of the inner lobby. There are four large aisles with ramps six feet wide crossing the side sections to each of the six exits. The seating space is 32" between rows allowing ample leg room while the chairs are upholstered by American Seating Co.

The walls are paneled two tone buff and sepia with strippled brown. All ornamental work trimmed in gold bronze. Auditorium lighting is on a three color dimming system controlled from the booth with ornamental wall brackets and nine large ceiling domes of leaded art glass. The dimmers on domes and walls are separately controlled.

The balcony with a capacity of 200 is equipped with aisle lights and contains the projection room. The latter's equipment consists of a 75-75 Hertner Transverter which is housed is an individual generator room within the large booth enclosure. The projection is obtained by two 6-B Powers projectors. The room also carries controls for the immense fans on the roof of the building for cooling. A Brenkert Spotlight completes the booth battery. The rewind room opens into the main booth equipped with a Fulco Automatic Rewind and Film cabinets.

The movable console of the big Robert Morton Organ is located in the Orchestra pit. The main organ chamber is mounted to the right of the proscenium arch with swells opening at the twisted rope grills topping the first row of exits.

The stage is large and roomy modernly equipped with twelve spacious dressing rooms containing toilets and running water. The pin rail is located fourteen feet above the stage floor on the first balcony of dressing rooms. Equipment carries 22 sets of lines with counterweight system. Draw drapes over the screen are of blue and gold while the front draperies are of velvet with a solid body and gold rope fringe.

Mr. James M. Davis the owner of the Capitol is a Salisbury man. Banker for the greater proportion of his life and at the same time has owned the Iris theatre in his home town. He is one of the city's most prominent citizens and numbers his friends by the thousands. The Capitol is a child of his own brain, owned entirely and operated by him. He felt that in building the type of theatre he had visioned that it required a theatre architect and employed Roy Benjamin of Jacksonville, Florida, to draft the plans and the splendid results achieved are to both his credit and that of L. S. Bradshaw, the contractor.

Urey K. Rice, the managing director of the Capitol, needs no introduction to exhibitors in the Southern field. He began his theatrical experience in his home town, Paducah, Ky., in 1907. He cranked an old Powers five at the Kentucky, Tennessee and Bijou theatres there. Associations with other companies followed and after service overseas during the world war he opened the new Southern Theatre with J. A. Maddox in Columbus, Ohio, in 1919. Three years with that house followed by three more with the Piedmont Amusement Co. at Winston-Salem, N. C., as General Manager proved him to be the most capable executive.

A happy coincidence is the fact that the two feature organists at the new theatre are Mr. and Mrs. Grant E. Linn who were for two years organists with Mr. Rice at Columbus, Ohio. The Linns are organists of note, having held responsible engagements with Crandall Theatres.

Me. and N. H. Open New Strand in Rumford

The New Strand theatre erected in Rumford, Maine by the Maine and New Hampshire Amusements Company, of which William P. Gray of Lewiston is the president, was opened June 1. The theatre has a seating capacity of between 800 and 900 and is equipped throughout in the most modern and attractive way. The cost of construction was about $90,000. The theatre is situated opposite the municipal buildings and will be managed by James A. O'Brien of Portland former manager of the Jefferson Theatre in Portland and of the Empire in Lewiston.

Greenville, N. C. New Theatre Vies With Best On Atlantic

GREENVILLE, N. C., has one of the most beautiful picture theatres in the state and one of the most beautiful in this section of the country, the new Egyptian which recently opened its doors.

It is the old Casino taken over by the General Enterprise Inc., which is headed by Harry K. Lucas. It is the building of the old theatre but there is nothing that would remind one of the former place. Everything on the inside from the ceiling wall paper to the carpets on the floor is brand new and of surpassing excellence.

The theatre is a replica of the tomb of Old King Tut-Anka-Ahmen which was discovered by Lord Carnarvon of England, basking in the languid sun of Egypt near the fertile delta of the Nile.

When Mr. Lucas decided to have the theatre decorated according to the Egyptian plan he found that it was necessary to get around a bona fide copyright of England. So Mr. Lucas did nothing other than to buy the privilege of using the color scheme that Lord Carnarvon discovered over in Egypt and he has made remarkable use of it.

The first sight that will greet persons who enter the new theatre will be a huge electric sign extending from one end of the entrance to the other. The sign reads "Egyptian Theatre" and is fixed on the front of a heavy street canopy, swung from the front of the theatre over the sidewalk, and suspended by means of heavy chains. The canopy extends to a line with the curb. On either end of the canopy will be the name of the picture running in the theatre. This also will be in electric lights—just like the entrances to the best theatres in New York. Underneath, the ceiling of the canopy is studded with scores of electric lights which will make the entrance to the lobby one of great brilliance.

The lobby proper looks like it was made of solid granite. Countless millions of dots of white and black paint produce the desired effect. One gets the idea while walking in, of entering a great palace of bygone days.

The doors are gilded so as to appear to be of solid bronze and inside one steps on a red carpet of such wonderful plush texture that the reaction is that of walking over a bed made from the petals of fragrant roses.

Then, passing on into the house of amusement one is faced with the real beauty of the theatre. The wall paper has been imported from England at great expense. It is called polychrome paper. But the word is really inadequate to describe it. It is multicolored alright but the colors, of metallic lustre, are so wonderfully blended that the result is indescribable. And the painting of the wood work, the design of the frieze, the ceiling paper, the shaded and elaborate lights, the indirect lighting effect, the stage and proscenium opening of imitation granite and the whole picture is one of par excellence. The screen sets back on the stage as would a throne of Pharaoh the Magnificent.

Novelty Scenic Studios Issues Interesting Booklet

The Novelty Scenic Studios has issued a very interesting booklet entitled "New Standards in Photoplay Presentation." This booklet discusses the physical aspects of the theatre as coordinate and essential phases of successful theatre management. Factors are mentioned that tend to promote goodwill and stimulate steady and consistent patronage.

The booklet is fully illustrated with stage settings that should help exhibitors in suggestions of the best type of setting for particular types of houses and stages.

He has a host of intimate friends all over the United States, and has been prominently identified with the development of the most advanced ideas in theatre organ building.

Mr. Matthews will continue to handle the National Advertising, as well as the active management of the Eastern, Middle-Western and Southern divisions.

Mr. Schiller also announces the completion of plans for the quarter of a million dollar addition to the factory at Van Nuys, California, as well as the removal to larger quarters, of the New York office, about July 1st. The new office will be located at 1560 Broadway, and Mr. Matthews will have his headquarters there. With the new addition to the Van Nuys plant, the Robert Morton Organ Company will have one of the most modern high class organ factories in the world. Mr. Schiller states that the additional plant at Van Nuys has been necessitated by the remarkable demand for the Robert Morton.

Mr. Schiller is particularly elated with the recent volume of orders for the large type Robert Morton Units, for installation in prominent theatres in the country. Among orders recently placed with the factory are a large four manual feature organ for the new Krupa theatre at Lancaster, Pa., a Unit for the $3,000,000.00 new Loew theatre in New Orleans, La., in which it is reported, the Saenger Amusement Company of New Orleans are interested. Detroit's new $2,000,000.00 Grand Riviera theatre will have a Robert Morton Organ. The Pantages Circuit on the Pacific Coast, have also placed orders with Mr. Schiller for five large Robert Morton Units.

Up-State N. Y. Scheduled for $300,000-$100,000 Houses

Purchase of three pieces of real estate in the 600 block of South Salina street by Thomas Hogan, attorney and realty operator, as the site of a new Syracuse theatre, became known the other day. The deal is reported to involve a sum totaling $300,000. According to the report, Mr. Hogan has been approached by a theatrical firm with a long term lease for a theatre.

Le Roy, N. Y. is soon to have a new $100,000 moving picture theatre, according to an announcement by Ralph E. Blouvet, who owns the Family in the same town and the Strand in Brockport. Mr. Blouvet has completed negotiations whereby he becomes associated with the Western New York Theatrical Enterprises, Inc., which is soon to open the new Lafayette theatre in Batavia. Fred M. Gimmerman of Buffalo is one of the officials of the Western company. Full details of the undertaking are being withheld pending the completion of some of the details. The new house will have a seating capacity of 1,000.

Definite and Real

Exhibitors who keep a careful eye on the box office find that photographic quality on the screen has an influence with patrons that is definite and real.

That's why it's worth while to make sure the picture is printed on the film that carries quality from studio to screen—Eastman Film.

Eastman Film is identified by the words "Eastman" and "Kodak" in black letters in the film margin.

Ghosts of the Past

ANCIENT history possesses a fascination which is peculiar unto itself. It starts with a train of reminiscences which cause one to delve deeper and deeper in an effort, sometimes all too futile, to arrive at the beginning of things.

Aside from the sentimental value which attaches to the finding of such explorations, a highly useful end is served in that they function as a means for measuring progress in any particular field. Then too, there is a certain egotistical consideration which is satisfied whenever a comparison of past and present practice is found to favor the latter.

The causes for such explorations are sometimes trivial; indeed often accidental. Of such a nature was the one which prompted the Nicholas Power Company to pry into the "Morgue" in search of "antiques" from which it emerged with a complete line of projector models, starting with

(Fig. 1) Model number 1, designed during the years 1903 and 1904.

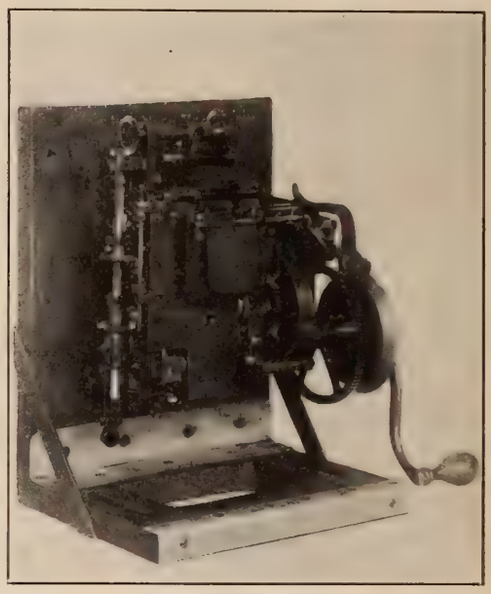
No. 1 and ranging through to present perfected type.

The ancient history of the motion picture projector, while probably not possessing the public interest involved in the exploration of King Tut's Tomb or the more recent one of Ancient Carthage, nevertheless holds interest for its own particular circle.

As said once before, it possesses a fascination peculiar unto itself.

Through the courtesy of the Nicholas Power Company we are permitted to reveal the results of their exploration which traces the evolution of this particular projector from its origin to the present day.

Model Number 1



This model was designed during the years 1903 and 1904. The film was run from a reel known as a reel hanger on the top of the mechanism down through the mechanism into a film bag. It then went through an aperture in the wooden base of the mechanism, as shown in Fig. 1, into an ordinary bag made of cotton or linen which was about a foot wide by four feet long. This film, of course, simply dropped into the bag after which it was removed and rewound on a reel ready for the next performance. The No. 1 model had the following features:

The intermittent was known as the two pin cam and is similar to that now used by the Simplex for fast movement. The aperture plate was held on a piece of brass on the bag attached to the wooden base of the mechanism. The tension shoes were simply flexible steel wound entirely around the gate of the mechanism held in front by two small screws having no adjustment devices whatsoever. The framing device simply consisted of a spiral spring from the lower part of the base of the frame to a lever attached to the top of the frame base. The entire mechanism was drawn in that fashion from top to bottom on two guide rods. The projector was driven by a 7-inch wheel attached to the crank of the machine which actuated the projector by means of a small round belt. This, in turn, propelled the entire projector driven by one brass chain on two sprockets. One sprocket consisted of the upper feed and with the lower sprocket, which was fastened to the intermittent movement, made up the entire drive. The only gears on the mechanism were two toggle gears, one of which was attached to the spindle driving the cam and the other to a one blade perforated shutter on the inside of the mechanism. (Inside shutter.) This was the entire driving device of Power's No. 1 mechanism which was marked "N. Power, New York." In connection with this, it is the only model which used a chain drive. This model had only one upper feed sprocket and no lower feed sprocket. The framing devise was on the right side of the projector.

Model Number 2

This was known as the "Peerlesscope, 117 Nassau Street." Incidentally, these models were not numbered as they are numbered to-day, and it was not until the No. 4 was produced that they began to so number them. The earlier models up to the No. 4 were not in regular production. About three mechanics were employed and these men working upon the suggestions and rough drawings submitted by Nicholas Power, who was a practical projectionist, produced a projector from time to time which were disposed of as fast as they were made. During the period from 1903 to 1907 the force consisted of Nicholas Power, Charles Linderer (who is still with the Company), and a force of mechanics varying from about three to ten.

Power's No. 1 was really a very crude and simple device and in No. 2 we begin to see the present Power's Projector taking shape. In this model we find the first Power's framing carriage, which is an improvement over the No. 1, consisting of a one pin cam, constructed of brass instead of steel, and which framed on two vertical guide rods upon which the carriage frames up and down.

This projector was entirely driven by gears, thus doing away with all chain drives. The intermittent movement and the upper feed sprocket were fed by a vertical spindle which in turn had pivot gears attached to it. In the first model there were two gears and two sprockets. The No. 2 model had about twenty-five gears and the tendency since has been to decrease their number. The aperture plate and gate shoe were also improved on this type. The aperture plate takes in the entire face of the front part of the projector with steel runners attached to same and the gate shoe consists of a square steel box which had very fine springs inserted in the back to act as a tension device for the shoe. This is the first model to have tension shoes with a tension device, although it was not adjustable. It also has the first automatic fire shutter consisting of a flap. A small rod projected out on the side of the mechanism engaging the lever that was trippled by a disc on the framing handle. This handle lifted the lever up and opened the flap of the fire shield at the same time.

This type had the first intermittent bracket which consisted simply of a hinged roller and opened up sideways to the left and was non-adjustable. The roller was made of hard rubber and rotated on the intermittent bracket itself. This outfit consisted of only one upper feed sprocket and had no lower sprocket; the film feeding into a bag as in model No. 1. The improvement over the No. 1 was that the shutter consisted of two blades instead of one and was of solid brass metal, not perforated as in No. 1.

Carlisle Theatre Will Have 1,200 Seating Capacity

Carlisle, Pa., is to have a new motion picture theatre, with a seating capacity of 1,200, as the result of the purchase, recently announced by David Cooper, proprietor of the Orpheum Theatre, in that city, of the two brick properties. The properties were bought for $60,000.

Mr. Cooper stated that the erection of the new theatre will start next Spring. The properties together have a frontage of 55 feet on High street, and extend 240 feet to the rear to Church avenue.

The site of the proposed theatre is directly opposite Mr. Cooper's present Orpheum theatre on which he holds a lease good for several years, and he has not stated whether he proposes to continue operating the Orpheum after the new theatre is completed.

Mr. Cooper has been successfully engaged in the motion picture business in Carlisle for six years.

Norse Legends Depicted on Walls of Oregon Theatre

LEGENDS of the norsemen depicted in impressionistic paintings make the unique and distinctive mural decorations of the new Lowell theatre which has just been opened in Eugene, Ore.

The picture house was named for Lowell Smith, the world flyer, but it is probable that the name will be changed to the McDonald theatre. Eugene business men favor the change because the theatre was built by A. H. MacDonald, who had always taken an active part in Eugene civic affairs, and who died just before the theatre was opened. His son, Donald McDonald is manager of the new theatre.

Prince Lingworm, The Lad in the Bearskin, The King of Arabia's Daughter, The Northwind Goes O'er the Sea and Land in Battle are the myths which are illustrated. The architecture combines Roman and Byzantine and is particularly effective in combination with the wall painting which are developed in the three primary colors. Organ grilles which flank the stage at either side are done in wrought iron in typically medieval style.

The theatre has a seating capacity of 1400. The building which houses it occupies almost all of a block and provides room for several retail stores. The bulding is reinforced concrete with stucco exterior finish. The approximate cost of building and equipping the theatre was $135,000.

The theatre is handsomely furnished with comfortable seats, well equipped restrooms and is carpeted throughout with a thick handsome carpet. Lights are bunched and are so arranged that at no time is there difficulty in finding one's way about.

The operating room is equipped with two big motion picture machines, a double dissolving stereoptican and an array of spotlights so placed that no motion is lost in operation.

Exterior of the Roda Kuarn, or Red Mill, Stockholm, a first run house.

Two New Theatre Projects Under Way in California

Another house for the rapidly growing chain of M. Blumenfeld theatres is nearing completion. This theatre is in San Mateo, Cal.

T. & D. Jr.'s new house on Polk street, San Francisco, has already broken ground preparatory to immediate construction.

Newspaper Opinions on New Features

"Stop Flirting"—Producers Distributing Corp.—Forum, Los Angeles

Los Angeles Examiner: "Not in many years has the screen shown such a comedy as 'Stop Flirting,' now at the Forum. Not, in fact, in about fifteen years. Some of the younger movie fans have probably never seen such a film. It's knock-down, drag-out stuff of the pre-Chaplin era.

"And the funniest thing about it is—it's funny. Early in the picture your better judgment takes the air, your self-respect passes into a coma, and you join in the chorus of guffaws that waxes stronger with every reel.

"It may not be edifying—but neither is a ride on the Jack Rabbit at Ocean Park. They both have entertainment value of their kind, and it's about the same kind. 'Stop Flirting' is drawing capacity audiences, and pleasing them mightily.

"It may fairly be called a comedy hit—everybody gets hit with something, and some get hit with everything. And it cannot be called a flop, even though they all take turns flopping on their dorsal vertebrae and going on backwards to complete the spinal circuit."

"Don Q, Son of Zorro"—United Artists, Globe, New York

Times: "'Don Q, Son of Zorro,' is just as full of new ideas as the average Fairbanks effort. With a whip for a weapon he stirred an audience to many an outburst of genuine merriment and at the end there was a peal of applause. It is a swift picture with plenty of pleasing surprises and action. It has an ideal part for Mr. Fairbanks. This is a photoplay which creates no end of mirth and sustains the interest all through. It probably will prove to be a far more satisfactory box office asset than 'The Thief of Bagdad.'"

Herald-Tribune: "The sets and the settings are magnificent, and thephotography is beautiful. Never for a moment does the picture seem too long, so we know that all of it must have been interesting. Where one enemy was slain in previous Fairbanks pictures, ten are slain in 'Don Q.' It is a bigger and better picture. Don't miss it."

World: "It is as winning and exuberant a Douglas Fairbanks as you ever have seen that cracks the whip in 'Don Q.' Of the star it is likely that almost everyone will approve. Douglas Fairbanks never made a scene sitting down in his life, and probably no picture which he ever has made has found him more actively engaged with the business at hand."

American: "'Don Q, Son of Zorro,' with Douglas Fairbanks dashing light-heartedly through the title role, not only has all the charm of his former productions but several added delights all its own. If you want to forget your every-day worries, or lose yourself in the gallantries of another age, or just gain enough courage to talk back to a traffic cop, don't miss it. It is the finest tale of adventure that has ever been screened."

Telegraph: "Douglas Fairbanks in 'Don Q, Son of Zorro' provides, first and last, a picture of supreme entertainment, and just about as perfect a production as any the writer has seen. There isn't a doubt of its box-office possibilities and for sheer entertainment, scenic beauty and general interest it is far above the average."

Daily News: "'Don Q, Son of Zorro,' besides being a perfect example of showmanship, is the best picture Douglas Fairbanks ever made. The picture has dash, charm, and an abundance of bubbling wit. It is a movie for everybody from seven to seventy, and there are no rules to keep away under or over that mark."

Mirror: "'Don Q, Son of Zorro' is Douglas Fairbanks' greatest production, and we do not slight 'Robin Hood' or any of his previous brilliant productions in saying this—but it stands in a glorious class, all by itself, as the most marvelous melodrama ever produced. It is a screen masterpiece. It shows a wealth of effort and of thought. It is rich in color and meteoric in its speedy development. The sets are superb."

Evening World: "Douglas Fairbanks has hit the bulls-eye again. In 'Don Q, Son of Zorro,' he exhibited a feature every bit as good as 'The Thief of Bagdad,' although the two productions are as dissimilar as it would be possible to make them. In 'The Thief' he showed what could be done with fantasy, while here he revels in gripping melodrama. 'Don Q' is only going to be on Broadway for eight weeks, but probably by that time everybody who believes in good movies will have an opportunity to see it. Don't miss it."

Post: "The appearance of a new Douglas Fairbanks picture is always an event, and the premiere at the Globe theatre seemed more of an event than usual because 'Don Q, Son of Zorro' is one of the most entertaining films that has ever emerged from the Fairbanks studio. Those who saw and thrilled at 'The Mark of Zorro' some years ago have the same sort of treat in store for them, considerably magnified in proportion."

Sun: "Swift, exciting, good humored and picturesque—that string of adjectives describes 'Don Q, Son of Zorro,' the latest effort of the bouncing Douglas Fairbanks which aroused honest and resounding palm pounding. All parties who had a finger in the picture have done first rate work, and there is no reason why 'Don Q, Son of Zorro' cannot style itself the best motion picture melodrama of 1925—as, forsooth, it is."

Journal: "'Don Q, Son of Zorro' is dramatic, dashing and decidedly well worth seeing. Fairbanks is absolutely perfect in his role. Fairbanks makes his fans wait a whole year for his picture appearances—but, believe me, this one was worth waiting for. 'Don Q,' is the best picture he has ever made, from the standpoint of sheer entertainment."

Telegram: "Douglas Fairbanks is up to his old tricks again—and a power of new ones. In 'Don Q, Son of Zorro' he achieves the greatest triumph of his career with a picture that is as fast as a streak of lightning and much more certain in the way it always hits the mark for which it seems destined."
